Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McGinty had an exciting experience Sunday morning that might have ended in serious consequences, but from which they both escaped without a scratch. Mr. McGinty had hitched a single horse to the buggy preparing to drive to church. Mrs. McGinty and little daughter had just gotten into the rig when the animal reared and plunged, knocking Mr. McGinty into a mud puddle, and starting out at a breakneck speed, turned at Lefaive's, clearing the sidewalk and landing in the garden. The strain on the harness was too much and it broke loose from the buggy, thus freeing the animal. Mrs. McGinty and the child, after the brief but exciting and dangerous experience, were unharmed. Mr. McGinty found it necessary in view of his mud bath, to change his outfit of clothes.

STOP A STRIKE BEFORE IT BEGINS

By RALPH M. EASLEY,
Organizer of the National Civic Federation

THE object of the industrial department of the National Civic federation is to seek to reduce to a minimum industrial disturbances in this country. This department was organized at a national conference on conciliation and arbitration held in Chicago in December, 1900, under the auspices of the National Civic federation, and was attended by some 200 large employers, labor leaders and men representing the general public. AT THIS MEETING A PROMINENT IDEA WAS THAT ORGANIZED LABOR IS NOW A PERMANENT SOCIAL FORCE IN THIS COUNTRY AND THAT ANY ATTEMPT TO CRUSH IT OUT WOULD PROVE AS FUTILE AS AN ATTEMPT TO CRUSH OUT ORGANIZED CAPITAL; that both come through natural evolutionary processes and that both can be made to serve society as a whole.

If the United States is to maintain its commercial supremacy, it must not be handicapped in the race by industrial disturbances at home, but rather capital and labor must work together to produce the cheapest and the best. To bring together in a joint movement large employers and the representatives of labor and leaders of public thought in the hope of hastening the day when such mutuality of interest may be established and when conciliation and arbitration will take the place of strikes and lockouts is the one great object and purpose of this department.

The means will be largely educational, such as joint conferences where representatives of labor and capital will discuss face to face the many questions that now divide them, the publishing and distribution of pamphlets and other printed matter relating to and explanatory of the work, the appointment of a permanent committee on conciliation to use its good offices before a strike occurs and to use every effort to restore harmonious relations where a rupture has occurred, the organization of local affiliated bodies in large industrial centers composed on the same general lines as the national department, which will not only act in case of local disturbances, but will serve as a medium through which the national committee may reach the rank and file of the men in the factories, shops and mines, and, last, but not least, the many thousand employers who also need educating.

BEFORE A STRIKE HAPPENS IS CERTAINLY THE TIME WHEN AN "OUNCE OF PREVENTION IS WORTH A POUND OF CURE."

After a strike is once on it is very difficult for outside parties, however well disposed, to be accepted as mediators by both sides. The side that thinks it is winning invariably resents any overtures from a peace committee. About the only time when an arbitration committee is welcomed by both parties is when both parties are uncertain as to the outcome.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 10, 1902.

Matt J. Johnson Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Gentlemen:—In April, 1901, I had an attack of muscular rheumatism and by the 1st of May was unable to attend to my business. The attending physician said it would be at least nine weeks before I would recover. Your 6088 being recommended to me I took one bottle and in ten days I was able to attend to my work, and the rheumatism had entirely disappeared. I gladly recommend it to anyone suffering with rheumatism.

Yours truly,
E. O. BATTLES,

FIX FREIGHT RATES

MEETING OF TRAFFIC OFFICIALS AT ST. PAUL AGREES ON A TARIFF FOR 1902.

Three St. Cloud Prisoners Escape but Are Recaptured—Duluth Man Convicted of Murder in the Second Degree—Carload of Stolen Property Seized by St. Paul Police—News of the State in General.

St. Paul, March 20.—One of the most important freight meetings from a Northwestern standpoint this season has just completed its session. At this meeting lake and rail rates on exports and domestic flour and products incidental thereto were determined upon. The flour rate was cut 3 cents from the tariff in effect when the season of 1901 opened.

This season the lake and rail rate on domestic flour will be 22 cents to the seaboard and 19½ cents on the export business. These rates are 3 cents under the agreed all-rail rate, the recognized differential allowed the lake carriers. These new tariffs will take effect on April 1.

PRISONERS ESCAPE.

Three Reformatory Inmates Tunnel to Freedom.

St. Cloud, Minn., March 22.—Three inmates of the state reformatory escaped between 4 and 5 p. m. The men were unloading coal from a box car in the northwest corner of the stockade. They dug a hole under the stockade with their shovels, and as they were out of range of the guards on the wall, made their escape unnoticed.

They are supposed to have gone northeast into Benton county. The bloodhounds kept at the institution to trail escaped inmates were put on their trail, and officers are confident of their capture. This is the first escape this year.

The prisoners were overtaken by the guards two days later and submitted to arrest.

KARVO CONVICTED.

Found Guilty of Murder in the Second Degree at Duluth.

Duluth, March 22.—Stens Karvo has been found guilty of murder in the second degree for killing Jacob Millymaeki Jan. 10. Karvo is a Finlander and his crime was a brutal one. Millymaeki was standing at a bar in a saloon with some friends when Karvo came in. Going over to Millymaeki he struck a terrible blow at his neck with a knife, and before he could be pulled away had almost severed his victim's head from the body.

Karvo has since given indications of insanity, and that was the basis of his defense. No motive was developed by the prosecution. The penalty under second degree murder is life imprisonment.

CHOICE MISCELLANY

Maximite Safe to Handle.

Hudson Maxim, the inventor of maximite, which has been adopted by the United States government, says his explosive has satisfactorily stood every test to which it has been subjected. It is very inexpensive of manufacture, has a fusion point below the temperature of boiling water, cannot be exploded from ignition and indeed cannot be heated hot enough to explode, for it will boil away like water without exploding. It is therefore perfectly safe to melt over an open fire for filling projectiles in the same manner that asphalt is melted in a street caldron. Should the material by any chance catch fire it would simply burn away like asphalt without exploding. When cast into shells, it not only solidifies into a dense, hard, incompressible mass on cooling, but it expands and sets hard upon the walls of the projectile, like sulphur—that is to say, it expands in the same way as water does in freezing. When a shell filled with it strikes armor plate, the maximite does not shift a particle, and it is so insensitive that it does not only stand the shock of penetration of the thickest of armor plate which the shell itself can go through, but will not explode even if the projectile breaks up on the plate."

What Makes the Balls Roll?

There's a Broadway merchant whose ingenuity is daily tickling thousands. He is a dealer in a certain article much advertised of late In front of his window—it is a generous, wide open affair of the clearest plate glass—he has placed an odd arrangement something like a giant washbasin or, again, a miniature cockpit, if you are acquainted with the peculiarities of that device.

Around the edges of the basin extends a path exactly like a little race track. On this track are constantly motion four small spheres about the size of tennis balls. They circle that track from right to left, and there is no one of the curious spectators who has been able to say how they get their motion. In the center of the bowl is one of the articles sold by the merchant, and on it is this placard:

"What makes the balls go round? This is a difficult problem. But a far more difficult problem to solve is this one: How is it possible for a man to succeed in business unless he uses one of my patent contrivances?"—New York Herald.

"Shooting the Hat."

"Shooting the hat" is a recognized festal occasion in New Orleans, the hat shot being the straw and the time being the date when in the general opinion summer has ended. This year an early Sunday in October was chosen as the date beyond which straw hats must no longer be worn. Ample notice was given in the papers, and any straw hats worn anywhere in the city on that day were even more liable to destruction than is tabooed headwear on the Stock Exchange. Resistance is seldom made to the despoilers, and when it is the police act leniently. At two or more chosen places in the city the hat is actually shot. Boys gather the old straws into a great pile, which is blown to pieces by the explosion of bombs. At this year's celebration two persons were injured by the bombs.

IT LACKED NOVELTY

A COLLECTION OF HEIRLOOMS THAT WEARIED AN OBSERVER.

The System of Renting Out Family Glory and Supplying Ancestral Trappings at So Much Per Hour Has Its Drawbacks.

Two guests were being shown through a Philadelphia mansion in which a nouveau riche broker was entertaining a party of fashionable friends. The splendid array of family heirlooms, all bespeaking a lineage of earliest colonial origin, deeply impressed one of the party. He was a stranger but lately arrived from Baltimore. Oddly enough, his companion, a Philadelphian, seemed flippantly indifferent to these treasured relics of a family's honored history.

"Remarkable collection of heirlooms our host has," remarked the stranger as he stopped before a battle scarred sword of Revolutionary days.

"Yes," drawled the Philadelphian cynically, "very interesting. But unfortunately it lacks the charm of novelty for me. Already this season I've seen the same batch of relics in three other Philadelphia houses."

"How could that be?"

"Oh, simple enough. It only means that all four families, our host and the three others I refer to, hired their ancestral trappings from the same man."

"Hired them?"

"Yes, hired them. We have in this city an enterprising collector of colonial junk who makes a business of renting out family glory to all who were unfortunate enough to be born without it."

"Whew!" was the only comment the astonished Baltimorean could utter.

And doubtless many Philadelphians would be moved to say "Whew!" if they could learn how many members of the Quaker City social elect are constrained to seek the assistance of the heirloom dealer when they wish to give a brilliant function.

It is a deception that is forced upon them, for unless you have distinguished appearing forbears you stand little chance of penetrating the sacred precincts of the local fashionable set.

Ancestry, not cash, is the open sesame, and even if a man can claim some sort of a family tree his pretensions are questioned unless he can show some of the furniture or portraits that his American forefather brought with him on the Mayflower or the Welcome.

Of course if the two vessels named had been as large as the Great Eastern and had been loaded with nothing but heirlooms they couldn't have carried half the stock needed to launch the descendants of Pilgrim fathers into society. Hence the need of an heirloom dealer.

He has his warerooms in Pine street, in a part of the city which was once the center of fashion, but is now deserted by that element in consequence of the westward movement of the city's elect.

Ostensibly he is a curio dealer, but his revenue is mainly derived from furnishing and hanging the walls of fashionable dwellings with century old portraits.

This clever manipulator of men's vanities has ancient, straight backed furniture and copper kettles and snuffers for candles and bullseye watches and similar relics of ancient grandeur, all at your disposal for a night, when you, poor fellow, with money, but no ancestors, want your friends to know what an old family yours is! He also has rare furnishings for libraries and drawing rooms which you may rent if you have the price.

It matters not from what part of the country the applicant hails or what particular descent he wishes to claim, his needs are promptly filled.

For those who wish to pose as lineal descendants of the staunch old colonial patriots who fought the stamp tax and defied the power of King George at Bunker Hill and drew up the Declaration there is especially attractive stock.

For the haughty cavalier who "came over" with Lord Delaware there are costumes and furniture and portraits of more elaborate style, as befits the past of emigrants who in England basked in the favor of the king and were participants in brilliant court ceremonials.

The Quaker City allegiance to the honored memory of William Penn is a sentiment that the curio dealer has been careful to cherish.

On his walls he has portraits of studious looking Quakers. On his shelves are modest Quaker clocks that did service in the days when the founder was exchanging thirty blankets for Philadelphia.

There are Quaker walking sticks, tinder boxes, documents on all subjects, household utensils a legion.

It is true that this system of supplying ancestors has its disadvantages. Contretemps such as the one revealed at the beginning of this article are bound to occur. The hawklike eye of a connoisseur, trained to recognize instantly the value, authenticity and history of antiques, often pierces the deception and remembers seeing the "treasured family heirlooms" somewhere else. But in the main people are gullible, and the wealthy but plebeian aspirant for social honors vaunts the blueness of his blood and points with pride to his hired heirlooms without much danger of discovery.

And meanwhile the crafty Pine street dealer smiles, waxes rich and echoes a celebrated remark of Puck's regarding the average intelligence of mortals.—Philadelphia North American.

The Hen's Plaint.

"What's the matter?" asked the rooster. "More absentmindedness?"

"Yes," replied the hen. "I can never find things where I lay them."—Philadelphia Record.

HOMESTEAD LAWS.

A FEW POINTS FOR THOSE CONTEMPLATING FILING.

LAW ON APPLICATIONS, RELINQUISHMENTS AND FINAL PROOFS.

The third section of the act of March 2, 1889, provides for a permission to be granted in certain cases by the Register and Receiver of the proper district land office for parties claiming public land as settlers under existing laws to leave and be absent from the land settled upon for a specified period, not to exceed one year at any one time. The applicant for such permission will be required to submit testimony to consist of his own affidavit, corroborated by the affidavits of disinterested witnesses, executed before the Register or Receiver or some U. S. Commissioner or other officer, setting forth in detail the facts on which he relies to support his application, and which must be sufficient to satisfy the Register and Receiver who are enjoined to exercise their best and most careful judgment in the matter that he is unable by reason of total or partial destruction or failure of crop, sickness or other unavoidable casualty to secure a support for himself or others dependant upon him on the land settled upon. In case a leave of absence is granted the Register and Receiver will enter such action on their records, indicating the period for which granted. In case of refusal the applicant will be allowed the right of appeal.

There is no law granting anyone an extension of time within which to establish residence upon their land, and it is useless for persons to make application to the Land Office for an extension of time beyond the statutory period in which they are required to establish actual bona fide residence upon the land embraced in their homestead entry; for the same cannot be granted. He must, within six months after making his entry, establish his actual residence in a house upon the land. Occasional visits to the land once in six months or oftener do not constitute residence. The homestead party must actually inhabit the land and make it the home of himself and family, as well as improve and cultivate it.

Homesteaders disappointed in the quality of their land and unable to make a living on same or who have made mistake or error in the description of land may if they have acted in good faith, make second entry or an amendment as the case may be. These are not encouraged by the land offices and the services of a competent attorney should be secured in order to make proper showing as the application and procedure is very technical.

Contests can be initiated by any person against any entry of government land, when the laws have not been complied with, and the contestant, if successful, is given a preference right of filing on same for 30 days.

In contests initiated by affidavit, the affidavit should be corroborated by preferably two witnesses. When service is had by publication, the posting of a copy of notice on the land, and mailing (by registered letter) a copy to contestee, to his last known address, are absolutely essential, as to also proof of both, and this is the duty of the parties or their attorneys, not of the land officers.

Where a party desires to file a protest against an entry on the day of proof, it is the duty of the officer taking the proof to take down the protestant's testimony and that of his witnesses, and to transmit the same with the proof to the local land office. The party protesting must pay the cost of reducing the evidence of himself and witnesses into writing.

Needless expense and delay is caused homesteaders and strangers by not consulting reputable attorneys who are trustworthy. A cheap attorney is the curse of a homesteader.

Public land scrip is the general name given to the various rights, warrants, certificates, etc., granted divers persons by act of Congress and which are assignable. In such cases the buyer or assignee can locate same on vacant government land at once and get title without making any residence or cultivation. Particulars can be obtained from any attorney dealing in same.

There are a number of other entries of government lands, such as coal, timber and stone, desert land, reservoirs, townsite, etc.

Coal entries to the extent of 160 acres can be made by paying for same at $20 per acre if within fifteen miles of a railroad and $10 per acre if outside, or a declaratory statement can be made and filed and the payment made at the end of one year.

Timber and stone land can be purchased on application and proof duly made showing that the land is more valuable for its timber and stone.

North and South Road.

It is asserted by people from out east that with the opening of spring, work will undoubtedly commence on the construction of the road to be built by the Continental Railroad company of Iowa, from the Red Lake country south through Iowa to Kansas City.

The company expects to tap the iron and coal business from east of Red Lake and also to handle considerable granite from the country around the terminus at Red Lake. The line will start at a point on the lower side of Red Lake and will run south through Beltrami county, touching points near Park Rapids and Wadena, south through Todd and Blue Earth counties, and branching at the southern boundary of the state into two lines, one going through Kossuth county to Kansas City and the other touching Iowa points, going south through Winnebago county.

The company is backed by reputable business men of Iowa and in a few years the line will probably be one of the important shore lines of the state.

INDIAN LAND AGENTS.

Grandson of Sitting Bull a Red Lake Locater.

Those who were at the Great Northern depot this morning as the Duluth train came in, could not fail to have noticed the gentleman whose tall athletic form, long hair and stately tread proclaimed his near relationship to the Red man, and brought to mind the heroes of Cooper's stories.

This was John Sitting Bull, grandson of the famous Sioux chief of that name. He was accompanied by Chas. Brunelle of the White earth reservation. The two gentlemen are on their way to the Red Lake lands which are to be opened soon, with the purpose of looking over the land so they may be better qualified for the business of land agents and locators, which they intend starting in that district as soon as the land is put on the market. This is not the first visit of either gentleman to this part of the state. Mr. Sitting Bull's home is still at Standing Rock, where his grand-father spent so much of his eventful life.—Crookston Journal.

CANADIAN NORTHERN

GIVES ROSEAU COUNTY PEOPLE HOPES FOR EXTENSION THIS SUMMER.

The Canadian Northern has given substantial assurance to residents of the northern counties that next summer it will extend its lines from Warroad south and west to connect with the Northern coast lines.

A delegation from Roseau and adjoining counties has returned from conference at Winnipeg with the management of the road. The desirability of giving to the northern tier of Northwestern counties better facilities and the opportunity to develop an important wheat traffic was pointed out. It was argued that with the Canadian line completed to Port Arthur, a heavy volume of traffic may easily be obtained, which otherwise will soon go wholly to the northern coast lines.

It is understood that the Canadian line will build from Warroad southwest through Roseau county, thence either south and west again to Thief River Falls or to some point on the St. Vincent line of the Great Northern. Marshall and Kittson counties favor the latter route.

Surveys have already been made. The new line will be made a part of the southeastern section, which now extends 154 miles from Winnipeg to Beaudette, thirty-six miles east of Warroad.

The delegation that visited Winnipeg received no information showing when construction would be commenced, but were given to understand that a portion of the route would be constructed, if not the entire section, before snow flies.

MOH-SI-MO'S LAND

AN ABORIGINAL LAW SUIT INVOLVING MANY FINE POINTS.

DECENDANTS OF CHIEF MOH-SI-MO SCRAPPING OVER INHERITANCE.

The Indian descendants of old Moh-si-mo, the Chippewa chief, are contending over the inheritance, which is 653 acres of land in and around Thief River Falls, valued at $50,000.

The case will be partially settled by the supreme court May 15, Kellog & Severence of St. Paul represent young Moh-si-mo, who has posed as the sole heir, and as such sold the property to Ezra Esbelby and James Meehan. Halvor Steenerson of Crookston represents five other heirs, who claim equal title in the property.

The history of this property dates from 1863, when the Chippewas ceded their country along the Red River Valley to the United States. Old Moh-si-mo and Red Bear made trouble and to appease them the government deeded to each a tract of land. Moh-si-mo got the tract at the mouth of Thief river, while to Red Bear was given land at the mouth of the Pembina. Old Moh-si-mo died not long after and his grandson, young Moh-si-mo assumed ownership of the whole property. He leased mill rights to the Meehan Bros. at Thief River Falls Ray Jones, the well known lumberman, wanted the site, and got a ruling from the Indian department to the effect that Moh-si-mo was a tribal Indian and had no legal right to make the lease. An act of Congress gave the privilege to him. The Meehhans fought the case, and the supreme court of the United States decided that the land was deeded to Moh-si-mo in fee and that he therefore had the rights of a citizen. It also expressed the opinion that under Indian law young Moh-si-mo was the sole heir to the real estate, as the principle of premogeniture prevails among the Indians with regard to land. On this ruling young Moh-si-mo took the land and sold it.

The other five heirs contested the claim, and Halvor Steenerson brought an action in ejectment on their behalf. Two of them are daughters of old Moh-si-mo. Bem-way-ben-ness is a grandson, and his father was oldest son of old Moh-si-mo, being killed in a war with the Sioux. Another grandson and a grand daughter are joined in the suit. Attorneys for young Moh-si-mo secured a writ of prohibition from Chief Justice Start, preventing the district court from hearing the suit on the grounds that the parties to it are wards of the federal government. The argument will be upon this writ of prohibition. Mr. Steenerson contends that as heirs to the old chief, to whom the land was deeded as a citizen, all the parties have rights in court. He also contends that no primogeniture prevails among the Indians with respect to land, as their ownership of the land was always common.

BAND DID WELL

CONCERT AND BALL MONDAY NIGHT A FINANCIAL AND SOCIAL SUCCESS.

The band concert on Monday evening was a grand success in every way. The music rendered was of the highest class and the band proved itself capable of mastering it. Never before have our citizens been able to hear music of that order rendered by a local band. Selections from grand opera, opera waltzes and ragtime pieces composed the program.

It is very evident that what money is spent for the support of a band leader is not thrown away and Prof. Frick is to be congratulated on the success which his work of four months has accomplished.

The concert opened with the march, "Red, White and Blue." Next in order was an operatic selection of Potpourri, containing thirty airs from noted operas. This was followed by two other overtures of the same order and the concert closed with the waltz "Calanthe."

After the concert a dance was given, a large amount of the music being furnished by the band, and the balance by Prof. Frick's Orchestra. At 11:30 Thos. Germo thanked the citizens in the name of the City Band.

Supper was served in the hall by the Junior class of the High School and they netted about $30.

The band receipts amounted to about $120 and their net proceeds will be about $75. We all hope that we will hear more such concerts both in open air and in the Opera house, and all should lend a helping hand to the band as a good band is one of the best advertisements a city can have.

SPLENDID PROGRAM

BEAUTIFUL EASTER SERVICES AT THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Sunday evening the Presbyterian Sunday School rendered a program appropriate to Easter. Miss Rachel Taylor read an excellent paper on the life of Christ, Miss Bessie Hunt, a paper on foreign missions, and Miss Eleanor Findeisen gave a recitation entitled "The Sculptured Christ." Songs by some of the classes were also rendered between readings and the Young People's Choir sang several pieces. After the song service, Rev. Walker made a few announcements and then introduced R. H. Abraham, who spoke a few congratulatory words to the school on its growth since the time he was superintendent in 1882. Dr. John Watson who was also present delivered a splendid address, and advised the congregation to move the church.

Equal Partners

"Equal Partners," by Howard Fielding, will be our next serial. This is a story of mystery. The interest aroused in the first chapter is admirably sustained to the end. A beautiful actress is found in her room in New York dangerously stabbed, with one chance in a million for her life. Who stabbed her? The reader forms opinions to quickly abandon them as the story rapidly unfolds. The identity of the criminal is so skillfully veiled that it is not discovered until the end. Our readers who are good at solving mysteries in stories will find something worthy of their powers in "EQUAL PARTNERS." Don't miss the first chapter.

WHICH?

Aninee sent for me, and I responded at once.

"What's the matter?"

"Well," she said, with a rush, "I have had four proposals this week."

"That seems a good record. I don't see anything to complain of. I suppose you want my advice as to which to accept?"

"First, there's Jack Forde. We were brought up together, you know." A telltale flush spread over her face. "She cares for him really," I decided. "Well; when one's with Jack one does like him dreadfully. He is so young and high spirited and devoted, I think."

"Next, please."

"Then there's Walter Fielding."

"Don't know him."

"No!" She gave a little sigh. My surmise about Jack must have been wrong. "Well, he paints the most lovely pictures in the world, and I am so happy when I am in his studio. I think I should love to marry a painter. Painters are not conventional, you know, and he thinks I have got pretty feet. It's only the shoe, really. But I do care for him. He's"—

"Proceed, Miss Aninee," I urged. "I, too, have remarked the feet."

"Ah, that's nice of you! Well, Julian Clifford!"

"He's fifty!"

"I know, but he loves me so! He loves me more than all the others put together. And he seems to consider it such an honor that I should care for him, and I can't tell you how wonderful that is to a woman. He has such beautiful gray eyes, too, and he never takes one for granted. I think I love him rather desperately."

"Go on."

A dreamy look crept into her eyes. She hesitated, then gave a little, short, quick laugh.

"This is the one, after all," thought I.

"It's Reginald Mason."

"That prig!"

"Oh, how you're down upon him because he's much cleverer than most of you! There's something in him that fascinates me oddly. He's different from any one else in the world and so witty. Then at the most unexpected moments one catches a note of pathos in his tone, something of a latent sadness which makes one feel one would do anything in the world just to make him happier."

"I congratulate you, Miss Aninee," I said, rising. "Only, which is it to be, because I haven't in the least guessed, as you say they are all so charming?"

"That's the difficulty. I like them all in so totally different a way. You see, there are three kinds of men with regard to matrimony—the man one knows at once one would marry and love forever, the man one thinks one might love and the man one simply couldn't anyhow. Now, unfortunately, my four fiances all come under the second heading."

"Has no one ever come under the first?"

She looked at me for several moments, considering. Then she laughed. "Why, yes, only they never liked me."

"That's a great difficulty, of course, though I should have thought"— Here some afternoon callers sailed into the room, and for some moments we were separated. She came back to me, however, on the appearance of her sister and murmured:

"Do, do suggest something!"

"Give me a week," I said.

"So long?"

"A week!" I repeated, and we said goodby. I met Julian Clifford on the stairs. He was certainly very good looking.

The week duly elapsed, and I heard again from Aninee. "Things much worse," she wrote: "four letters every morning of entreaties for a definite answer; four bouquets every evening. I can't bear it any longer. Tell me, for pity's sake, what to do. They are all awfully kind."

"Dear Miss Aninee," I answered, "I am extremely busy, but meet me tomorrow at the corner of M—— street at 12 o'clock. I have thought of a good plan, only you must have courage; otherwise I cannot help you."

She was there ten minutes late.

"How absurd of you to make me come here!" she said. "And how pale you look, and so smart!"

"Miss Aninee," said I—my voice was slightly trembling—"you see that house?"

"Yes," said she, "but what"—

"That's a justice of the peace's office."

"Oh, dear! Is any of them about? 'Cause I really can't. It's awfully good of you, but I really can't—not even Walter Fielding. And I do care"—

"None of them is about," I said.

"Well?"

I paused a moment. She looked up, a little frightened. "Will you marry me?"

"Dison!"

"Will you marry me now?"

"But, Dison"—

We crossed the road.

"Now!"

"I think you are very unkind. I like a proper wedding with bridesmaids."

"You shall have that after." We were at the door. She turned suddenly white and walked in, with her little head very erect. When we came out—I don't think I have ever seen anything quite so lovely as she looked—she said, "Dison, you came under the first heading." I put her in a cab, and she drove home alone. Three weeks later we were married at St. George's. They were all there.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hertford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, "but," he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1½ boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was sound and well as ever." For Eruptions, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them. W. A. Schreiter will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

QUICK RELIEF FROM PAIN.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sinks, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Sometime ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and Shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

BRAY.

We are having very muddy roads.

The debate in the school house Monday night was not as well attended as usual on account of the muddy roads. The subject "resolved that women should have the right of voting for any officers in the United States" was well handled. The negative side won the game. This was the last debate for this spring, as people are getting busier.

"HELP!"

By C. E. Corbet.

One bright morning last May a man stopped before an ordinary looking brick house in a certain bustling western city and indicated by his attitude and expression that he was listening. His persistence attracted the attention of the drug clerk down the street, who in the absence of customers was enjoying a smoke on the sidewalk under the awning, so he joined him and also began to listen. The laundryman who came to deliver a package next door sat in his wagon and eyed them silently and ruminatingly for awhile and then came over and inquired what was doing. This small group was gradually increased by the addition of the Weary Willie from down on the corner, the cook from across the street, several chance pedestrians and numerous small boys who were all ears and mouth.

"There's some trouble in here," explained the first individual, to whom everybody looked for enlightenment. "I distinctly heard cries for help, but I hesitate to interfere unless it is really something serious. There! Hear that? It seems to come from up stairs." And all eyes were immediately directed to the second story.

Then borne distinctly on the clear air could be heard the agonized cry: "O gods! Stay, Zoe, stay! What hast thou done?" This was followed by sharp tones of remonstrance, then the low mutterings of two voices and, finally silence. The cook looked at the laundryman and nodded her head solemnly.

"The auld spalpeen do be gettin' his deserts," said she. "Many's the time I've heard him a-jawin' of that poor little woman, but Zoe seems to be havin' the upper hand now."

Meanwhile in the front room up stairs, entirely unconscious of the interested group below, so absorbed was he in the delightful mysteries of the histrionic art, there stood a perspiring young man with wild eyes and rumpled hair. Opposite him, reclining in the easy chair, his faded velvet coat plentifully besprinkled with cigarette ashes, sat the professional who listened to the wild paroxysms of passion uttered by the youth with perfect indifference and apparently not the slightest interest. Occasionally he would turn his languid eyes upon the agitated countenance and despairing gestures and remark: "A little more feeling there, my boy; excentro excentric attitude of feet and more agony in your voice and face." Thereupon his words and action would be repeated again and again until the critic, roused by his tameness, would jump to his feet and, throwing back his long hair, give the passage with all the fire and extravagance of a true son of Thespis.

But while this process of inspiring dull clay with Promethean fire was going on matters were growing serious down in the street. As over and over again the cry was heard even the cook began to think that perhaps Zoe was a little too severe on her liege lord and that her determined attempts to avenge past wrongs might end disastrously for the belabored party. But the small boy was in his element. There was trouble in the air, and he saw visions of a quick rush of the patrol wagon loaded with bluecoats, for an animated discussion was in progress between the original discoverer and the laundryman as to whether an officer should be called or not. The Willie listened suspiciously and furtively to the development of this plan. The cook turned around completely and was loud in her denunciations of "the hussy" up stairs who was "murthuring her auld man," and the clerk smiled complacently to himself in anticipation of a rush order for drugs and restoratives. Suddenly came in thundering tones:

"O gods! Stay, Zoe, stay! What hast thou done? Help! Help! She dies! O jailer, she is gone!"

They looked at each other for an instant. Their worst fears were realized. It was murder and suicide together. The original discoverer sprang toward the front steps, and the laundryman made a bound for a policeman, whereat the Weary Willie shambled unsteadily and hastily round the corner, and the small boy, utterly unmindful and regardless of the tragedy before him, shrieked: "Hi there, Zoe! You're all right. Give him another, Zoe."

But before any of them had gone three steps a fat youth bearing the letters A. D. T. on his cap, who in his leisurely progress down the street had stopped just in time to hear the last cry, called out: "Here, you guys! What's the matter with you? Don't any of you know anything about the dramatic art? That ain't no murder nor nothin'. It's one of them fellows what's learnin' to chase up and down the stage and rescue a girl from a burnin' buildin' and play the whole thing all the time. Huh! You don't know much."

The Weary Willie went on down to the corner, the drug clerk ambled back to his cigar in the shade, whistling nonchalantly, the laundryman drove off without a word, the cook went home and slammed the door, the original discoverer boarded a passing car, and when the bluecoat hove in sight there was nothing more unusual to be seen or heard than a telegraph boy sitting on the stump of a tree whittling a piece of wood.—Chicago Record-Herald.

TO PROTECT THE PRESIDENT.

The bill to protect the president and to punish the diabolical assaults of anarchists that has passed the senate is right in principle, but it contains one section that should be struck out in the house. It is proper and necessary that the murder of a president or other high official should be punishable whether aimed at our chief magistrate or that of some friendly nation and that accomplices should be held as guilty as principals. The criticism on this point is to be aimed not at the terms of the proposed law, but at the absence of such legislation on our statute books. Its enactment will provide a needed national protection and remove a standing national reproach.

It is strange, however, that the senate should have combined with this the absurd and un-American provision of a military guard for the president of the United States; and this ought to be rejected by the house as it is by the common sense of the people. A military guard is repugnant to the ideas and institutions of this country. It savors of imperialism and monarchy. The purpose of such a guard and its only efficacy lies in protecting the individual whom it surrounds from the attacks of an infuriated populace. Such a contingency cannot be conceived of here; and the military guard would be but a vain show, against whose following no one would protest more vigorously than the president himself.

It ought be and must be evident to those who favor this measure that it is wholly futile as a protection against anarchists or other murderers. Three presidents have been struck down by assassins. What good would a military guard have done in any of these cases? Would it have surrounded the box in Ford's theatre, and saved the life of Lincoln? Conceivably it might have accompanied Garfield to the railroad station, but would it have formed a cordon about him at the place where he fell? Or how could it have fended the blow of murder from McKinley when he was grasping offered hands at a reception?

The mere statement of the case is sufficient. The military guard could be a protection only where no protection is needed except such as can be given much more satisfactorily by a private detective force. Against the anarchist, the man who bides his time, the man who has deliberately resolved in advance to trade his own life for that of his selected victim, no guard could be worth a farthing to the president unless it formed an armed circle about him, and admitted no one to closer approach with him at any hour, waking or sleeping. It could be nothing but an empty farce, and one highly offensive to the national feeling. Therefore it ought not to be sanctioned in a bill whose other provisions are both necessary and wise.

Street's opposition to Van Sant's policy will do him no good.

The Gazette would hate to trade Dunn for Jacobson. But there's no danger.

The latest report of the British loss in South Africa since the war began reaches a total of 89,196 men.

All opposition within the Republican party to Van Sant is said to have vanished. Fifteen months as governor have germinated the seeds of greatness which he had sown long since.

Life Insurance for Young Married Men an Obligation.

By EDWARD BOK, Editor Ladies' Home Journal.

The final essential I would urge upon a young man just entering married life is the importance of insuring his life for the benefit of his wife. No matter how considerate a husband may be of his wife when he is at her side and able to provide for her, he cannot afford to lose sight of the future. I know it is not easy, nor perhaps is it natural, for a young man just entering the state of married life to think, at its very outset, of its earthly dissolution. But, nevertheless, all the elements of love, consideration and foresight come in to make this step the wisest one which a young man can take. Making provision for the future of those we love is one of the highest things we are capable of doing in this world. It is the ordinary and not the wise man who simply thinks of the present. But we are a bit larger and wiser when with the present we think of the future that lies beyond. Many a woman has been lovingly cared for by her husband while he was with her, only to awaken heart-broken some day with the double grief of the taking away of her husband and the support of herself and her children. Many a woman has gone through tortures of suffering by the lack of fore-sight of a devoted husband—devoted in all save the one thought of what she should do when he was no more.

HELPLESSNESS.

I'm going to tell you a story and if you are anything like the people about me you will laugh immoderately. When you have done I'll give you the moral of the story. Please read the moral as well as the story. I hope it will help you. We all can choose the shoe that fits, you know.

THE STORY.

Farmer Smith was getting ready for dinner. Glancing out of the window he saw Johnny, the seventeen-year old son of Farmer Jones, in a predicament. There stood an empty hay rack, the hay having been dumped off. How it happened no one could tell. Johnny stood as if spell-bound, his eyes fairly bulging out of his head. Farmer Smith went out and when he came within earshot could hear Johnny say: "G-e-e, won't pa be mad! G-e-e, won't pa be mad!" Farmer Smith said encouragingly, "Never mind, Johnny, we'll put up your horses and you come in to dinner. After dinner the boys will help you and it will take only a little while for you to get started on your way." Johnny went in to dinner, but every now and then he'd say to himself, "Gee, won't pa be mad." After dinner good Neighbor Smith and his boys went out to help load the hay. Johnny was more agitated than ever and said again, "G-e-e, but won't pa be mad!" Farmer Smith then spoke up tartly: "Say, Johnny, what ails you; where is your pa, anyway?" Johny answered, "Why, he's under the hay, of course! ! !"

THE MORAL.

Have you done laughing?

The above story seems altogether improbable, does it not?

Yet we are many of us worse than was poor Johnny, when it comes to surmounting difficulties. Especially so when the trouble comes from within. How quick we are to sympathize with a family when we know that the father, perhaps, is given to intemperance or to some other terrible vice.

I am not going to speak of this vice today, for I tell you, my friends, there is many a heavy heart that sighs from other causes, many a tear shed which burns just as deeply as those occasioned by the sin of drunkenness.

Today I want to talk to the sensitive person, and to the creature of moods, and to those of the small kettle order, who boil over in a hurry.

Persons given to either of these three weaknesses always excuse themselves by saying "I cannot help it." It is my nature to have moods, or to be sensitive or to get angry all in a minute. I do try, but when that feeling comes over me it is no use, I cannot help it." My dear friend, did you ever realize that the poor fellow who comes reeling along will tell you exactly the same thing? He can't help it! Do you wish to be classed with such as he?

Johnny of the story probably "could not help it" either, that he was too helpless to get his father from under the hay. If you feel a mood coming on—and I am told they are apt to come when he or she is crossed—go to some secluded spot and ask our Good Father to help you conquor your terrible enemy. As you love your dear ones, over whose lives your weakness throws an ever darkening shadow, pray with all your heart and I'll venture to promise you will conquor. Not all at once, of course, but you must continue the fight. Again I say you expect that poor, reeling fellow to fight his habits, his weakness; when he does not conquor you scorn him. Are you, moody one, you, sensitive one, and you, quick-tempered one, so much better, after all?

We must all strive, and the fact that we are made that way will not excuse us. Within ourselves we have the power to master ourselves.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

My Dear Children,—

How would you like to live in a city where the streets are so narrow that you could almost reach across them by stretching out your arms?

There are many such cities in China, as some of you probably know. Frank G. Carpenter, a traveler and writer, tells of many of his experiences in China. In order to let a carrier by it was necessary for him and his companions to squeeze tightly against the buildings. The carrier had two pails of feed for his domestic animals and as it was very thin, all were in danger of being splashed. I don't wonder people hugged up to the wall, do you?

At night the streets are locked up. When two friends meet, each shakes his own hand as hard as he can. Wouldn't it look funny if we did that? The cities are inclosed with high walls, and these walls are so thick that three carriages could be driven side by side upon them without crowding. The way to ride in China is to sit in a sort of sedan chair and let men called coolies carry you. They work very cheaply and take you anywhere you wish to go. But I'd rather ride in American fashion, wouldn't you? If any of you have a chance to read the letters written by Frank Carpenter you will not be sorry for the time spent.

IS WARD OF STATE

ATTORNEY GENERAL DOUGLAS HOLDS JAMES YOUNGER CANNOT MARRY.

Proposed Railroad From Duluth to Kansas City—Dairy and Food Commission Wins Test Case on Charge of Selling Impure Liquor—Important Changes in Northern Pacific Management—General State News.

St. Paul, March 31.—Life prisoners on parole cannot marry or enter into any civil contract, is the gist of the opinion rendered to Governor Van Sant by Attorney General Douglas.

A life prisoner on parole, the opinion states, is still a ward of the state serving his sentence, and, under the law, is civilly dead. His capacity to enter into contracts is not restored until he receives a full pardon. The life prisoner's full term is not ended until he is dead or pardoned.

No names are mentioned in the opinion, but it refers to the Younger brothers. James Younger asked the governor whether he could marry on parole.

DULUTH TO KANSAS CITY.

Gulf and Manitoba Company to Build Eight Hundred Miles of Road.

Detroit, Mich., March 31.—C. H. Lawrence has returned to Detroit from New York with one of the biggest contracts ever given to a Detroit concern. It is the greatest in point of money involved. The paper binds the International Construction company of Detroit to build 800 miles of railroad extending from Duluth to Kansas City. The total amount of the contract is for $12,195,711.12.

Most of the money to be put into the enterprise is foreign capital, one of the principals to the contract being the Societe Generale Francaise and Belge, the great French Financial concern having its headquarters in Paris and doing business in France and Belgium.

Another party to the contract is the Gulf and Manitoba Railroad company of Iowa, which will probably be the title of the road, the name suggesting that it is the ultimate intention of the promoters to extend their property across the entire United States from north to south.

The road will pass through Minnesota, Iowa and part of Missouri, a branch running to Omaha. Mr. Lawrence said that work on the railroad would begin without delay, the engineers to go into the field this week.

NORTHERN PACIFIC CHANGES.

Hannaford and Cooper Given Higher Positions.

St. Paul, March 27.—Several important changes have been announced in the official staff of the Northern Pacific railway. Third Vice President J. M. Hannaford has been made second vice president in charge of traffic. General Manager W. G. Pierce has resigned, to become vice president and general manager of the Griffin Wheel company, with offices in New York and Chicago. Thomas Cooper, assistant to President Mellen, will come from Tacoma to the Twin Cities to take the position of general manager.

While Mr. Cooper's successor has been decided upon, his name will not be announced for a few days.

Mr. Hannaford has been with the Northern Pacific for a quarter of a century and has been promoted from a clerkship to his present position.

These changes will go into effect April 1.

STATE WON TEST CASE.

Minnesota Dairy and Food Commission Convicts Duluth Whisky Dealer.

St. Paul, March 27.—Word has been received from Duluth that the state dairy and food commission had won out in its test case of the whisky law, the jury having convicted Captain Henry Savage, the famous bowery saloonkeeper, of selling impure whisky. The case has been watched with interest, as upon it depended the future action of the dairy and food department in regard to whisky inspection under the law passed at the last session of the legislature. The law was defective in that it did not specify a standard of purity, but it did name certain articles which whisky should not contain. The case will in all likelihood be appealed.

FIRST OF YEAR'S CUT.

Large Sale at Market Quotations Closed at Duluth.

Duluth, March 31.—The largest sale of lumber for some time has just been closed by Manager E. H. Eddy of the Merrill & Ring Mill company, several lots of No. 3 and better, the first of this year's cut, making in all 14,000,000 feet. The price is what is considered market quotations. There have not been any other sales amounting to much.

The summer mills have not started yet, and may not for some little time. Ice has melted very slowly the past week, but a few days of warm weather would open the entire bay and all would be at work.

MAY ALL BE REMOVED.

Governor Can Wipe Out the Entire Minnesota Normal Board.

St. Paul, March 27.—Governor Van Sant has it in his power to remove every member of the state normal board. That board has violated one of the laws of the state and is guilty of a misdemeanor, according to the construction put upon the law by the attorney general of the state. The normal board approved contracts for the Duluth normal school building which exceed by $7,500 the money appropriated for that purpose.

Blown From a Train.

Bird Island, Minn., March 27.—C. H. Webster lies here unconscious from concussion of the brain, caused by being blown from the passenger train near here. He has had both arms amputated in a previous injury. Webster was passing from one car to another when blown off. He will probably recover.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Former Red Lake Falls people are conspicuous in the Roseau county papers—J. Friend Holmes is the conveyancer; J. H. Sanders loans money (no delay, no commission, pure philanthrophy;) Harry and Harold Sanders run two newspapers and Rudolph Jacklin is the plutocratic miller. It's twenty years since they first flourished here.

× ×

W. S. Short of McIntosh is long on cash and will start a bank at Roseau.

× ×

Bemidji Pioneer: Few indeed are the country papers who aim higher than to give local happenings and a few drowsy editorials. But a few papers by having special features and departments lift themselves out of the ordinary rut. Among the latter class is the Red Lake Falls Gazette, with its "Mother's Corner" and "Facts ann Fancies"—two features of unusual worth.

× ×

Roseau is after a branch of the Canadian Northern road.

× ×

Gov. VanSant spoke at the Duluth Garfield Republican club's annual banquet, and the Tribune says he finished amid hearty applause. The Governor's escape was miraculous.

× ×

It really begins to look as if the "second death blow," so eagerly awaited by the Turtle River Pine Tree, had befallen Farley, with the closing of its bank.

× ×

Tenstrike has reached the brass band stage.

× ×

The Crookston Times comes along with its 12-page edition for Sunday reading like any of the good metropolitan dailies.

× ×

Halvor Steenerson is turning over a complete set of bound volumes containing the result of the twelfth census, to the Crookston public library. This ought to help him some.

× ×

If voluminious constitution and by-laws help, Gary's fire department ought to be invincible.

× ×

Congressman Eddy has warm friends among the newspapers of the new ninth district, part of which was formerly his territory. Among the wholesome indorsements noticed last week was that from the Warren Sheaf.

× ×

This from the Hastings Gazette will be calculated to make the ladies of Blackduck and the other towns along the line, who have rested on their laurels since the advent of the iron horse, green with envy: "Two school ma'ams in Winthrop walked to New Ulm, a distance of nineteen miles, last Saturday, upon a wager. The time was a little less than six hours."

× ×

The Moorhead News tells of five Minneapolis girls who are holding down claims near Big Fork. The News is authority for the statement that the young women are becoming experts in the use of axes. They can cut down trees but the stumps look so much like the work of beavers that an experienced trapper would think he was on the trail of the dam builders. The young women are more careful now, for in felling a tree they managed to drop it on one of the cabins and the owner was compelled to go visiting until her house could be rebuilt.

× ×

The Hallock News is worried over Halvor Steenerson's petitions. The News man need lose no sleep. Until Halvor begins the five-years-in advance subscription payments his momentum has not reached the danger-limit.

× ×

Evidently the Warren Register thinks the English Army system in South Africa is a case of too many cooks. Says the Register: Generals of high degree must be as common in the British army as are colonels in Kentucky and Georgia. Methuen, who was recently captured by the Boers, was, at the time of his capture, in command of a force consisting of only 1200, though he is a lieutenant general. On the same basis the British army in South Africa must have about 200 lieutenant generals.

× ×

The Bank of Blackduck has changed ownership. The new owners are C. W. Hastings, A. P. White and other capitalists. Carl E. Oberg will be retained as cashier of the institution which will be known as "The First State Pank of Blackduck."

× ×

The Crookston Journal says thought of moving the Fosston Woolen mill has now been abandoned and improvements and extensions will not be longer delayed by a feeling of uncertainty as to the permanency of the location.

× ×

There's war on at Crookston. It's the annual school rumpus. One of the papers accuses Supt. Selleck of showing antipathy to Catholics and Catholic teachers. The other paper says its a lie, and a Catholic member of the board of education says the charge is ridiculous and utterly false.

× ×

The "will close at seven" epidemic has struck Fertile.

× ×

Editor Hunt of the Gully Sunbeam has settled the question—the Lost river really becomes lost at a given point, and Bro. Hunt has located this point on section 20 in Winsor township.

× ×

A. M. Greely, in "Backwoods Sketches": Marriage is like the measles—a man should get it while he is young.

Crookston socialists are conducting a strong municipal campaign and a number of prominent republicans and democrats are supporting their candidates. The Times thinks there's "danger" in the situation.

The Immoral Play A Great Mistake

By JOSEPH JEFFERSON, Actor

AUDIENCES OF TODAY DO NOT WANT THE PLAYS THAT DISCUSS MATTERS THAT IT IS NOT CUSTOMARY FOR MEN AND WOMEN IN GOOD SOCIETY TO MENTION. Many good people doubtless contend that the world would be a good deal better if it were less prudish and more frank, but to reform the world on that point the work must be begun in the school and in the home. It is not the theater's mission to begin a labor of that sort after boys and girls have arrived at the theater going age.

I think authors make a great mistake inducing managers to produce plays that, however good their purpose or admirable their literary quality, may drive some people out of the theater—plays which people cannot discuss between the acts or talk about above a whisper as they go home.

IT SEEMS TO ME THAT THEATER GOERS AS THEY TURN AWAY FROM A PLAY LIKE TO TALK IT OVER, AND NOT AS THEY GO UP THE AISLE HAVE TO FALL BACK ON BICYCLING AS A TOPIC.

ANOTHER MERGER SUIT.

State of Washington Makes First Move in St. Paul.

St. Paul, March 27.—Attorney General Stratton of the state of Washington, after consultation with Attorney General Douglas of Minnesota, has prepared a bill in equity in which the state of Washington is complainant and the Northern Securities company, the Great Northern Railway company and the Northern Pacific Railway company respondents. Notice of the suit was served on President James J. Hill of the Great Northern, President C. S. Mellen of the Northern Pacific and the representative of the Northern Securities company, the return being made to Sheriff Justus of Ramsey county.

The notice served recites that on April 7 the state of Washington will appear in the United States supreme court and ask leave to file the bill and complaint. The bill is almost identical with the one filed by the state of Minnesota recently, in the case which the supreme court refused to receive. Messrs. Douglas and Stratton think the new suit will result differently because the three defendant corporations are foreign corporations to the state of Washington. They think the supreme court will assume jurisdiction, as they refused in the Minnesota case because the Great Northern is a Minnestoa corporation and no state can sue its own citizen in the United States supreme court.

MURDERED AT HIS WORK.

Inoffensive Old Man Shot to Death Near Alexandria, Minn.

Alexandria, Minn., March 26.—Magnus Johnson, about 62 years old and a bachelor, was found dead in his house about six miles out of Alexandria. He had been at work in the granary and had a sack of wheat ready to tie, and the string lay across the top of the sack. The body was lying back of the sack as though it had fallen backward when shot.

Three bullet holes were in the head, one in the forehead, one in the right cheek and one low down in the back of the head.

No cause can be assigned for the murder and no clue, so far as known, has been found. The body was brought to Alexandria and awaits an inquest.

KNOCKING THE BOWERY.

Duluth Council May Deal Death Blow by Refusing Licenses.

Duluth, March 31.—Duluth's famous or, at least, notorious, bowery, is to be purified. The common council has hit upon a plan that will bring the bowery to time. It is a very simple proposition; the council will simply deny the tough joints renewals of liquor licenses. Six or seven have been marked for the slaughter and there is much excitement in bowery circles.

There are 13 saloons in one of the Bowery blocks, counting both sides of the street.

Robberies are of daily occurrence. The police have tried in vain to protect the drunken woodmen, but in spite of their efforts hundreds of them lose their money every year.

MUST PAY REVENUE.

Ruling as to Stillwater Prison Made Tobaccos.

St. Paul, March 31.—Minnesota must pay an internal revenue tax on tobacco manufactured at Stillwater for use in other institutions. This, at least, is the ruling of the commissioner of internal revenue. In view of this it is very doubtful whether the new industry will be inaugurated, except to an extent sufficient to supply the prison. Smaller plants may be operated in the other institutions where tobacco is furnished the inmates.

NAVIGATION OPENS.

Duluth Steamers Begin Their Regular Schedules.

Duluth, March 31.—The Booth line boats today opened navigation on Lake Superior for the season of 1902, by inaugurating a service down the north shore.

The Singer line boats will go in commission on the north and south shore runs tomorrow.

Minnesota Society In New York.

New York, March 28.—Minnesotans in New York are organizing a society for the purpose of bringing together socially those of the great Northwest now living here. A dinner has been planned for the near future at the Waldorf Astoria, when the Minnesotans are to meet and form the society along the lines of the other state organizations here.

Boy Burned to Death.

Morgan, Minn., March 29.—A barn on the farm of R. Zemple, one mile north of this place, was totally destroyed by fire. Carter Hacket, 7 years old, playing in the barn, was burned to death. Zemple, in trying to save the boy, was badly burned about the head.

FOR THE NORTHWEST.

Appropriation Items Included in the Sundry Civil Bill.

Washington, March 31.—In the sundry civil bill among the public buildings items over $50,000 are: Aberdeen, S. D., $56,500; Boise, Ida., $50,000; Creston, Ia., $50,000; Helena, Mon., $50,000; St. Paul, Minn., $50,000; Seattle, Wash., $250,000.

Among the river and harbor contract items over $50,000 are: Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis., $459,000; improving Mississippi river from the mouth of the Ohio to Minneapolis, Minn., $250,000.

PAPER STRIKERS WIN.

Wisconsin Tissue Paper Mill Management Gives In.

Appleton, Wis., March 31.—Superintendent T. W. Brown of the Wisconsin Tissue Paper company's mills of this city has informed the employes of the plant that the company has decided to grant the short hour schedule at once.

Student Dies of Smallpox.

Des Moines, March 31.—Alfred Dilley, a student of Western college at Toledo, Ia., is dead. He had smallpox in its worst form. He had refused to be vaccinated. He suffered intensely before death.

NEW SHORT STORIES

Roosevelt's Nervy Guide.

Here is a story told by President Roosevelt of an Indian guide who had a natural power of charming snakes. The party, of which Colonel Roosevelt was one, struck a little frontier town where a strolling show was in progress. "We went in," said the colonel, "and found a performer challenging the audience to handle his snakes. The guide at once accepted the challenge and, having convinced every one of the perfect harmlessness of the reptiles, produced a number of rattlers from a basket he had with him. The performer incontinently fled. The same guide was a most ardent believer in the redskins' tradition that it is an unjustifiable crime to kill a rattlesnake, as it 'plays fair' in giving warning before it strikes. He repeatedly exhibited the immunity of all adherents to this creed by letting a rattler bite his heel." "What became of him?" asked one of the listeners.

"Well, he tried to found a similar theory about bears, and it didn't work," Colonel Roosevelt replied significantly. "How so?" "He went in for a couple of tame bears, and then I thought it was time to part from his traveling menagerie, so I got him a job on a ranch we were passing. When I returned, I asked after him, and they told me that when he went to show that he was immune from bears one of his pets called him a liar, and the other fellow proved the truth of his mate's accusation. They kept his moccasins as a memento."

Result of a Steady Diet.

As most people who have encountered him know full well, Senator Hanna has a very expressive way of saying things, relates the Chicago Chronicle. Frequently he is detained at his office at Cleveland until too late to eat his luncheon at the Union club, where he usually goes after leaving his office in the afternoons. On these occasions he eats his lunch at the restaurant in the Perry-Payne building and is usually accompanied by his private secretary, Elmer Dover.

While at luncheon a few days ago the senator, who usually writes out the lunch orders for himself and his secretary, wrote "cold ham and ice cream" for his secretary without asking what he wanted.

"I know what you want," said the senator after handing the order to the waitress. "You always eat cold pig and ice cream."

"But I'll tell you," he continued quite seriously, "if you continue on that fare you will soon be nothing but a frozen hog."

ROADS OF NEW YORK.

In Poorer Condition Than They Were Four Years Ago.

Time was, and not so long ago, when supervisors were almost indifferent to road improvement as it is understood now, says the New York Sun. They had to be educated in the advantages of macadam. As we know, the improved bicycle was a great factor in enlightening them. But for the advent of that remarkable vehicle country roads would be very generally what they were ten years ago—deep in dust in dry weather and of the consistency of plowed fields in wet. The farmer came in time to appreciate good roads, but he still balks at the cost. As there is a large contingent of ruralists in the legislature, it is no easy matter to get through a liberal appropriation for road building.

It may be pointed out that when the bicycle ceased to be a craze local interest in keeping up the macadamized roads declined. Throughout the state the roads are not in as good condition as they were, say, four years ago. In time the automobile with a cheapening in the process of construction will supplement the bicycle as a good roads educator, and then, we predict, the sum of $220,000 will be regarded as a rather small state appropriation to help along the laying down and maintenance of highways.

GRIT.

Knute Krosto left for Fisher last Monday to spend the summer.

G. O. Holum bought Thor Gunstenson's place last Saurday. Consideration $1,200.

James Ellis, of Power, N. D., came down Friday to look the country over, and may locate here.

Mrs. Ed. Havick went to McIntosh last week to attend the wedding of her brother Ed, which occurred on Wednesday.

For sometime past we have noticed stray mosquitoes in the house. Can any one account for this? Perhaps we are to have another wet summer.

Charley Jenson and family left for Grand Forks last Friday, where they will stay until the reservation opens, when Charley expects to be able to get a slice.

John Stalmo and your correspondent braved the muddy roads to McIntosh last Friday. They could hardly be any worse, but we all hope they will soon dry up so people can navigate again.

The Young People's Society of Garnes, held a successful meeting at Gunstein Skreland's place last Sunday, and four new members were added to their already large list. We wish the society good luck and may they steadily increase in number likewise in their well aimed purpose and general principles.

Happy spring time how we welcome thee with all thy new born beauty. Nature's fairest gift—budding trees and blooming flowers, and how gladly we will behold the day when we may sit by our doorsteps and behold nature's beauty and see God's little singers flying from tree to tree each trying to outdo the other, thrilling our hearts with their praiseful songs.

Since the Red Lake Indians have ceded the western portion of their lands to the government, we wonder what the government will do about opening up part of it. Will they show their sympathy for the poor, hard toiling laboring class that are homeless by letting the old rules stand, where all are on equal footing, or will they place it up at auction where none but "land sharks" will get the sole benefit of it? All we ask is fair play.

Our worthy Garnes correspondent has nothing to apologize to us for. We well know that there was no harm meant, and we were all able to interpret it correctly. But as a matter of fact, nine persons out of ten reading the same would take it for granted that it was true. Therefore we believed it our duty to answer it accordingly. We believe in justice for all. With that aim in view, we will stand by and gladly overlook similar difficulties.

There is one thing that people think very little of but which should be important all through life and that is, talk. They use it as if it had no meaning at all, say whatever comes in their mind, little thinking what the consequence may be. We must remember that words are almost fathomless, unless they are used right, and used with care, and I would especially call your attention to unkind words. They are the most deadly weapons ever used. Did you ever stop to think of the unkind words you have uttered in anger? I suppose not, for if you had you would have felt sorry and asked forgiveness. Was it to a neighbor or to your own dear ones that you uttered those angry words? It matters not, the scar remains. An unkind word may seem a little thing at first thought, but somehow behind it lies a world of mystery. It is true that an unkind word is easily spoken, and it would almost seem as if it had little or no consequence and you may perhaps always think so, but the unfortunate recipient knows different. How would you like to stand over the grave of your neighbor or yet, a father or mother, brother or sister, whose heart you knew you had stung with unkind and angry words, and feel the sensation of the guilt piercing your heart like a thousand arrows? Would it not occur to you then that unkind or angry words had meanings? I think it would.

IMPORTANT RULING

FILINGS MUST BE MADE WITHIN COUNTY WHERE LAND IS LOCATED

OR BEFORE LAND OFFICE---AFFECTS ALL ENTRIES SINCE JUNE 1, '00.

The Interior department has recently made a ruling that is very important to settlers, and if its requirements are not lived up to many will not only lose their homesteads but their rights to file again for all time to come. The ruling is that all who have filed on land at any place outside of the district land office or out of the county where the land is located since June 1, 1900, are required to refile at the district land office or before the U. S. commissioner in the the county where the land is located. All who do not refile within sixty days from the date of the letter sent by the department to the postoffice address given at the time they filed and on record, will not only lose their right to the land originally filed on, but their homestead right as well.

It is understood that applicants will not be required to make a new application, but must make affidavit of citizenship, legality of age and that the land sought is for actual settlement and not for speculation; also the "non-saline" affidavit, that they have seen the land and are acquainted with every sub division thereof.

The fact that any person who filed contrary to the above requirements and does not receive notice to refile will not be excused, for the notices have all been sent to the postoffice address given at the time the filing was made. Look into it.

VANDALISM.

F. CASS WARD BEATEN AND ROBBED IN BROAD DAYLIGHT.

F. Cass Ward, who came up from St. Paul last week to remove his laundry fixtures to Little Falls, got ready to leave on the N. P. Saturday evening, but did not take pains to square up the many bills he was owing about town. The feeling against Ward was not the kindliest, and several of his creditors went to the train and demanded settlement before it pulled out.

Ward gave a bogus order on a business man to satisfy one claimant, after he had been pushed back into the corner of the passenger coach and unmercifully beaten by three of his creditors. The party to whom the order was given got on his wheel and made quick time to ascertain its validity, and upon learning that it had been given without authority, apparently to gain time until the train pulled out, proceeded back to the depot. Ward, who was alone in the car, was given another threshing, until the blood flowed freely and some of his teeth were knocked out, and he was robbed of all the change he had—something like $2.50. His assailants were in the act of taking his watch when discovered and stopped by the conductor.

It was a disgraceful affair, and the public conscience here is surely asleep if it is allowed to pass by unnoticed. A few more such proceedings will place us in the class with tough towns.

FERGUS DEFEATED.

THE GLENWOOD HIGH SCHOOL DEBATERS WIN OVER FERGUS FALLS.

Friday night at St. Cloud, before the session of the Northern Minnesota Educational association and a large audience of city people and partisans from their respective towns, the Glenwood high school debating team defeated Fergus Falls in the semi-finals of the state oratorical association. The winners will now meet the Le Sueur team for the state championship. The judges were George H. Reynolds of St. Cloud, R. H. Manuel of Minneapolis and Prof. W. M. Hayes of St. Anthony Park.

Receptions followed at Lawrence hall for the teachers and at a down town hall for the high school students.

Egan-Keeley.

The Minneapolis Tribune of the 2d inst. contained the following account of a wedding in which James A. Egan, son of Mrs. Catherine Shea Egan of this city figured as groom:

The marriage of Miss Adelaide Alice Kelley and James Augustine Egan was celebrated this morning at St. Lawrence's church by Rev. Father Genis. The bride and her matron of honor, Mrs. Frank Stegall, were met at the altar by the bridegroom, who was accompanied by Joseph E. Leahiff. The wedding march was played during the procession and little Florence Kasper, gowned in pale pink and carrying an arm full of roses, preceded the bride down the aisle.

Father Genis was the officiating clergyman when the bride's parents were married, which gave a double interest to the ceremony. The bride wore a pale blue mousselaine de soie and carried bride roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Egan will be at home in Galesburg, N. D., after April 15.

A NOVEL DRIVE.

1,000 CORDS OF WOOD NOW COMING DOWN THE CLEARWATER.

Dr. J. C. Wilkinson finds time from a busy professional career to do some thinking on the side, and a result of these thinks is the novel idea of purchasing fine farms along the Clearwater in Emardville township, having the timber cut off and floating it down the Clearwater. The genial doctor thus banked a thousand cords of wood, and yesterday sent up a crew of men to bring down his drive. A boom has been constructed below the old Clearwater bridge and here the wood will be brought ashore.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

RED LAKE TREATY CEDING LANDS TO BE RAILROADED THROUGH.

MEASURE HAS BACKING OF SECRETARY HITCHCOCK.

Washington, April 5.—The treaty for the cession of a portion of the Red Lake reservation, seems likely to be railroaded through congress when others may be delayed. It is being pushed by its friends and the committee is satisfied that it is fair in its provisions and greatly desired by both the whites and the reds interested in the development of Northern Minnesota.

Secretary Hitchcock yesterday sent to congress the treaty negotiated by Inspector McLaughlin. He makes an earnest recommendation for its approval. An effort will be made to have the treaty put as a rider on the Indian approbriation bill, now pending in the senate.

RED RIVER OF NORTH

NAVIGATION MORE EXTENSIVE THAN IS GENERALLY KNOWN.

GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN NIGGARDLY IN APPROPRIATION TO AID IT.

The appropriation for the improvement of the Red River of the North in the river and harbor bill is placed at $10,500. It will be remembered that the river and harbor bill failed to pass the last session of congress, having been literally talked to death, on account chiefly of the large sized aggregate of the appropriations contained. In consequence no work whatever was done on the Red river last year and the government fleet stationed in Grand Forks was out of commission all summer. The amount named for this year is very small in view of the fact that the obstructions in the river have been accumulating without hindernnce since the session of 1900. Capt. Hayes who is in charge of the fleet, will have his boats, consisting of one steamer, tender, dredge and small scows, in commission as soon as the appropriation is available and the condition of the river will warrant.

The work to be done consists in opening and maintaining a navigable channel by removing obstructions, dredging sand bars, construction of wing dams, etc.

It is a fact not generally known that the volume of traffic on the Red River of the North in proportion to its length is greater than that on the Mississippi river north of Dubuque, or of the Missouri river, Iowa. The two transportation lines doing business here handle more than one million bushels of grain annually, besides large quantities of lumber, machinery, wood and other merchandise for the farmers and merchants along the river, mostly between Belment and Drayton. The Grand Forks fleet includes two steamers, one gasoline boat and ten barges with a capacity of from 4,000 to 10,000 bushels of grain each.

The Red River of the North was navigated by the Indians for centuries before it was used for the purpose by the white people. During the latter part of the eighteenth century and the first half of the nineteenth the Wahpetons and Sissetons were accustomed to make journeys to the north along the Red river as far as the Pembina river, to hunt the Buffalo and to wage warfare against the northern tribes, including the Chippewa. During these journeys the site of Grand Forks was one of their convenient camping grounds. During the early years of the century traders and trappers made frequent trips up and down the river. This was about 1730. In 1801 Captain Henry, an officer of the Northwest Fur company, voyaged up and down the Red River and established several trading posts, including one at Grand Forks.

Equal Partners

The opening chapters this week.

This is a story of mystery. The interest aroused in the first chapter is admirably sustained to the end. A beautiful actress is found in her room in New York dangerously stabbed, with one chance in a million for her life. Who stabbed her? The reader forms opinions to quickly abandon them as the story rapidly unfolds. The identity of the criminal is so skillfully veiled that it is not discovered until the end. Our readers who are good at solving mysteries in stories will find something worthy of their powers in "EQUAL PARTNERS." Don't miss the first chapter.

FORCED TO SUSPEND

ST. PAUL LOAN AND SAVINGS COMPANY IN HANDS OF STATE OFFICIALS.

Judge Chandler, a Pioneer Railroad Man, Passes Away—Duluth Land Office Second in Point of Business Done—Decision Against Squatters in Ireland Land Cases—News of the State in General.

St. Paul, April 5.—The United States Savings and Loan company, a corporation having offices at 615-619 Manhattan building, has gone into liquidation. The step was taken at the request of Public Examiner Johnson, who sent a letter to John Douglas, the director in charge.

The assets are given at $800,000 and the liabilities at an equal figure. The expenses of liquidation are expected to cause a sufficient shrinkage to give the creditors about 80 cents on the dollar.

Ex-Governor Hubbard is president of the concern and ex-Governor McGill vice president.

JOHN A. CHANDLER DEAD.

Well Known Railroad Man Dies Suddenly in St. Paul.

St. Paul, April 1.—Judge John A. Chandler, general agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad in this city and the oldest railroad man in point of continuous service in the country, died at his home, 229 East Ninth street, aged 71 years. The death of Judge Chandler came very suddenly. He had been ailing for many months past and was quite feeble, but his condition has not been regarded as dangerous. He was suddenly taken with a severe attack of rheumatism of the heart, and expired within an hour.

For over 30 years he had been stationed here as general agent of the Milwaukee road, and during that time he was a prominent figure on the streets of the city. For 48 years he was connected with the Milwaukee road. He built the best years of his life into that great institution and contributed in a large degree to its earlier successes.

He was known far and wide in railroad circles and had an extensive acquaintance outside of his railroad connections.

SECOND IN UNITED STATES.

Business of the Duluth Land Office the Past Year.

Duluth, April 3.—The annual report of the commissioner of the public land office shows that the receipts for the past year amounted to $203,065.26, the expenses of the office being $10,658.80. Lands to the extent of 314,845 acres have been disposed of. Duluth holds the second place this year, Devils Lake, N. D., having disposed of more land. Since the opening of the office 5,219,687 acres have been sold and there yet remain 2,410,685 acres of vacant public lands and 2,842,685 of reserve lands. It is expected that the business of the office will hold its own for many years to come.

MINNESOTA'S MERGER SUIT.

President Hill Served With Summons and Complaint.

St. Paul, April 5.—President James J. Hill of the Northern Securities company has been served with the summons and complaint in the case of the state against the Northern Securities company. Deputy Sheriff Reichow served the papers on Mr. Hill in his office and the service was acknowledged by him.

The complaint has been printed, and makes 36 pages of printed matter. It was not filed with the clerk of the district court, and it is probable that it will not be for several days.

LAND TITLE UPHELD.

Decision Affecting Ireland Lands in Minnesota.

St. Paul, April 5.—A decision of the supreme court upholds the title of those who purchased Minneapolis, St. Paul and Manitoba grant lands from Archbishop Ireland.

The railroad company had claimed a large tract of land in Traverse and Big Stone counties as indemnity for lands which could not be secured in the territory adjoining the St. Vincent extension of the road.

RED LAKE RESERVATION.

Minnesota Indians Agree to Cede the Western Portion.

Washington, April 5.—The secretary of the interior has transmitted to the senate an agreement with the Red Lake and Pembina bands of Chippewa Indians of Minnesota for the cession to the United States of the western portion of the Red Lake reservation containing 256,152 acres. Senator Clapp introduced a bill ratifying the agreement.

Russell Sage Answers.

Minneapolis, April 5.—An answer to the bill of complaint of the United States vs. Russell Sage, assignee in trust for the Hastings and Dakota Railway company, was filed in the clerk of court's office. Owen Morris of St. Paul is acting for Mr. Sage. The answer denies the charge of the United States that the disputed land was ever properly appropriated by Andrew Rockvog under the laws governing homestead rights.

Killed by Lightning Bolt.

Winona, Minn., April 7.—Henry Hornberg of Wilson and his two horses were instantly killed late Saturday afternoon in Burns Valley while on the way home from Winona by a stroke of lightning in the first thunder storm of the season. Anton Rye, who was on the wagon sent with Hornberg, was not hurt.

Husband Dead, Wife Dying.

Dodge Center, Minn., April 3.—Samuel Ellis, who was so severely burned a few days ago, died during the morning from the effects of his burns. Mrs. Ellis, who was also badly burned, is in a critical condition, and her recovery is considered very doubtful.

JACOBSON IS HELD.

Alleged Instigator of the Magnus Johnson Murder Must Stand Trial.

Alexandria, Minn., April 3.—The preliminary examination of Andrew Jacobson, accused of being the instigator of the murder of Magnus Johnson near here March 24, has ended and Jacobson was committed to await the action of the grand jury at the September term of court. A strange feature of the case is that the first man to furnish a clue to the confessed murderer should be the alleged instigator of the crime.

The next morning after the murder was committed Jacobson came to town and directed suspicion to Gustav Larson as the murderer, telling the authorities that Larson committed the deed with a 22-calibre revolver and left the country. But for what Jacobson said Larson would never have been suspected.

Larson says Jacobson told him to buy the revolver and do the shooting for the money that was on the person of the old man. Larson bought the revolver on Saturday and told Jacobson he was ready. It was understood Larson was to have the money that was on the old man and that Jacobson was to loot the house.

Larson said he wanted to back out at one time, but was told by Jacobson that if he did so he should die. This threat so frightened him that he carried out the crime as it had been planned.

WORKED FOR A BREWERY.

Minneapolis Minister is Deposed and Unfrocked.

Minneapolis, April 2.—Rev. Louis Richter, one of the oldest ministers in the Minneapolis presbytery, has been deposed from the ministry and excommunicated from the church at a meeting of the presbytery held here.

The sentence is the extreme penalty of punishment known to the church.

The accusation against Mr. Richter is that he opposed the church in its teachings of temperance and total abstinence and that he worked for and accepted pay from a Minneapolis brewing company.

Mr. Richter, conducting his own defense, admitted that he was out of harmony with the church in its position on the temperance question, but he denied that the church had any scriptural authority to formulate laws in favor of prohibition or total abstinence.

After the 60 pastors which composed the presbytery decided that Mr. Richter should be deposed from the ministry a delegation of laymen asked that the deposed minister be excommunicated also, lest his teachings do harm to the church.

Mr. Richter will appeal to the state synod of the Presbyterian church, which will meet in October.

TWO BIG MORTGAGES.

They Are on the Northern Pacific and Aggregate $320,000,000.

Minneapolis, April 4.—Two mortgages on the Northern Pacific railway aggregating $320,000,000 were filed with the register of deeds during the morning. The documents are in books printed on fine paper with good type and were bound in cloth and leather. They need to be bound for they will have to be filed and recorded in every county in the state in which the Northern Pacific operates.

One of the mortgages is the prior lien mortgage to the Mercantile Trust company, which amounts to $130,000,000, and the other is a general lien mortgage amounting to $190,000,000 to the Farmers Loan and Trust company.

MINNESOTA AND MICHIGAN.

University Oratorical Contest Won by the Former.

Chicago, April 5.—The fourth annual debate between orators of the Universities of Minnesota and Michigan, held here, was won by the Minnesota students. The winning side took the affirmative of the following proposition:

"Resolved, That the best interests of the United States forbid that we should permanently hold and govern the Philippines."

The successful speakers, who will divide $150, were Benjamin Drake, Willis Norton and Hugh J. MacLaren. The victory is the first Minnesota has won from Michigan.

MANITOBA AND GULF ROAD.

Said That Work Will Commence on the Line Immediately.

Duluth, April 1.—The News-Tribune publishes a statement to the effect that the Banque Francaise and Colonial of Paris and Belgium have agreed to take $12,000,000 of bonds for building the Manitoba and Gulf railroad on the basis of 95 per cent.

The road will run from Duluth to Kansas City and Omaha, cutting every one of the great transcontinental lines. It is the intention of the promoters to either make connections with the Gould system or continue the road as an independent line to the gulf. Work will commence immediately.

SAID TO HAVE BEEN DRUGGED.

Sensational Developments Expected in the Kachel Case.

St. Peter, Minn., April 4.—While Andrew Tanke and his wife were being tried for the alleged murder of the latter's former husband, Anton Kachel, a juror, became sick and demented. He was taken for treatment to the asylum here, where he died. The jury was dismissed. It is alleged that drugs were administered to the juror and that he died from their effect. The authorities are investigating. The parties who gave the drugs to the juror are said to be known and the disclosures promise sensational results.

Irregularities in Their Accounts.

St. Paul, April 1.—Steward J. M. Rogers and his bookkeeper, C. E. Tegner, of the St. Peter hospital for the insane, have been dismissed from the service of the state by the board of control because of inexplainable irregularities and discrepancies in their accounts, which were revealed by an investigation of the steward's office on Saturday.

National Law Needed For Corporations

By JAMES B. DILL, "The Father of Trusts"

WOULD CORPORATIONS AVAIL THEMSELVES OF THE OPPORTUNITY TO ORGANIZE UNDER A NATIONAL LAW? YES, FOR THEIR TENDENCY TODAY IS TO ASSUME A NATIONAL CHARACTER.

There is a tendency to publicity, at least to "private publicity," on the part of the better class of corporations as a matter of self preservation. The tendency is to publish more and more the details in order that the sound organizations may show themselves to be in a position where the others dare not follow them in making public statements. By "private publicity" I mean information concerning the management, affairs and details of the corporation accessible to every stockholder in much the same way as if he were a partner. This would disclose all data that a stockholder had the right to learn. THE PRACTICE IS TOO PREVALENT OF GETTING THE PUBLIC TO SUBSCRIBE FOR STOCK AND THEN DECLINING TO SAY WHAT IS BEING DONE WITH THE MONEY INVESTED. Stockholders are entitled to such information once a year as shall enable them to act under a common understanding and either to change their investments or to change their directors. Wall street is beginning to find out that securities will not be absorbed by the public if they are characterized by the wrong leadership.

THE LAW SHOULD HAVE A REQUIREMENT THAT PRESENT COMBINATIONS MIGHT BECOME NATIONAL CORPORATIONS UPON A THEORY SIMILAR TO THAT BY WHICH STATE BANKS ARE ENTITLED TO BECOME NATIONAL BANKS.

This would be availed of by the sound corporations not only for protection against imitators and those not able to follow them, but also as a protection against the diverse and inconsistent laws of the various states. The great corporations would avail themselves of the privilege of becoming United States corporations, thereby being corporations foreign to no state, thus securing to themselves the privileges and immunities of citizens of every state.

They would secure to themselves uniformity of legislation throughout the length and breadth of the United States. States may drive insurance companies out of their territories, but they cannot drive national banks out because the national bank derives its existence from a power higher than that of a state created organization. No corporation desiring to do business throughout the country could afford to be other than a national organization.

CHAPTER I.

AN ITEM OF NEWS.

THE little newsboy had the face of an imp, and he must have come up through the floor, as an imp should by all the best traditions. Surely the creature could not have squirmed through that tangle of humanity between Brenda and the door of the car. Yet there he was, standing close against her knees and looking straight up into her face.

Often the eyes of children seem to read our hearts. It is because they are new in the world and are content with superficial views. Adults try to look in through our eyes, and they fail, and we note the failure; but children do not try, and we, seeing them satisfied, tremble for our inmost secrets.

Brenda shook her head to intimate that she had no wish to buy the news, but the boy did not move. He continued to hold his papers before her, gazing over them into her face meanwhile with an unwinking stare.

It was probable that if she bought a paper the boy would pass on, so Brenda laid a hand upon her purse. The hand remained there rigid, and for some slow seconds the ragged urchin and the smooth product of all the social refinements were like figures on a canvas, both for fixity of pose and for balance of contrasting expressions, the child still calmly staring, his utter ignorance counterfeiting wisdom, the woman tense and eager, her eyes searching and unsatisfied.

"I will take this paper," she said, speaking with considerable effort, and she gave the boy a coin.

Presently she stood upon the sidewalk of Broadway, gazing across at the ugly brick front of the opera house with a confused notion that it could give her important information, but was perversely refusing to do so.

She merely wished to know where she was, and the familiar scene impressed her as if she had not been there in a long time and had forgotten. Then her mind became clear. She paused in deep thought and at its end raised her hand as if to beckon to a cabman; but, changing her purpose, she stepped into a doorway and read once more the item in the paper that the little boy had thrust under her eyes.

At the first glance one who knew Brenda might have said that the story lay outside her world and could not interest her. However, it was what a journalist might call "good news," and therefore it was printed with the lines very far apart by way of emphasis, and it bore the marks of haste. Thus it ran:

> Elsie Miller, an actress living at 148 West Thirty-eighth street, was stabbed by some person unknown in her room this afternoon.
>
> It is a lodging house owned and occupied by Mrs. Alice Simmons. Miss Miller had lived in the rear room on the first floor for some months.
>
> The crime was discovered by a servant, who entered the room and found Miss Miller unconscious on the floor. Dr. A. G. Blair of 160 West Thirty-eighth street was hastily summoned, and he pronounced the wound mortal. It is just below the collar bone, on the left side, extending sharply downward within the body and undoubtedly piercing the outer wall of the heart. That Miss Miller should have survived the wound longer than a few seconds is regarded as miraculous by Dr. Blair and other physicians, several of whom, including Ambulance Surgeon Carrington of St. Winifred's hospital, were at the house within a few minutes after the discovery of the crime.
>
> The weapon was a hunting knife, having a long blade and a deer's foot handle. The blade is peculiar, being much thinner than that of the ordinary hunting knife. It was found on the floor beside the body. A servant says that she has seen the knife in Miss Miller's room within the last few days.
>
> On a table in the room was a letter which may explain the whole affair. The police have it and refuse to divulge its contents, but it is known that the writer is Clarence M. Alden, a broker with an office on Broad street. He is the only son of the late St. Clair Alden, who practically disinherited him.
>
> Miss Miller is a very beautiful girl, tall and of the brunette type. She is 20 years old. She played the part of Nannie in "The Honeybee," an unsuccessful comedy produced in this city two years ago. Since then her work has not been seen here.

Brenda walked down Broadway to Thirty-eighth street and turned westward. Immediately she perceived the motley crowd which the news of the crime had brought together, and she hesitated. Then, shutting her lips firmly together, she resumed her original purpose.

The house numbered 148 had a high stoop and a yard the size of a dinner table, in which the grass was green and well watered, though the neighboring yards were brown with the heat and drought of that remarkable month of June. The house itself had an air of neatness and the flavor of home, but its privacy had been invaded first by crime and then by all the train that follows it. The door stood ajar for prying eyes, and the two gigantic policemen lounging at the head of the steps seemed the chief intruders rather than the guardians of the place. Brenda, for all that was upon her mind, felt the desecration and shuddered at it.

The policemen, who had been leaning against the railings, stood erect and put their shoulders together as Brenda ascended the steps. They seemed to fill all the space and their heads to tower to the house top. But the thing must be gone through with now, and Brenda gathered all her force.

"I am a friend of Miss Miller," she said. "Please let me go in."

"Nobody can go in now," replied one of the men.

"Is she dead?"

Brenda was framing other questions in her mind, but this one uttered itself.

The policemen exchanged a glance. Then one of them replied with a single word, "No." At this moment there was a stir in the hall. Hearing it, the policemen began slowly to descend the steps. Brenda retreated before them, and not a word was spoken. She was pressed into the edge of the crowd at the foot of the stone stairs, and she remained there while a litter was brought out on which lay something perfectly still and covered from end to end with a white cloth. It was put into a great black vehicle. A brisk young man, wearing a blue cap, and a grave, elderly man with a long white beard climbed in after it, and then the somber equipage moved away by the power resident within it. And to Brenda the familiar spectacle of a self propelling carriage assumed the aspect of a miracle, and all things seemed to move or stand by virtue of a new force, silent and resistless.

"Could I go in?" she whispered to the policeman who had stationed himself beside her. "Can I speak with some one who knows?"

"Knows what?" he replied.

"Whether she will recover, whether she has spoken."

The man looked at her with a ponderous curiosity.

"You wait here," he said. "Give me your name, and I'll see what I can do?"

Miss Maclane was affected by a touch of caution.

"No one knows me here," she replied. "My name would mean nothing to them. But you may say that Miss Williams would like to speak with the physician who was called in—a Dr. Blair, I believe."

The policeman began to ascend the steps, but he paused at sight of two men who appeared above. One of them was of medium stature and very heavy, having the build of an ape, with preposterously long arms, which swung aimlessly when he moved, as if they were artificial. He wore the uniform of a police captain. The other was of a conventional type by comparison—that is, he looked like a human being, and Brenda noticed little else about him. Her gaze was fixed upon the coarse, scarred face of the captain, brutally cynical and smiling without purpose, like an image hacked out of wood.

Her gaze was fixed upon the coarse, scarred face of the captain.

The policeman saluted his superior and addressed him in a low voice. Without waiting for him to finish the captain turned quickly to the man who had come out of the house with him and asked a question which Brenda did not hear. When this man looked at her, Brenda became aware that he was tall and thin and that he wore a loose gray suit.

"I don't know," said the man in gray thoughtfully. "I can't be sure."

The captain descended the steps and lifted his cap with the politeness of a trained animal.

"Miss Williams?" said he. "Yes, indeed. I understand that you are a friend of Miss Miller, the girl that got hurt, and that you'd like to talk to Dr. Blair. This gentleman is Dr. Blair. So perhaps we'd better all go into the house, where we can talk more convenient."

Brenda tried to pass him, but she immediately found herself between the captain and one of the policemen, by whom she was escorted into the house, the physician walking ahead. Thus they came to a small parlor, opening from the hall, to the right.

In the presence of Dr. Blair, whose manner was that of the world wherein she had moved, Brenda regained a part of her self possession. The simple elegance of the room, far beyond anything that she had expected, helped to put her at her ease, and she began to feel the sense of personal dominance to which she was accustomed.

"Dr. Blair," she said, "I really don't know why I should have come here. I am not a friend of Miss Miller. I am merely interested in her. Seeing the story of her terrible misfortune in a newspaper by the merest accident, I obeyed an unaccountable impulse and came to this house."

"An unaccountable impulse," said the captain in a perfectly meaningless voice, as if he had been an echo.

"I can tell you very little," replied Dr. Blair. "No one knows who committed the crime nor why it was done"—

"But will she die? Such a young girl, with so much to hope for, and they say she was very beautiful!"

"She was, poor child!" responded the physician. "And that fact may or may not have had something to do with her misfortune. As to her chance of recovery, I greatly fear—indeed, to be frank with you, I doubt whether she is living at this moment."

Brenda was as white as paper, and her hands were twined together.

"She has not spoken"— she began, and it was the captain who replied.

"Not a word," said he. "But we shan't need anything from her. We shall get to the bottom of this affair all right."

Brenda turned slowly toward him.

"The name of a gentleman," said she, "an acquaintance of mine, was mentioned in the newspaper account, a Mr. Alden. Of course it is impossible that he should have had any connection with this wretched crime, but perhaps he knew the young woman and"—

"Yes," responded the captain, "they were acquainted. And, by the way, perhaps you're familiar with the young gentleman's handwriting. We found a note on the letter head of his firm. Let me see, what did I do with it? Oh, here it is. Perhaps you'd like to glance it through."

He extended his hand, but Brenda did not take the sheet of paper which he offered.

"I could not read this," she said, with a slight shudder. "It was not meant for me."

A faint expression of surprise humanized the officer's face for a moment.

"That don't make any difference," he said. "It'll have to be published. Everybody 'll read it."

Brenda glanced at Dr. Blair, who bowed his head.

"In that case," she said, "though it seems an outrageous intrusion"—

"There's no help for it," rejoined the captain with a grin, which he used in place of a frown. "We've got to find the person that done this deed, and we've got to make use of this note to do it."

Brenda took the paper and read these words:

> "My Dearest Dear—All goes so well that I must send word to you at once. I can't wait till evening, when I may see you, and, indeed, dear love, there is some doubt whether I shall be able to quit work before midnight. At any rate, it bids fair to be so late that I should not dare scandalize Mrs. Simmons by calling upon you. So I write this and make bold to put a little money into it—five hundreds. Don't let them frighten you. I remember perfectly that you weren't to touch a penny, but I rely upon the letter that I wrote last evening to knock all your arguments into smithereens. I thought of a lot of points after leaving you, and I cited the best precedents. If a fellow is rich—as I am today, thank heaven—he may help his sweetheart to buy her trousseau. If you don't believe it, write to your mother, and while you're waiting for an answer buy the pretty clothes anyhow. Ah, my beloved"—

Brenda had come to the end of the first sheet. Her face, that had been so pale, was flushed, and her voice was not quite steady as she said:

"I can't read any more. It is dishonorable and unnecessary."

"Ah, my beloved," said the captain, taking the letter and reading the remainder aloud in a stumbling voice, with half an eye on Brenda all the time—

> —"we shall be so happy, youth and love and money and the whole world before us—the summer in Norway, the fall upon the continent, the winter on whatever Mediterranean shore you like the best, and next June shall find us in Venice and our twelfth honeymoon in the sky. Think of this, sweetest of travelers, whose favorite book has always been the atlas. Think of it as you go shopping this afternoon with your pocket full of money. It is all settled; the chains are broken. We are to be married as soon as your mother can come east to behold the ceremony. And then away to see the world and the shrines of 20 centuries of lovers. My heart and my faith to you.
>
> CLARENCE."

In the captain's mouth these love words had the sound of blasphemies, and Brenda shrank back to the limit of the room with Dr. Blair, who seemed to be scarcely less affected by the desecration.

"The money wasn't found," said the officer after a brief, shrewd scrutiny of Brenda. "The note was on the table, but none of those hundred dollar bills that we read about. Come; I'll show you where we found it."

"I don't think I want to go in there," said Brenda faintly. "I am going to the hospital to see whether I can be of any help to her."

"You'll have to arrange that through the police," was the reply, "and it can't be done until I get some word from there. So I suggest that we take another look at the scene of the crime."

He stepped back from the door, and Brenda passed out of the room, intending to leave the house, but again she found herself between the captain and one of his men, and again she obeyed an unspoken order, following one of them while the other followed her.

CHAPTER II.

AMONG THE PICTURES.

ELSIE'S room opened straight from the hall, at the rear. There was a sort of vestibule, with a sliding, glass paneled door at the farther end, and this space was divided lengthwise by a curtain, behind which Brenda saw the gleam of a great white tub, an unusual luxury in cheap lodgings.

Beyond the vestibule was a room of good height and size, with a shallow alcove on the left, in which stood a pretty brass bedstead. Upon the right was an unused open fireplace beneath an old fashioned marble mantelshelf which was covered with a quaint and picturesque collection of souvenirs.

There were two tall windows in the southern wall. The lower sashes were hinged at the sides, opening inward, and one might step out upon a wooden balcony of the length of the room, which was the width of the house.

Some crude, familiar pictures hung upon the walls. Obviously they antedated Elsie's coming and expressed Mrs. Simmons' idea of home decoration. Elsie's contribution to the adornment of the scene consisted almost entirely of photographs of men and women. One might guess the calling of the tenant after a glance at the portraits, for nearly all of these people were obviously in "the profession." They appeared singly or in groups formed by fastening the photographs together with dainty bits of ribbon, so that half a dozen might be suspended in the fashion of a banner.

Whatever may be said of the artistic value of this decoration, it certainly brightened the room. It was impossible to be lonely with so much company and such vivacious people. Nine in ten of the women were smiling and many wore fancy dress. The men struggled to seem chivalrous and courtly, except the comedians, most of whom were in grotesque attire. Two photographs, larger than the average and well placed between the windows, represented young men in the dress of cavaliers with drawn swords in their hands. There they had stood, these friends of hers, thus armed, with their eyes upon her when the assassin had struck her down.

"She must have been about here when it happened."

"From all I can learn," said the captain, "she must have been about here when it happened."

He took his place beside a couch that was between the windows and turned his face to the wall.

"The murderer," he continued, "was behind her. The murderer pulled her head back and stabbed almost straight down. The girl fell on the couch; here's the blood. And the murderer, convinced that she was dead, dropped the knife and fled."

He turned to Brenda with a questioning leer. She was more calm than she had been; her mind was more alert. She had noticed his peculiar avoidance of a pronoun, and she asked him without emotion whether there was any doubt that the assailant was a man.

"We don't pretend to know anything about it," he replied, "but there are certain circumstances which lead us to suspect that it might have been a woman. A gentleman who was passing the house about the hour when this thing must have been done saw a woman coming out. Now, except for Miss Miller, the lodgers in this house are all men, and we can't get any trace of this woman. We don't know how or when she got into the house nor what she did here. It's sure that she didn't ring the bell nor make any more noise than she could help. Nobody let her in, so far as we can learn, and we've covered the ground pretty thoroughly."

"Perhaps she didn't come in at all," said Brenda. "She may only have ascended the steps and then, finding that this was not the house that she had supposed it to be"—

"Or changing her mind for any reason," the captain continued. "Quite right. I see your point. But the woman wore a heavy veil; she seemed to be somewhat excited, and she hurried away eastward— I think you said eastward, Dr. Blair?"

"Toward Broadway," responded the physician, with embarrassment.

"It's a pity you didn't notice her more particularly," said the captain. "I'd give a dollar or two for her description just now."

"You can't get it from me," replied Dr. Blair. "There was no reason why I should pay any particular attention to her. She was a well dressed, stylish looking young woman, and that's all I know about her."

Brenda looked at him steadily for some seconds.

"Dr. Blair," said she, "what did this officer ask you on the steps just before I came in?"

The doctor blushed and glanced uneasily at the captain.

"I asked him if he could pick that woman out of a crowd," said the captain, "and he told me that he didn't know; he couldn't be sure."

"I fancied that it might have been something of the sort," rejoined Brenda. "And now, Captain"—

She paused, and the officer supplied the name.

"Captain Neale, at your service," said he, with a bow.

"Thank you. And now, Captain Neale, I wish you would get the message from the hospital for which you are waiting as quickly as you can, for I am impatient to go there."

"I'm expecting it any minute," he replied. "Ah, perhaps this is it."

A tall young man of a German type of countenance, with wide blue eyes, entered the room and stood by the door, as if he had no errand, but had simply been impelled by a gentle, superior force. There was silence for Red Lake Falls Gazette.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

—BY—

PHIL. A. KAUZER.

Published weekly, Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the post-office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

CLEAN UP.

This is the time of year when it behooves the city of Red Lake Falls to purge herself of the rank filth that festers its alleys and back yards. Let there be a general house cleaning from one end of our beautiful city to the other. "Cleanliness is next to godliness" is not an idle or illusionary phrase, and it bears no weightier significance than when applied to a municipality. Tap those stagnant receptacles of dross and pollution that, when the spring thaw is upon us, raise their ominous heads of reeking and germ-freighted stench, poisoning the pure ozone of our glorious climate. Rake and scrape together the refuse animal and vegitable matter that has been carelessly allowed to accumulate during the frost of winter and cart it away to some common garbage ground. Throw open the stopped up sewerage channels; Red Lake and Clearwater Rivers are not yet choked up.

Just now our city is the mecca of land seekers and investors. Let them carry away with them a favorable impression: let the first gaze that meets their eyes be the evidences of a clean city. If we have regard for a pardonable pride and the aesthetic side of the question, cleanliness adds immeasurabiy to our pleasure and happiness. If we have regard for the pecuniary or selfish advantages of such a course, we will find it in the increased desirability for investors to locate in our midst, as tidings of the natural beauty of our location and the cleanliness of our city afford the most alluring attractions. But above all, and including all, from the standpoint of preserving the public health, to clean up our city, and keep it clean, is not only haltingly demanded of us; it becomes a matter of prime necessity and solemn duty.

IS A COLLEGE EDUCATION OF ANY VALUE IN BUSINESS?

An exhaustive investigation was recently undertaken by Mr. R. T. Crane, of Chicago, with a view to ascertaining whether an academic education is of any real benefit to young men who have to earn their own living and who intend to enter upon a commercial life. "A great deal has been written on this subject," observes Mr. Crane, "but, so far as I have been able to discover, the writers have given merely their opinions or theories. not facts." Mr. Crane, setting out to discover the "facts" in the case, sent nineteen letters to the presidents of the principal universities and colleges of the country, 1,593 letters to college graduates throughout the country, and one hundred letters to leading business men in every important branch of commerce. The results of this important and interesting investigation he publishes in booklet form.

As might be expected, the college presidents are almost all of the opinion that an academic education is of very great advantage to every business man. Of nearly 1,600 letters sent out by Mr. Crane to graduates of all the principal colleges, about one-third were answered. Four hundred and ninety of the replies received were from students who had either taken up a professional or technical line of work, or who stated that they did not come within the scope of the investigation. This leaves only sixty-five letters that came strictly within the field of the inquiry. The question of whether a college education had been of benefit to them, in the performance of their duties and in securing advancements, was answered in the affirmative by fifty, and in the negative by seven. To the question whether their college education was of any advantage to them in obtaining a situation, thirty-two answered "yes," and twenty seven "no." Sixty out of sixty five said that, if they had their lives to live over, they would take a college course, for even those who admitted that they would be better off financially if they had not gone to college claimed that whatever they lost in this respect was more than compensated for by the college experience and the increased capacity which it gave them for enjoying life.

This weight of evidence on the side of college education is still further supported by the testimony of a large number of the most successfull business men of the country. Mr. Lucius Tuttle, president of the Boston and Maine Railroad, declares that in "selecting help, we give preference to a college-educated man, all other things being equal." Mr. George B. Harris; president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company, gives it as his impression that college men are "better trained and rise more rapidly than persons who have not attended college." Mr. E. C. Simmons, of the Simmons Hardware Company, St. Louis, expresses himself very strongly as being in favor of college education for business men. Mr. Cyrus H. McCormick, president of the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company, thinks that "under the same environment and with the same opportunties" a college man would win over the man would had not the same advantages. On the other hand, Mr. Henry W. Cramp, of the Cramp Ship-Building Company, declares that "we employ men solely with reference to their capacity for the work which we desire them to do, and it is entirely immaterial to us how, when, or where, or by what kind of process they acquired the education and training that may fit them for their duties." Mr. Edward Townsend, cashier of the Importers and Tradeas' National Bank, New York, considers that the best possible material for the development of the business man is found in the boy of about sixteen years of age who is taken from school without previous experience and trained in business methods.

Mr. Crane, is not himself convinced by the very opinion that he has himself marshalled, and, though compelled to admit that the preponderance of evidence is in favor of a college education, he holds to the opinion that the present universities are "a most stupendous mistake, if not a positive injury" to young men who intend to pursue a commercial calling. Mr. Crane continues: "The whole world is a college, and one who wishes to obtain knowledge will find plenty of opportunities for doing so."

"For illustration, take such men as Westinghouse, Edison, Cramp, Scott, and hundreds of others that might be mentioned. I contend that the happiness which the most learned college man gets out of life does not compare with that obtained by these men from their business.

"The greatest pleasure a man can have is that which arises from the feeling that he has been a success in a creditable occupation.

"On the contrary. the greatest unhappiness comes from the knowledge that one's life has been a failure, and it seems to me that the more a man has of ordinary education, the more severely will he feel his failure."

The board of control, which has been tasting some of the sweets of oblivion for the last two weeks, is again being brought into hostile public notice. It will be the railroad and warehouse commission's turn to be taken down from the shelf and dusted next.—Duluth News-Tribune.

MOTHER'S CORNER

BY MOTHER KATHERINE

A Staff contributor, who will write of every day affairs—the little units that go to make up the sum total of existence. Mother Katherine writes exclusively for THE GAZETTE. SHE DASN'T

In his able way Mr. Bok gives his opinion of woman of the present, as regards clubs. I was so pleased with what he said that with the old man who approved of a stranger's remarks, I wished I could say: "Shake stranger, them is my sentiments."

Why this mad rush for clubs and societies?

Mr. Bok contends that in doing a thing we should ask ourselves, "Is it worth while?" If we cannot find that what we do is going to help us or some one else in some way it is not worth while. He further states that he knows many women who are "club crazy."

Right your are, Mr. Bok, and I wonder who does not know them.

I know one woman (or club woman) who is too busy for anything but club work. She has no family (too busy you know) but her husband must needs take his midday meal at a hotel for she hasn't time to get it for him. There are many other family affairs she has no time to attend to, yet she is an excellent club worker. Is her work worth while? There is one woman I know who does not even have time to remove her hat at meal time. She must eat between meetings as it were.

Certainly women need recreation and change, but are they gaining in the mad rush they make just to be in the swim?

The fact is patent that home is the foundation of all that is good in family, society or nation. Then why not make home the center point about which all others curve?

The future of our nation depends upon our home life as we all know. A friend of mine remarked, reluctantly I grant, "We don't have any home life. Sam goes to his club, I go to mine in the evening and Felix kind of amuses himself." Now depend upon it Felix will not stay indoors when he is a little older. May he be led into good places, but I'd be sorry to risk the morals of my boy, turning him loose at the mercy of numberless temptations. My friends, go to your club if you will, but I pray you in so doing see to it that the home life is not destroyed. Mr. Bok says: "American woman has not the courage to be honest with herself—She Dasn't. Let us show him that we "das't."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

BELLA'S OPERATION.

Blackeyed little Bella was the joy of the house, though she was a great child to get into mischeif. One day she was playing in the front hall and as usual she run up and down the stairs many times. Soon that was an old story too and she tried fitting her foot in the balustrade. In and out, in and out went the little foot when all at once it caught, the more she pulled the more it hurt. Then mamma, Ella, Robert and finally Dinah tried in turn to get the little foot out of its prison. Everyone was crying, and Bella was fairly frantic. Finally the old doctor, who was loved by all, was summoned and he gave them all a shock of horror by sayin: "Get a saw." How Bella screamed and how they all held their breath, expecting to see the doctor saw the poor little foot off. Now what do you think the doctor did? Why he simply sawed off the spindle that held the little foot captive, and dear little Bella was free to be coddled by each and every one in the house. The doctor went away and in a few days Bella's papa came home very much out of sorts for he had received a bill of $25.00 for surgical services rendered Miss Bella. So the members of the family decided that it was pretty expensive to let the doctor use a saw, even for the front balustrade.

Spain Will Rise From Her Ashes

By Dr. J. L. M. CURRY, Special United States Envoy to the Coronation

I WOULD NOT BE SURPRISED TO SEE, SOME DAY, THE SPANISH RACE ASTONISH THE WORLD BY RISING AND RECOVERING ITS PLACE IN THE LIST OF WORLD POWERS. This, if it comes, will take placo when the Spanish nation is completely crushed. Somehow the Spaniard cannot realize that his nation is other than one of the great world powers, but the day on which he awakens to the realization that his race and nation are despised and looked upon as a helpless nation that the weakest state in Europe may insult with impunity—when that day comes then let the world powers have a care, for the Spaniard, once that he is robbed of hope, is not only the most magnificent fighter on earth, but the most resourceful and enduring of men.

While it cannot be denied that Spain has been on the decline for centuries, yet there is one peculiar feature of the Iberian race that one must take into account in order to make sure of his conclusions. As fighters the Spaniards are not so constant and stubborn as the Germans or Anglo-Saxons, but at the same time THEY HAVE A STRANGE FACULTY OF RISING AFTER EVERYTHING IS LOST AND ALL HOPE HAS DEPARTED AND FIGHTING AS NO PEOPLE EVER HAVE FOUGHT TO REGAIN THAT WHICH THEY HAVE LOST. In this they are superior to the northern races, who fight well, no doubt, but who succumb as soon as they find that all is lost and there is no longer any hope.

THE QUEEN REGENT IS A VERY PURE AND PIOUS WOMAN, AND THE MORAL STANDARD AMONG THE NOBILITY IS VERY MUCH ABOVE THE AVERAGE OF THAT OF THE UPPER CLASSES OF THE REST OF EUROPE.

Because some of the Spanish monarchs have led dissolute lives is no reason for supposing that the people whom they ruled were of like nature, and as a matter of absolute fact the morality of the Spanish upper classes is well worth the emulation of any class of people in the world. I know very little of the personality of young Alfonso XIII., hut I take it that if he inherits the disposition and adheres to the teachings of his mother Spain may look forward to one of the best reigns in her history.

I do not look forward to any uprising or demonstration on the part of the Carlists on the occasion of Alfonso taking the oath. The Carlists' cause is very weak, and the majority of Spaniards are loyal to and satisfied with the present house, and see no occasion for a change.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sinks, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and Shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. Thor Gunsteinson has been busy this week moving his household goods and farm machinery over to his lately purchased farm in Garnes. Mr. Gunsteinson's departure from Equality will deprive us of one of our most esteemed neighbors and citizens.

The Walker Bros. passed through here with their cheese factory equipment last Monday enroute for their location, in Equality. They intend to have things ready for business and in full operation by May 1. Everything will be right up to date, as all the machinery is new and of the latest improvement. The firm certainly ought to have their share of the patronage.

Our mail carrier has had a hard time getting the mail through these muddy roads, and several times he has been obliged to carry it aback and consequently has been a few hours behind time. It was not through carelessness that he has done so, but instead he has done all that anyone could or possibly would do under the circumstances. Any one acquainted with this part of the country and its roads in the spring time, knows how difficult it is to make headway. From a practical standpoint, we have this much to say, that we pity both the man and beast that must through necessity endure the hardships, and we believe that any fair minded person would do the same. Has the old saying "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you," had its day in this part or is it simply forgotten?

Lands to the extent of 314,845 acres have been disposed of. Duluth holds the second place this year, Devils Lake, N. D., having disposed of more land.

Rev. Louis Richter, one of the oldest ministers in the Minneapolis presbytery, has been deposed from the ministry and excommunicated from the church. The accusation against Mr. Richter is that he opposed the church in its teachings of temperance and total abstinence and that he worked for and accepted pay from a Minneapolis brewing company.

The United States Savings and Loan company, a St. Paul corporation, has gone into liquidation. The step was taken at the request of Public Examiner Johnson, who sent a letter to John Douglas, the director in charge. The assets are given at $800,000 and the liabilities at an equal figure. The expenses of liquidation are expected to cause a sufficient shrinkage to give the creditors about 80 cents on the dollar. Ex-Governor Hubbard is president of the concern and ex-Governor McGill vice president.

A RARE TREAT.

PATRICOLO CONCERT COMPANY SCORES A DECIDED SUCCESS.

FOURTH AND LAST NUMBER LECTURE BY PROF. WELD NEXT MONDAY.

The Patricolo Concert, the third in the series of entertainments being given under the auspices of the City Teachers' Association, was one of the best high class entertainments ever given here.

Signor Angelo Patricolo and Herbert Butler, the pianist and violinist respectively, took the audience by storm, while Miss Neal, the reader, furnished the desired relaxation at intervals between the heavy artistic numbers. Miss Agnes Rapp, the soprano, was not received with the warmth her ability deserved, although the repeated encores showed the audience not entirely lacking in appreciation. The audience was, in fact, an enthusiastic one. The piano used was a Bush & Gerts, furnished by Anderson & Schwalen of this city.

The fourth number on the list is the lecture next Monday night at Woodmen hall, by President Weld, of the Moorhead Normal. This entertainment is furnished absolutely gratis by the Teachers' Association, who should have, by the way, public appreciation for assuming the responsibility of the guarantee, without which the entertainments could not have been secured. The total receipts to date are $218, total expenses $190, leaving a balance of $28, out of which the expenses of the forthcoming lecture are to be paid.

The subject of President Weld's lecture will be "The Short Story in American Literature" with illustrative readings from Gilbert Parker's "Pierre and His People."

Those having reserved seats must claim them by 8 o'clock, after which time they will be opened to the public.

Retrospective.

Thomas Culbentson left for Grand Forks Friday, after a two days' stay with friends here. Mr. Culbentson finds little in the Red Lake Falls of to-day to recall the past, when, nearly twenty years ago, he in company with O. F. Buse, under the firm name of Buse & Culbentson, conducted the grist mill and store at the foot of Main street. Mr. Culbentson in viewing the changes, grew thoughtful, while a suspicious moisture dimmed his eye, as he said softly:

"The old mill is gone and it seems to me but few traces remain of those happy by-gone days, outside of the few friends who are left. The very outline of the river itself seems sadly altered; the little sapling trees have grown to be majestic oaks, while the older trees have suffered destruction and decay; nothing but the creeping moss that grew to soft luxuriance as the mill wheel splashed the refreshing drops, seems to remain, clinging to all about as in days of yore, even as our memories seem to cling to the good and happy past, whose joys, (always dwarfed by the vicissitudes of the present) spring into magnified form when seen through the clarifying mists of time."

CHILD MAY DIE

CLARA KUEHL, AGED TWO YEARS, BADLY SCALDED YESTERDAY MORNING.

BOILER HANDLE BREAKS, PRECIPITATING BOILING WATER OVER CHILD.

A terrible accident befel little Clara Kuehl yesternay morning, when she was scalded while playing about the kitchen where her mother was washing.

Clara is the youngest child of three in the Kuehl family. Her mother takes in washing and Clara, who will be two years old the 5th of May, always loiters about her mother. Yesterday as usual she was by her mother's side while the good woman was at work. A boiler partially filled with hot water was being removed from the stove. One of the handles gave way, spilling the water over the little one, frightfully scalding her from head to foot.

Kind neighbors at once came to the assistance and did what they could to allay the sufferings of the child until medical aid could be summoned. Both Drs. Watson and Lemieux were soon on the scene and all that medical science could do was done.

Although the child is resting easily under the treatment being administered, the doctors do not give assurances of her recovery, although her chances are improving.

It is not thought, in event of her recovery, that she will be permanently scarred in the face, the worst burns being on the body below the neck.

Hiram's Birthday Party.

Monday afternoon a birthday party was given by Hiram Mousseau for a large number of his friends. He had them invited to celebrate his twelfth birthday anniversary and needless to say, it was celebrated in royal style. Hiram was the receiver of numerous nice presents and all who attended his party will long pleasantly remember it. The guests departed for home at six p. m. wishing their little host many happy returns of the day.

Those present were Anna, Gertie and Katie Neiwirth, Annie and Esther Lundquist, Inga Hamry, Isabella Helm, Siegert Anderson, John and Oscar Helm, Louisa Majeres, Graham Kindseth, John Rodgers, Bernard Lemay, Thos. Majeres, Arthur Holberg and Mathew Neiwirth.

Outlook for Red Lake Treaty.

The Red Lake Indian treaty, which was sent to congress last week, will have to take its chance as a separate measure. It was the intention to have it put as a rider on the Indian appropriation bill, but the senate took up that bill sooner than was expected. There will be little difficulty in passing it through the senate, but a hard fight will be necessary to get it through the house. It carries an appropriation and will be put on the "union" calendar, and can be called up only by a special rule, or on a day set aside for suspension of the rules and passage of bills by a two-thirds vote. There is no doubt that it will be reported favorably in both houses.

JIM HILL'S LETTER

ROSEAU COUNTY PEOPLE ARE SURE NOW IT MEANS A RAILROAD.

Roseau county is a large territory rich in resources as yet almost wholly undeveloped, and the natural outlet of this country is through the extension of the Red Lake Falls branch of the Great Northern to Thief River Falls north. People of this vicinity will be glad to learn of anything going into the material prosperity of Roseau county. Following is some recent correspondence that has raised the hope of Roseau citizens to a high pitch of enthusiasm:

> St. Paul, Minn, April 5.
> Mr. J. R. Bell, Roseau, Minnesota.
>
> Dear Sir:—I beg to acknowledge your letter of the second instant and carefully note what you say relative to the development of Roseau county. We will try, sometime this season, to send an engineer into the field and have him look the situation over.
>
> Yours truly,
>
> —J J. Hill.

The above is the answer of President Hill to a letter written him by Mr. Bell of Roseau in which the attention of Mr. Hill was called to the development, settlement and resources of Roseau county. The communication set forth accurately and in detail everything pertaining to the development of Roseau county and the urgent need of railroad facilities. As will be seen the response of Mr. Hill was not delayed and it would seem reasonably sure that the field would be looked over at an early date, and no one can doubt the result. There is no new territory in the state that will pay a railroad better than Roseau county, from the day regular trains begin to run. The engineer who looks Roseau county over cannot help but make a favorable report, and Mr. Hill will no doubt act upon it in his usual quick, and decisive manner.

FIRE AT BADGER.

JOS. DUCHARME'S HOUSE AND CONTENTS DESTROYED LAST THURSDAY.

LOSS FOOTS UP TO $1,000—NARROW ESCAPE FOR ONE OF INMATES.

Last Thursday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Ducharme were in from Badger shopping. When they returned home they found nothing but a smoldering mass of ruins to mark the spot where had stood their home for the past twenty years. All was gone—house and contents.

The building was a landmark, known as the Badger hotel, and its hospitable roof has sheltered many a wayfarer.

The fire originated from a stove pipe which served as a chimney. A hot fire had been kept up by the young ladies at home, and it is thought some clothing on the second floor must have come into contact with the pipe. Joseph, who was at work in the field, discovered the flames and ran back to warn the inmates who were in total ignorance of the fact that the house was on fire. There was no indication of it down stairs, and after the alarm had been given, the eldest girl, unobserved by the others, ran up to investigate. The upper story was dense with smoke and the fumes were too much for her. She was overcome and sank down upon the floor. No one in the house knowing of her exploit, she would surely have perished in the flames, had not her brother Joe decided to go up stairs to make an effort to save his clothing. The smoke was so dense it was as black as midnight, and he could see nothing. He stumbled over his sister's prostrate form. Realizing in a moment what had happened, he succeeded in dragging her to the landing and carrying her down-stairs and out of the burning building.

The loss on building and furniture is in the neighborhood of $1,000, and there was no insurance.

A committee of Mr. Ducharme's neighbors,—Messrs. Bruno Desrosier, Louis St. Yves and Evangelist Quesnel, passed a subscription list last Saturday and a liberal amount was raised towards putting up a new house.

DITCHES GALORE

THIRTEEN COUNTY DITCHES ALREADY ESTABLISHED --MORE COMING.

Contracts for the construction of new three county ditches will be let on Monday, the 28th inst., to the lowest responsible bidder. With the letting of these contracts Red Lake county will have provided for seventy-four miles of ditches, as follows:

Rocksbury No. 1	1
Badger Creek No. 1	3

HILL'S FIRST MOVE

MOTION TO VACATE SUMMONS IN THE SUIT AGAINST RAILWAY MERGER.

Minneapolis Woman Suicides on the Grave of Her Brother—Duluth Tug Firemen Still on Strike for Higher Wages—Fabulous Prices Paid for Lands in Redwood County.—News of the State in General.

St. Paul, April 11.—The first move of the various interests concerned in the railway merger as against the suit instituted by the State of Minnesota in the Ramsey district court was taken by President Hill's attorneys during the day when they served notice upon Attorney General Douglas of a motion to vacate service in the summons and complaint of the State of Minnesota against the Northern Securities company and against President James J. Hill of that corporation and of the Great Northern road.

The motion will come before the Ramsey district court for argument on Saturday next. It will be heard at special term of court.

The position of the railways will be based on the claim that the Northern Securities company is a New Jersey [illegible] and as such outside the [illegible] of the Minnesota courts. It will also be asserted that James J. Hill['s] [illegible] in this state is merely [illegible] and as such he is not amenable to the laws in the case as he would be under [illegible] conditions.

ON HER BROTHER'S GRAVE.

Mrs. August Schlosa Commits Suicide in a Minneapolis Cemetery.

Minneapolis, April 10.—During the morning August Schlosa was notified by telephone by his wife, who had been missing from home since the day before to meet her at St. Anthony cemetery, at Central and Twenty-eight street northeast. He told her that he would be there as soon as he could come, so he mounted his wheel and rode with all possible speed to the place designated. Just as he rode into the cemetery he saw his wife standing by the side of her brother's grave. As soon as she saw him she waved her hand, and drew from the folds of her dress a revolver, and, placing it against her head, she fired. After she had fallen she fired a second shot, which also took effect in her head.

When her husband reached her side she was lying directly across the grave and blood was flowing profusely from the wounds. Two pedestrains also saw the shooting, and they hurried to the assistance of the grief-stricken husband, and the poor woman was taken to a nearby engine house, a physician was summoned and the wounds hurriedly dressed. From there the woman was taken to the city hospital in the patrol wagon. She died about 2:30. Trouble with relatives had unbalanced her mind.

FABULOUS PRICES FOR LAND.

Lots in Unorganized Townsite in Redwood County Sell for $1,375.

Redwood, Falls, Minn., April 12.—The sale of lots in the towns on the new line of railroad that crosses Redwood county from east to west began this week. At Milroy, in the town of Westline, prices soared away up. The first lot sold brought $1,375, the second $1,280, and the third over $1,000. Sixty lots were sold in all, the total receipts being $26,000. These prices are something unprecedented. There is nothing but bare prairie at the town site. A village will spring up at once. Lots in three other towns will be placed on sale next week. The grade for the road was completed last fall and track laying will begin in a few days. The company expects to have the track laid and trains running regularly inside of 60 days.

STIRKERS ARE PERSISTENT.

Tug Firemen at Duluth Want Sixty Dollars a Month.

Duluth, Minn., April 10.—The persistence with which the striking tug firemen are holding out for an increase in their wages to $60 per month is given much concern to marine interests at the head of the lakes and it is feared that unless it is soon settled other organizations, particularly the lumber shovers, will strike in sympathy. At a meeting held here Captain W. H. Hill, local manager of the Great Lakes Towing company, agreed to compromise with the tug firemen on a basis of $52.50 a month until September, when $60 would be paid. The firemen will consider the proposition. Boats now coming into the local port whistle in vain for tugs and are compelled to land the best way they can.

JOHN G. RENO'S LIFE CLOSED.

Pioneer of Minneapolis Dies of Stroke of Apoplexy.

Minneapolis, April 11.—Captain John C. Reno, one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Minneapolis, and one of the pioneer river captains of the Mississippi, died at his residence here at 12:30 a. m. Death was due to a stroke of apoplexy, although Captain Reno had been ailing for the past two weeks. Had Captain Reno lived until Dec. 30 next he would have reached the advanced age of 80 years.

Watchman Crushed to Death.

St. Paul, April 14.—John Donovan, night watchman at the Ryan annex building, was crushed to death in the passenger elevator during the early hours of the morning. His lifeless body was found pinioned between the top of the elevator cage and the floor on the sixth floor of the building at 7 o'clock by the day elevator operator.

Flour Mill Destroyed.

Jordan, Minn., April 8.—The 250-barrel flour mill, owned by H. H. King & Co. of Minneapolis, was destroyed by fire together with an elevator owned by the firm. The mill cost $15,000. The loss on property will be about $25,000.

WILL NOT OBEY ORDER.

Great Northern Railway Appeals Minnesota Terminal Tariffs.

St. Paul April 8.—The Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads will not obey the order of the railway commission in regard to the terminal tariffs at Crookston, Fergus Falls and other Northern points without a fight.

The Great Northern road has served a notice of appeal upon the commission to the Ramsey county court. The document is not a lengthy affair and simply sets forth the facts and the law in the matter as the legal department of the road sees them.

In the first instance the Great Northern contends that the commission had no authority or jurisdiction under which to make the order appealed from.

The second point is that the rates now in force from the Northern cities affected by the order, as well as from other stations on the lines of the Great Northern in Minnesota, when the order was made were just and reasonable and that the modification of such rates fixed by the order of the commission is unjust, unreasonable and discriminating.

LAID DOWN IN WATER.

Prominent Resident of Albert Lea Commits Suicide.

Albert Lea, Minn., April 13.—Yesterday afternoon Frank B. Folses, who was partially paralyzed and almost helpless, left the Gilbert House, where he boarded. This morning when it was learned he was not at the house of a relative, searching parties were sent out.

The search was not a long one, for his lifeless body was found in the shallow water on the shore of Fountain lake.

He had left his overcoat on the shore and walked out a few feet and laid down and drowned.

Mr. Folses had been county treasurer three terms and was a prominent Mason. He was divorced from his first wife, and shortly after marrying again was stricken with paralysis. He had been heard to say he might sometime take his life.

SUE FOR MUCH MONEY.

Estate of Relative of Eastern People Causes Suit at Late Day.

Winona, Minn., April 11.—A suit involving 8,000 acres of land and a total of about $150,000 has been begun in the United States circuit court at this place. The bill of complaint has been filed with Deputy Clerk Sheardown here. The suit is in the nature of a bill in equity. Albert H. Hayes and others bring action to recover money alleged to be due them through misadministration of the estate of George B. Hayes, who died in 1885 possessed of extensive acres. About $150,000 is involved. The complainants reside in Massachusetts.

SUICIDED IN JAIL.

August Schubert Hangs Himself Because His Wife Did Not Call.

Glenwood, Minn., April 12.—August Schubert, serving a jail sentence for assault on his wife, hanged himself with a towel tied to the side of his cell four feet above the floor. The sheriff found him in a squatting position, while his body was warm.

He became morose because his wife did not call on him when in town and said she could bring a coffin the next time she came. He was about 52 years old and left several children. His home was in Grove Lake township, this county.

STRANGE CATTLE DISEASE.

One Stockman in Minnesota Loses Two Hundred Head.

St. Cloud, Minn., April 12.—A strange disease has infected the cattle near Richmond, Stearns county, and many farmers have been heavy losers, one having lost 200 head. The disease is different from anything ever before experienced, the cattle appearing to be insane, with a continual discharge from the eyes and mouth. A member of the state veterinarian board was summoned and killed two cattle, but has as yet made no report of his findings.

Log Drive Held Back.

Duluth, April 12.—S. F. Fullerton, state fish and game warden, has secured an important concession from the Tower Lumber company of Tower. The game and fish commission hopes to get 100,000,000 pike spawn from Pike river, but if the lumber company's logs get started there will be no pike available in the stream. Mayor Woodard of Tower, manager of the company, today told Mr. Fullerton he would have the logs held back until the state had secured the fish spawn.

ONE OF THE CREW KILLED.

Colombian Insurgents Seize Launch of American Company.

Chicago, April 14.—The Tribune's New Orleans special says:

News has reached here of the confiscation of an American steam launch by Colombian insurgents at Bocas del Toro, north of Colon. One of the American crew was killed and his body thrown overboard. The insurgents escaped with the boat, but a United States cruiser has gone to recover it.

The steamer Taunton of the United Fruit company's line reached port during the day from Bocas del Toro bringing the news.

The revolutionists for a month have been planning to seize the numerous steam launches employed by the fruit shippers, load barges with troops and move on Bocas. This was what about 300 insurgents attempted and partially carried out on April 6.

SIGNED BY CUMMINS.

Iowa Railway "Merger Bill" Becomes a Law.

Des Moines, April 14.—Governor Cummins has signed what is known as the Hubbard railway "merger" bill, authorizing railways organized in Iowa to absorb connecting lines anywhere in the United States and enjoy the same privileges as have heretofore been limited to lines wholly in Iowa and adjoining states. The bill was amended so as to prevent the merger of competing or parallel lines.

Let Rural Free Delivery Remain as It Is

By Congressman LEONIDAS F. LIVINGSTON of Georgia

THERE has been a great deal done by the government looking to the increase of mail facilities in this country within the last 100 years. My father, who was born in 1803 and died three or four months ago at the age of ninety-eight, told me that when he was twelve years old he rode twelve miles to mail his first letter and paid 25 cents postage. Before he died he succeeded in putting a free rural route by his door, and at ninety-eight years of age he had his mail delivered daily without cost. That was quite a step in the progress made on that line. Only a few years ago this rural free delivery mail began as an experiment and has succeeded beyond the expectation of its most ardent supporters.

IF THE RURAL SECTIONS IN THIS COUNTRY ARE ENTITLED TO A FREE DAILY MAIL DELIVERY, THEY SHOULD HAVE A RELIABLE ONE AND A PROMPT ONE, AND ANY ACTION ON THE PART OF CONGRESS THAT WOULD DISORGANIZE OR DERANGE IN ANY WAY THE PROGRESS OF THE MAIL FACILITIES TO THE PEOPLE AS NOW ORGANIZED WOULD BE A CRIME.

On many of the oldest routes established the system is practically self sustaining, the patrons are rejoicing, and now comes a proposition to make a radical change in the system and one that has worked so unsatisfactorily in the "star route plan."

These people are entitled to a good and reliable mail service. From the conservative rural middle class of our country come the dominating men in every section of our land, in every department of life. The prosperity and the stability of this republic of ours depend not upon the boys bred and raised in the cities, but upon the men and the women reared in the country. Then why not step aside if necessary and spend a little more money to help this class of people when we are so dependent upon them for much that is good and great in this country of ours? AS A FARMER, LIVING ON THE FARM, A FRIEND OF RURAL FREE MAIL DELIVERY, BELIEVE ME WHEN I SAY THAT IF THE "SERVICE IS CONTINUED ON PRESENT LINES IT WILL GREATLY AID AND FACILITATE THE DEVELOPMENT OF RURAL DISTRICTS, MAKE FARM LIFE MORE COMFORTABLE AND FAR MORE DESIRABLE, INCREASE THE VALUE OF FARM LANDS AND TEND TO PREVENT THE FURTHER CONGESTION OF POPULATION IN LARGE CITIES, WHICH HAS BECOME A PERIL TO OUR INSTITUTIONS."

half a minute. Then the captain advanced to the young man and led him by the arm into the vestibule.

"What are you here for, Elmendorf?" he demanded in a low voice. "Headquarters don't need to mix up in this case. I can look out for it."

"Orders," replied Elmendorf. "That's all I know. The chief wants a report."

"Well, he'll get one, won't he?" asked the captain. "Now, see here; don't take a step till I say so. I know what I'm about."

Elmendorf strolled into the room and sat down in a large chair with a sigh. Then, perceiving that Brenda was standing, he rose hastily, very much to the young lady's surprise.

"By the way," said the captain "while we're waiting I want to ask you about Mr. Alden. We've sent word to his office, but he isn't there. They don't know where he's gone. You knew him quite well, didn't you? I noticed how quick you recognized his handwriting."

"Yes," said Brenda. "I knew him quite well."

"And you knew Miss Miller?"

"I never saw her," replied Brenda after a moment's hesitation.

"Why, Miss Williams," exclaimed Neale, with a grotesque attempt to speak softly. "I thought you said you were a friend of hers!"

"I hardly knew what to say to the policemen at the door," replied Brenda calmly. "I was very anxious to get in. And let me add that I am at present very anxious to get out."

"Just one minute," said the captain. "You knew Mr. Alden. Now, did you happen to know of any young woman that he was particularly sweet on?"

"I have heard," replied Brenda slowly, "that he was at one time engaged to a girl who had a great deal of money and some social standing, but I understand that that has been broken off. It can have no possible bearing upon this crime, which was plainly the work of a thief."

"You're thinking of the money," said Neale, caressing his projecting chin with a great, square hand, "the money Alden is alleged to have put into the letter. It can't be found, and that's a fact."

"Is alleged to have put into the letter!" exclaimed Brenda. "Why, he says so himself."

"Yes," responded the captain, "that's what he says."

An interval of silence followed. Brenda was leaning forward, her right hand resting on the table, her eyes intent upon the officer's face. They were gray eyes ordinarily, and their expression spoke of the cultivated self restraint by which the natural emotions are held in check. On this occasion, however, they seemed to be of a dark blue and to emit a light which even Dr. Blair, who saw the lady in profile, did not fail to perceive.

CHAPTER III.

CAPTAIN NEALE RESENTS AN IMPUTATION.

SOME one put a key into the lock of the front door, and the faint sound of it was distinctly audible in that room. The grawling voice of a policeman in the hall said: "Hold on! You can't go"—

And seemingly in the same instant a young man appeared upon the threshold of the room. He took two steps forward and then halted, the others facing him.

He was one of those men whose tremendous vital energy declares itself unmistakably. As he stood there, perfectly still, the power within him seemed to affect the air. It was as when one feels the tension of an engine that is at rest, but ready. When such a man advances, neither the ordinary obstacles nor even his own will can stop him.

"Brenda!" he said in a singularly restrained voice, very ill suited to his words. "Why in the name of heaven are you here?"

"If I know," she answered, "it was because I wanted to help her, because I couldn't have her die like this. I"—

"Where is she?"

"They have taken her to a hospital—St. Winifred's."

The young man snatched up his hat, which had fallen to the floor.

"Wait a minute!" exclaimed Neale. "You're Alden—Clarence M. Alden?"

"Yes."

"Well, I want to talk to you. Wait! If you go down there, you can't get in nor find out anything; that's orders. You'll get more information here."

"Is she living?" demanded Alden.

"Yes," replied the captain. "If she dies, I shall know of it within five minutes, and that's quicker than you could learn of it anywhere else. Let me manage this. I'll take good care of you. I'll see that you get every word of news. Meanwhile let's get down to business. You sent that note to her?"

"I did."

"With $500 in it?"

"Yes."

"When?"

"At ten minutes after 2 I sent it by John Robinson, a clerk in my office."

"Where is he now?"

"I don't know," answered Alden. "I didn't wait for him to come back. Now, answer my question. Who did this thing?"

Neale spread his hands abroad with a grotesque gesture intended to disclaim the possession of the information.

"We're all at sea," he said. "Somebody got into this room and stabbed the girl with this knife."

He suddenly lifted a newspaper that had lain on the table and disclosed the weapon beneath it. The long blade was open and visibly stained with blood. Brenda's hand had been within six inches of it, and at the sight she started back with such alarm that Dr. Blair stretched out his arm to support her. She did not fail, however, but stood rigid, staring at Alden.

The color rushed to his face. He put up his hand and pushed back the tangle of light brown hair that was lying moist upon his forehead.

"Recognize it?" said Neale, with his mirthless grin.

"It is mine," replied Alden in the same repressed and steady tone that he had used throughout this scene. "I gave it to her."

"When?"

"A few days ago," said Alden. "I don't exactly remember."

"Queer present," rejoined the captain, "for a girl."

"She was cutting some pictures out of the magazines," replied Alden. "I happened to have the knife in my pocket. She used it, and I didn't take it back."

The captain slowly nodded his head, as one who has reached the end of a topic and is preparing for the next.

"And now," said he, "how long have you known this young lady?"

He waved his hand toward Brenda.

"I have known Miss Maclane a long time," said Alden. "Why do you ask?"

"Miss Maclane, eh?" said the captain, elevating the strange tufts of partly colored hair that were his eyebrows. "I understood that her name was Williams."

"I have done an absurdly foolish thing," said Brenda, addressing Alden. "I was afraid my name would be published, and so I tried to deceive these people."

"Big mistake," rejoined Captain Neale, shaking his head solemnly. "This whole story will have to come out, and if the facts are known to the police at the start it will come out straight; otherwise there's no telling what the reporters will do with it."

"There is no reason whatever," said Alden, "why Miss Maclane should be brought into this affair."

"There isn't, eh?" said the captain. "Why is she here? Sympathy for a woman that she says she never saw? No; I guess we'll have to have something better."

"If you don't get it," said Alden, "what then?"

"I'll have to hold her as a witness."

"You mean that you will put me under arrest?" demanded Brenda, her face and even her lips absolutely colorless.

"I'll have to," said the captain.

"And suppose that I answer all your questions now?" she asked.

Neale struck his hand down upon the table.

"You can go home just as soon as you've done it," he declared, and at that moment a man in plain clothes, but with the unmistakable stamp of the police upon him, entered the room and saluted his superior.

"Excuse me for a minute," said Neale, and, accompanied by the man who had just appeared upon the scene, he stepped out into the hall.

Brenda turned to Dr. Blair, who was leaning against the mantelpiece.

"Dr. Blair," she whispered, "you will not say that it was I whom you saw leaving this house?"

"No," replied the physician slowly; "I will not."

"What does this mean?" demanded Alden.

Dr. Blair regarded Alden steadily for some seconds before he said with that careful measuring of words that doctors learn:

"I have informed the police that as I was passing this house, very near to the time when this deed was done, I saw a person—a woman—come out and walk away hurriedly toward Broadway."

"A woman?" repeated Alden, as if speaking without volition.

"She cannot be accounted for," continued the doctor. "No one knows who she is or why she was here or how she got into the house. As to the last point, however, I will say this: I had a room in this house for a few weeks while repairs were in progress at No. 160, where I live, and I then noticed that the spring lock on the front door did not always hold. If the lock has not been repaired, there may be an explanation of some mysterious points in this case."

If there had been an eye upon Detective Elmendorf at this moment, it would have noted that he was much interested, but no one was looking at him. He himself was observing Brenda closely.

Alden had begun to pace the floor, his hand upon his forehead.

"I can't stay here any longer," he said suddenly. "I must see Elsie. I must know— Jack! How came you here?"

The question was addressed to a young man who entered with Captain Neale. He was in his normal state a rather handsome fellow, with the ox eyes that the Greeks admired (for women) and a broad forehead above them, but in this moment his face was distorted with excitement and striped with perspiration that trickled from his forehead. The total effect was somewhat grotesque, especially because the man was inclined to fatness and was a trifle conspicuous in the matter of attire.

He took two steps forward and then halted.

"This is dreadful, dreadful!" he cried. "I can't believe it."

"You're Mr. Robinson, who carried the note to Miss Miller," said Neale. "That's why I sent a man to your house."

"Yes," said Robinson, turning to Alden. "I didn't go back to the office immediately. I went over to the place where I live. I was just going down town again when a policeman met me at the door."

"Did you know what was in that note?" asked Neale.

"I knew there was money," was the reply, "but I didn't know how much. It was sealed when Mr. Alden gave it to me. He said there was money in it. That was why I brought it instead of giving it to a messenger boy."

"What happened here?" the captain asked.

"Nothing," answered Robinson. "I gave the note to Elsie"—

"To whom?" said the captain.

"To Miss Miller; that is what I said. I gave the note to Miss Miller, and she opened it by the window. I didn't see any money. I wasn't in the room ten seconds—merely long enough to ask if there was any answer, and she said no. Then I went away."

"Meet anybody?"

"The servant who let me in was passing through the hall as I went out."

"That's important," said the captain. "It fixes you all right. The servant stopped at Miss Miller's door, knocked, asked a question and got an answer. Then she went along down stairs."

"Fixes me!" gasped Robinson. "Is anybody crazy enough to think I did this?"

"No," said the captain. "You're out of it. And now, Mr. Alden, let me tell you that I've just had a report from the hospital. The girl is alive, and the doctors think she has a fair chance."

"What does she say?" exclaimed Robinson.

"She hasn't said anything yet," replied the captain. "And now let's get on with our little affairs here. I guess you can't help us any, Mr. Robinson, so if you'll just take a seat in the parlor"— He waited till the young man had passed out of the room. "Now, Miss Maclane, I'd like to know a little more about you if it's perfectly agreeable."

"I am the daughter of Duncan Maclane," said Brenda.

At the mention of this wealthy and widely known man Neale softly whistled.

"It ain't possible," he said, "that you are the young lady with a lot of money and a high social position that you mentioned awhile ago as being engaged to our friend here?"

"I am the woman," replied Brenda.

"And the engagement's been broken off? When?"

"Captain"— began Alden, but the officer raised his hand.

"A bargain's a bargain," he said. "I was to have the truth. When was the engagement broken off?"

"This afternoon," answered Brenda firmly. "I went down to Mr. Alden's office at half past 1. I had expected to see him last evening, but"—

"He didn't come?"

Brenda inclined her head.

"I went to his office," she said, "and in the conversation between us there I released him from his engagement."

"That must have been a hard blow for you, Mr. Alden," said the captain.

"What do you mean?" demanded Alden. "If you have the delicacy to appreciate my feeling"—

"I was thinking especially about your business," said Neale. "I'm told your firm is in the last ditch, and that your engagement to Duncan Maclane's daughter is about all that holds you up. That's what my man told me just now."

"He told you a lie," said Alden, but with the same monotonous tone, as if his utterance was mechanical and his mind upon another matter. "My affairs were never before so prosperous as they are today."

"That won't do," responded the captain. "I have positive proof"—

"You know nothing about it," said Alden. "I have other interests than those of my firm."

"What other interests?"

"I decline to answer."

"Where did you go when you left your office after sending that note?"

PUBLIC OPINION.

The fickleness of public opinion was never more forcibly demonstrated than in the case of President Roosevelt and the Booker T. Washington incident. When Roosevelt became president, the people saw in him a man who represented the predominating elements of our nation as they had never before been represented. The South, with its hot blooded clinging to old sentiments and prejudices; the West, with its clear-cut individuality; the East, in its pampered feeling of dominance and power,—these sections all felt that in the new president they had a personal representative who understood them, who was indeed part of them, and this was in part true. But the hectic flush of jubilation had scarce faded in the South when the President invited a Negro to dine with him. The result is history. It was all up with Roosevelt in the South. And only those who understand the almost incredible sectional hatred toward the black man, and the undying enmity that makes between him and his white brother of the South an impassable social gulf, can know the depth of the feeling aroused by the President's action—characterized at the time by his best friends as a "bad break" that never could be mended. Public opinion in the South was up in arms against the President, and the feeling was bitter in the extreme.

But that is all over now. The President is "Down South" and the people there are receiving him with open arms. The Booker Washington incident is forgotten. Governor Aycock, of North Carolina, a typical Southerner, said when questioned as to his impressions of Mr. Roosevelt:

"I like him. He is a fine fellow. He reminds me of a big, strong, vigorous boy. His speech at Charleston was magnificent and I in common with every one else in the audience was impressed with his simplicity and earnestness. He is a big man, and his southern trip will do incalculable good."

A press despatch from North Carolina commenting on the President's trip says:

"Governor Aycock voices a general sentiment in this state. The President visited Charleston during North Carolina week, when more than half the visitors to the exposition were from this state, and these have almost forgotten the Booker Washington episode in their admiration for an unpretentious, kindly gentleman and president. Mr. Roosevelt's recognition of the Mecklenburg declaration of independence in his speech in this city has made him friends for life, and the hail-fellow-well-met spirit of the president captivated citizens from all parts of the state who saw him or heard him speak at Charleston. Said one well-known official:

He is the kind of a man that you would like to ask to take a drink. When he swings that ponderous lower jaw and leans forward to speak he has the attitude of a man tense with feeling, who raises his fist, jams it hard against a table and says: "I'll be damned if it isn't so," and you believe him. He will get all the backing that North Carolina can give a republican president."

Thus has fickle public sentiment in the South veered around like a weather cock in a shifting wind.

It is ever thus, and those who trim their sails to every passing breeze will be capsized, while he who is guided by principle with the motive to follow the course prompted by the best that is in him, calmly rides the seas and triumphs.

President Roosevelt's strongest characteristic is his utter disregard for consequences. He does his duty as he sees it. When the public once thoroughly understands such a man they come to honor, appreciate and trust him.

IT'S UP TO THE VOTER.

The constitutionality of new primary election law which is bothering the politicians has just been tested in the supreme court. Henry Fitz, prohibition nominee for mayor of St. Paul, made the claim that the feature of the new law, providing that the person desiring to vote at the primaries must declare his party affiliations before he may cast his ballot was a violation of the secrecy of the ballot, and on this theory brought the case. The supreme court decision, not only declares the law constitutional, but in addition holds that nominations by conventions are no longer good. This will set at rest all doubts in the premises and the politicians and the people may now settle down to a trial of the practical workings of the new law which will revolutionize policital methods in this state. However, as the shrewd manipulator has in the past fashioned the conditions to his own ends, so he will find a way out of his present dilemma. Perhaps his power will be in a measure gone. Nominations will no longer be made in conventions, which will do away with trades and counter-trades. But the work of the machinist will now begin at the root, and all his wiles will be used to influence the result at the primaries. The indifference of the masses to caucuses in the past does not bode well for their appreciation of their new powers. The primaries are very apt to be neglected. The personally interested ones will leave nothing undone to herd the vote. While the masses have the power to place in nomination good men, will they bestir themselves in time, or will they sit supinely by ignoring their privileges? The choice rests entirely with the people. The opportunities are theirs. It remains to be seen whether or not they will be utilized.

The situation is simply this: It's up to the voter.

There has been in this state a fine opening for an able and resourceful newspaper man to build a great newspaper institution, by supplying the demands of Minnesota Democracy for a representative newspaper—an organ, to use a less agreeable, but more expressive word. Several attempts were made during the last campaign to establish such an institution, but without success. The St. Paul Globe, long recognized as the official state Democratic paper, has never regained the confidence of the Demorcatic masses since its opposition to Bryan in the campaign of 1896. Now comes the Red Wing Argus, established before the war, the oldest Democratic paper in the state, Messrs. Pardee and Schmied declare. "Minnesota Democracy singularly needs a vehicle of communication—the Argus is going to supply that need" they announce. L. A. Rosing says John Stone Pardee, the editor, is a writer second to none in the state; Emil Schmied, the business manager, is experienced. And so the new Argus is launched. May it successfully ride the turbulent waters it has chosen as its sphere. The undertaking is not a light one; the public is unappreciative; but with the right hand at the rudder the venture should result in success.

Red Lake Falls was never in as fine a condition as she is to-day. Prosperity smiles upon us from all sides. Old established business institutions are all doing well, and new ones are constantly coming in. The vacant lands tributary to the city are constantly filling up with the right class of farmers, and altogether conditions were never more healthy or satisfactory.

The People's Party State convention has been called to meet at Minneapolis on Wednesday, July 2.

HAIR AND EYES.

I wonder how many mothers wet their children's hair in getting them ready for school. It is pleasant to see dear little Tommy or Dick or Lucy coming along with smooth curls, but when you investigate a little more closely, will you not find the same cherub of wet curls to be afflicted with catarrh? And what wonder. With hair soaked he goes through the frosty air. Now, mothers, you are all very careful to remain indoors when your hair is wet. Why do you not take the same care of your child?

There are many ways of getting a child's hair smooth without using water. As to the curls—if it endangers the health of your little one, let the curls go, until the weather is duly warm.

Bay rum is excellent to use on the hair. It will keep the head clean if rubbed on the scalp. A little vasaline is sure to make the hair smooth. Of course it will not make curls—but it will not give catarrh, either.

Now as to eyes.

What volumes could be written on the subject!

The eyes of the precious little stranger just embarked on this life's journey need looking after and too much care cannot be given children's eyes. At any time a strong light in an infant's eyes is bad. The eyes of the sleeping child should always be guarded from a glaring light. Then when the school days come along and when story-reading is indulged in,—then it is that one cannot watch the growing child too carefully. There seems to be something fascinating about stealing into some poorly lighted corner to read. Do see to it, mothers, and insist upon it, that your children read or work in a good light. That does not mean a glaring light but one so shaded that the eyes do not suffer. Your child will no doubt say "I can see" when admonished. It is a question in my mind how long he will be able to see if you permit him to read in the dusk or in poor light. Thanks to an ever watchful mother the writer and many more in the family have lived along, several of them, away past the usual age for wearing glasses without the need of any help in that regard.

We cannot be too careful dear mothers. We all want to give to the world men and women who are as near perfect as can be morally, mentally and physicially and we cannot accomplish what we desire unless we are ever on the alert for the well being of those so very dear to our hearts.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

My Dear Children:

You like to hear about other children's good times I know, so to-day I'll tell you about some children living away down in Arkansas. They have a fond papa and mamma and such a kind maid whom they love dearly. Their name is Jason. Now papa Jason had just built a beautiful new home for them and mamma and the maid were talking about how nice it was to have everything in order in such a lovely house.

The children were in the attic play-room as it was raining, and anyway they enjoyed being up there. There was a store room on the same floor, so of coure, they went in there. "Let's make it snow," said Lill, the eldest. "How?" asked the other five all at once. "I'll show you," said Lill as she ripped a hole in a feather bed that hung in the room. She took out a handful of feathers and let them fly. It was great fun and of course next thing all the others made it snow. Then they begun to chase one another around the attic. Each one had a handful of feathers trying to "snow ball" the others. Pretty soon they chased one another down the back stairway and up the front. Mamma and the maid were in the sewing room but the noise grew so loud that they wondered what caused the fun. What a sight met their eyes when they came to the stairway. Feathers all over the hall, down into the room below, feathers up the stairs clear into the attic, and here mamma and the maid Nellie, found a terrible state of affairs. Nellie felt like crying but mamma was too provoked to cry. The feathers were lost and the feather-bed had been a gift from the dear grandma years ago. The clean new house had to be cleaned from top to bottom, and there were feathers in the house for weeks after even with all the cleaning. Now dear children, if any of you have the least notion to make it snow with feathers just change your minds for if you could see the whipping the Jason children got you would think it wiser to leave the feathers where they belong. That is what the Jason children have decided to do for they will never forget how their mamma punished the whole crowd the day they made it snow.

HOUSEHOLD.

Children should be taught that it ruins books to place them face down, when open. Also that dropping a book is harder on it than a year's careful usage. Why? Show them how it loosens the bindings when either of the above mentioned misuses take place. If taught that it is rude to turn down a leaf the little ones will not think of doing so. I call to mind a large library belonging to a family of children. I am safe to say there is not a dog-eared leaf in a single book. They love their books as dear friends.

THE FUTURE MAN

By Professor
Henry L. Bruner
Of Butler College

THE SEX OF THE FUTURE MAN WILL BE PREDETERMINABLE. FOR A TIME THERE WILL BE A PREPONDERANCE OF ONE SEX AND THEN OF ANOTHER. THE FIRST GENERATION PROBABLY WILL SHOW A PREFERENCE FOR BOYS. PREDOMINANCE OF THE MALE WILL RESULT IN A DEMAND FOR MORE FEMALES, AND THERE WILL CONSEQUENTLY BE A REACTION IN FAVOR OF WOMEN IN THE SECOND GENERATION, BUT EVENTUALLY THE TWO SEXES WILL BE EQUALLY DIVIDED AS TO NUMBERS.

"Of course I do," the lady went on imperturbably. "Now, women never try to make each other eat their words, no matter how angry they may be."

"What reason?" she demanded.

"Because their digestive apparatus is inferior to their vocabulary."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Why Water Won't Fry.

Why cannot we fry in water? Because water can only be heated to the boiling point, 212 degrees, and any additional heat does not increase its temperature. Two hundred and twelve degrees of heat will not brown the surface of anything. Fat, on the contrary, can be made much hotter, the temperature depending on the kind. There is a lesson here for the economical housewife. Don't stuff the stove with fuel when the vegetables, meat, etc., are already boiling. They cook no faster because of the increase of heat.

"Why, your grace can do no more than look at it and you have allowed me to do the same."—All the Year Round.

Little Nels Skomedahl, the paralyzed boy we have often before mentioned, passed away Friday morning at two o'clock after many months of suffering and hardship. Poor little fellow, he is out of his misery now and gone to the land of rest, where loved ones have gone before. His last days on earth were long and sad for him and without a mother's protection. There was no joy for him in this life and he withered a way in the stillness of death like the last rose of summer. Nels was now nearly six years old. He left a kind father, sister and brother to mourn his loss. He was buried on Sunday in the Riverside cemetery beside his loved ones. The bereaved father has indeed the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community for he has a burden to carry that but few could. In less than two years he has lost his wife and four children. Just think of it and say, "Have we done our duty to the stricken father and the motherless?"

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

QUICK RELIEF FROM PAIN.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sinks, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Sometime ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and Shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by W. A. Schreiter

THIEF RIVER FALLS BUSINESS HOUSES CONSUMED BY FIRE.

OCCURRED SUNDAY MORNING AND ENDANGERED THE WHOLE TOWN.

The town of Thief River Falls came near being wiped out by fire Sunday morning. As it was the main business part of the town was destroyed and had it not been for a sudden change in the wind, and the excellent work of the fire department, the entire town would have been wiped out.

The fire originated in the barn of Mr. Rollis and was first discovered at about 11 o'clock The blaze soon spread to the adjoining property and before many minutes nearly all of one end of the block was on fire. The bowling alley belonging to Beardsmore & Bradley was totally destroyed, entailing a loss of about $500. The C. O. D. clothing store, owned by Kennison & Connery; a bicycle shop, owned by Alex Dixon, and the livery barn owned by Olaf Ramstad were all burned to the ground. The horses were saved from the livery barn, but a horse and a cow were burned in the barn belonging to Mr. Rollis, where the fire originated. A considerable portion of the stock was saved from the C. O. D. clothing store. The windows in the saloons on the opposite side of the street were broken and the building were slightly damaged. Several telephone poles were burned down and the wires fell to the ground. The telephone company's lines were not injured.

The firemen worked faithfully and succeeded in getting the fire out by 1 o'clock. The citizens were pretty badly scared and at 12 telephoned to Chief Morris of the Crookston fire department for assistance. However, they decided that they could get the fire under control before the apparatus could arrive from there and nothing was done.

The wind changed and the brick block of the Central Mercantile company stayed the progress of the fire until the firemen could get it under control. The boys worked faithfully and were nearly worn out when the last stream of water was turned off.

The loss is estimated between $6,000 and $7,000, and all of the buildings and stocks damaged were fully covered by insurance.

SPELLING SCHOOL

AN OLD FASHION REVIVED AT BEMIDJI.--FOSSTON BOY WINS OUT.

An old fashioned spelling school took place at Bemidji last Friday between the schools of Fosston, Grand Rapids, Park Rapids and Bemidji. The contest excited a great deal of interest in these towns and large delegations were present from each. The contest was a remarkable one and demonstrates that the old time ability to spell has not entirely died out.

The remarkable feature of the contest was the spelling of Elmo Lawrence of Fosston. Elmo is but 13 years old and a member of the 8th grade in the Fosston schools. He spelled against all others until two o'clock in the morning, and was then unvanquished.

THE BAKER ORPHANAGE.

Its Standing According to the Acting Chief of Police at Duluth.

Red Lake Falls people in common with others in Northern Minnesota will remember the two young ladies collecting for the "Baker Orphanage" of Duluth during last fall. It appears from the adjoined letter to Rev. E. P. Savage, superintendent of the Children's Home Society, of St. Paul, that these people are imposters.

Duluth, Minn., April 11th, 1902.—My Dear Mr. Savage: Replying to your inquiry by telephone to-day in reference to the "so-called Baker Orphanage," I beg to state that this institution is a fraud and an imposition upon the public.

Agents of this institution cannot collect one dollar where the promoters of the orphanage are known, and they only avoid criminal prosecutions by a cunningly devised scheme, which they work as follows:

They manage to keep from two to five children (said to be orphans) at this place so it cannot be proven in court that any particular sum of money which they solicit and collect is not put to the use for which they represent that it is put. The Bakers did not even pay the house rent for the place which they have occupied the past winter, and the owners of the property were only able to get them to vacant when they had ejectment proceedings served upon the Bakers. Notwithstanding the fact that they have several agents out collecting all the time. From statements made to me by former agents of the Bakers, and from the large number of inquiries at this office, from all parts of this state, I am of the opinion that the agents of the Bakers collect thousands of dollars, which they appropriate to the private use of the Bakers and the agents themselves.

Hoping that this letter may save at least a few honest people from being victimized by these people. I am yours very truly.

C. H. Troyer,
Acting Chief of Police.

Hot Times Ahead.

There is great rivalry between Main street and LaBree avenue in Thief River Falls over the baseball "championship" of the town. Main street challenged the LaBrees for a game in a sassy manner and got the following answer from Manager Nason:

In last week's issue of your family journal there appeared a challenge from an aggregation of rooters, horn-tooters, printer's devils, ex wrestlers, old-time sluggers, illegally imported Chinamen, ex-realestate men and broken-down sports of Main avenue, for a game of baseball with business men, clerks, janitors, draymen, (having a shingle out,) saloonkeepers and judges, who may be picked up on LaBree avenue. Therefore be it known by these presents, that the above challenge is accepted with much pleasure.

VALUES ARE RISING

REAL ESTATE SITUATION BETTER THAN FOR MANY YEARS PAST.

RED LAKE FALLS IN A PROSPEROUS AND FLOURISHING CONDITION.

That real estate conditions in Red Lake Falls have, for some time past, have steadily improved is generally known; and that further and more pronounced improvement is to be looked for has been the almost unanimous conclusion of all whose interest in the question is sufficient to prompt them to give it serious consideration. But further than that, there are men whose knowledge of the subject is based upon long years of experience whose judgement is regarded as conservative, and who unreservedly declare that Red Lake Falls is on the eve of an era of growth and real estate activity such as it has never before known. One of these gentlemen, whose residence in this city dates back several years, says he attributes the present activity to the pressure of the immigration movement, which always affects city property in proportion to the interest in farm lands.

Whatever the cause, the fact remains that Red Lake Falls was never in a more prosperous and flourishing condition than she is today.

Glenwood Is Happy.

Glenwood Herald.

The fact is becoming more and more widely known that on the map of our glorious "North Star" state is an unpretentious village known and designated by the name of "Glenwood." Heretofore this town or hamlet has been recognized principally as a fishing resort. It is now being realized ~~that these are not the the only things~~ here. It has incidentally been learned that we have here churches, schools and other institutions pertinent to modern civilization. There is here even a state high school, presided over by a young man, the initials of whose name are Carl Frederick Wilhelm Carlson, whose ancestors did not spring up from cod-fish aristocracy. It has been learned that we have here a high school debating team which bids fair to outshine the best debating team in the same class in the entire state. The personnel of this team are three young, unpretending unsophisticated high school scholars, two of whom are seniors and a sophomore. Miss Lotta Gray, a modest maiden whose childish feet have trod upon the blossoms of sixteen springtimes is one; William Padden, who springs from good Celtic stock, whose ancestors have ever made an honest living by the strain of their muscle and the sweat of their brow and who has seen the grey goose and gander wend their weary flight toward the north pole some seventeen times, is the second member of the team; Viggo Johnson the last but by far not the least in the list is the senior and tips the beam at eighteen years without removing his boots or hosiery. A benevolent providence has endowed these young people with bright intellects, robust constitutions and a willingness to apply themselves with diligence to their books and studies in school. By their fellow students they were chosen to constitute the Glenwood high school debating team, and the wisdom of the choice is very manifest and reflects most favorably the native brightness and foresight of their co-students.

The fourth debate was the one which took place last Friday evening at St. Cloud against the team from Fergus Falls. Flushed with the faith and courage naturally arising from four consecutive victories, the team from Haldor Boen's city, most of whom we understand are young men who have reached their majority in point of years, felt they had an easy "walkover" when they espied the insignificant appearance of our Glenwood "kids" and therefore sought to console them before the debate opened, as best they could, that they, the "kids" should not become broken-hearted over the defeat which was surely awaiting them. The words of consolation was thankfully received, and as an evidence that such concilliatory manifestation was wholly unnecessary the Fergus young men were sent home to the tune of dire defeat, fully convinced no doubt that it was not policy to judge anyone by size, appearance or the fact that their home may be situated in an unpretentious little village located on the banks of a lake where fishing is good at all seasons of the year.

HIGH SCHOOL'S FIRST GAME.

On Home Grounds Saturday a Victory of 4 to 8.

Great excitement prevailed on the ball ground Saturday afternoon when the High school team pitted themselves against the Red Lake Falls Wise Guys. The High School team was in fairly good trim, but a week's more practice will help them wonderfully. A number of errors were made by both teams that caused the score to run up quite high. However, the game was intensely exciting from start to finish. The only double play was by Abner Fletcher, unassisted. Norman Schreiter proved himself quite handy with the stick, making three hits out of five times up, and all three were nicely placed. The batting as a whole was not good and only one two bagger is recorded.

Following is the score:

High School	AB	R
Johnson rf	6	0
Schreiter 3b	5	3
Richard c	5	1
Hunt ss	5	1
Paul cf	5	2
Schusser p	5	2
G. Westphal 2b	5	3

Score by Innings:

H. S.	1	0	0	5	0	6	1	0	1	-14
W. G.	0	0	0	2	2	0	1	3	1	- 8

Earned runs H. S. 3; W. G.'s 1; Two base hits, Fletcher; Passed ball, Richard 3, Westphal 2, Healy 1; Bases on balls, off Schusser 1, off Westphal 1; Bases on hit by pitched ball by Schusser 1; Struck out by Schusser 4, by Westphal 6, by Ittner 3; Left on bases, H. S. 2, W. G.'s 4; Double play, Fletcher, (unassisted); Umpire Armstrong, Time 2 hrs. 30 min.

The Wise Guys say they will be heard from later in the season.

Just watch the High School team. They will make a record for themselves this season. They have a strong team and their prospects are good for a high average.

The High School team will have a strong backstop in Richards in a short time. He played in good form Saturday.

Some of the boys need a little more practice with the stick, as that seemed to be their weakest point Saturday.

The Wise Guys showed some fine mettle and all they need to develope into a strong team is a little practice.

You should hear the voices of the female rooters which the High School team have to support them. Were the same available at their game in Crookston it would give them plenty of courage.

THE SHORT STORY

PROF. WELD'S LECTURE ON LITERATURE MONDAY NIGHT.

SUBJECT HANDLED IN MASTERFUL AND ENTERTAINING WAY.

Prof. F. A. Weld, president of the Moorhead Normal school, delivered his lecture. "The Short Story in American Literature." in Woodman hall Tuesday evening. This constituted the fourth and last number of the series of entertainments under the auspices of the City Teachers' Association, and was a treat to the public, wholly at the expense of the Association.

The lecturer opened by tracing the history of literature from the most ancient times down to the present, showing how different stages of civilization changed the character of literature. He devoted considerable attention to works of fiction of today. A great many of these are beneficial, while more are the direct opposite; some effective tools of God, others accomplices of the devil. Parents should be most considerate in choice of reading for their children. Stories of fiction he likened unto music, leaving as they do a lodgment in the mind with great power in shaping the character of the reader. That works of fiction are here to stay is no reason why they should be indiscriminately upheld. The greatest books he defined as those belonging to the whole world, and not to one country or section of country He believes greatly in short stories. For examples of the ideal short story he cited the works of Gilbert Parker, one of the greatest of romantic writers. Born in Quebec in 1861, he studied for the ministry, but on account of ill health changed his plans and embarked for Australia where he wrote short descriptive sketches for the Sydney Morning Herald. In closing, Prof. Weld read Parker's story, entitled "The Pipe Valley," in which he impersonated the following characters: Pierre, a gambler; Shen McGaun, King Kinkeley, "The Presbyterian," miners; Ikne, an Indian woman and Lucy Rives. Pierre's deserted wife. Mr. Weld is an exceedingly pleasing lecturer and a good elocutionist and all were highly pleased with the entertainment afforded by his evening's discourse.

When Coal Was Prohibited.

It makes the present generation smile to read the accounts which have come down to us concerning the prejudices which were formerly entertained against certain articles which are of everyday consumption.

For instance, it is said that when coal was first used in England the prejudice against it was so strong that the house of commons petitioned the king to prohibit the use of the "noxious" fuel.

A royal proclamation having failed to abate the nuisance, a commission was issued to ascertain who burned coal within the city of London and its neighborhood, to punish them by force for the first offense and by the demolition of their furnaces if they persisted in transgressing. A law was finally passed making it a capital offense to burn coal in the city and only permitting it to be used by forges in the vicinity. It is stated that among the records in the Tower of London a document was found according to which a man was hanged in the time of Edward I. for no other crime than having been caught burning coal. It took three centuries to entirely efface the prejudice.

Antiquity of Playing Cards.

The game of cards was first played in the east and seems to have had a military origin. Cards were introduced from Asia into Europe at the time of the crusades and were first used by necromancers to foretell fortunes. They soon became a popular amusement in the south of Europe, where the Saracens and Moors taught the people how to use them, and card playing spread to all parts of the continent. The state records of Germany mention the fact that Rudolph I., in 1275, was fond of the game and played with his courtiers.

After the invention of paper the manufacture of cards became extensive, but declined somewhat when card playing was forbidden by several of the German states and by the English government on account of the supposed immoral tendency. Before the era of paper cards in the orient were made of ivory, papyrus and canvas, less frequently of the precious metals and quite commonly of wood.

A Great Business Lesson.

Out of the death of Gerhard Mennen comes a lesson in American advertising. It is peculiarly American, because nowhere in the world has advertising become so necessary to the concern that wants to grow and prosper as in the United States.

Mr. Mennen made a powder. It is more than likely that your barber has sprinkled your face with it times without number, and a million of babies have stopped crying because Mr. Mennen was in business.

Mr. Mennen was of the opinion that advertising would make a market for his goods, and so he bought a great deal of printer's ink. He didn't have much money to start, but pluck enough to accomplish almost anything.

And he kept everlastingly at it.

Mr. Mennen lived to see money rolling into his coffers; lived to enjoy much of the fruits of his labor; lived to do a great deal of good and behind him he left a fortune of $1,500,000 and a name famous in the commercial world.

Altogether, it constitutes a monument to the efficacy of American advertising.

Our friend the Equality correspondent said something or somebody was not responsible, we are not quite sure which, but think it was the pig. Well we don't expect a poor sightless swine to be responsible. But the law claims that his owner is responsible for his misdeeds and the U. S. government will look after any cases of cruelty to animals, such as putting out their eyes, etc., for sometimes they squeal so loud the neighbors hear them. That pig doesn't bother us any, and we would not harm him for the world, but he is running his nose into danger, on the blind side—just the same.

JUDGE IVES' POSITION.

Judge Frank Ives publishes the Times at Cass Lake. In a recent issue he prinetd the fullowing statement which will be of interest to the judge's old time constituents:

The Minneapolis Tribune, usually fair and impartial, has succeeded in capturing the champion prevaricator of the state for a correspondent at this village. In its issue of April 3, 1902, the Tribune's Cass Lake correspondent says:

PAPER CHANGES POLITICS.

Cass Lake, Minn., April 3.—The Cass Lake Times came out this week as a straight Democratic paper. It was a Populistic organ and Democrat. Important political significance is attached to this change, and evidently it is the intention to try and capture some of the county offices.

This assertion must have been elaborated in the fertile brain of the correspondent. The Times has said nothing which would induce a fair minded reader to draw any such conclusions. on the contrary we have repeatedly asserted in the Times that the Democratic party is dead, and in our issue of March 27 we deliberately made public the demise of the once potent Peoples Party, and did it without regard of the consequences or fear of party whip. We want our readers to understand, that for the last sixteen months the Cass Lake Times has been and hereafter will be an independent paper, favoring no political party and all political strings which party leaders thought they had tied to us, are cut loose. The Times has done its share of free political printing and if the aforesaid correspondent has confidence in his wild assertion he can be convinced to the contrary by asking us to publish political matter without charge. The Times is in favor of supporting the best men for office; we want nothing the people of the state or county have to distribute, and so far have not heard of a Cass Laker who does. If in the future we shall find that one of our villagers aspires to an office in the county and we believe him better qualified for the place than the other who opposes, and believe him sufficiently honest to do his duty, the Times will support him regardless of political beliefs:—but under no circumstances will the Times prostitute its columns with political tenets which are contrary to our beliefs, unless such matter is published as an advertisement at so much per inch. We believe that the time has come when the progressive newspaper must cut loose from all party ties; a publisher cannot do his duty to the community which reads his paper and be tied duwn to party dictation, right or wrong;—we saw this necessity long ago and in bringing the Times into line with our ideas of propriety have done no more than thousands of our now handicapped fellows must do to retain the respect and patronage of the people who read.

At present the Massachusetts legislature is discussing the feasibility of passing a primary election law, and the Boston Herald, after deciding that even the most nearly perfect election system cannot force pure government upon an unwilling community, says:

"But in practice it is found that these nominating conventions do not exercise the wise functions which they are theoretically supposed to possess. The members go to them pledged beyond the possibilities of recall—except in the way of trade or dicker—to some particular candidate. These delegates are not in the least amenable to broad, public-spirited arguments, though, as was shown by some experiences last fall, the promise of a good dinner will lead some of them to vote une way rather than another. The candidates are practically announced in advance, the convention simply registers the action of the caucuses, and, where changes are made from caucus action, these are ordinarily brought about by the persuasive work of some adriot wire-pullers. In this way, a method which has much in theory to commend it, is made much less meritorious than a method which is admitted to be wanting in theuretical excellence."

REMEMBER.

That bigness is not greatness.

That it requires pluck to be patient.

That selfishness is the most unmanly thing in the world.

That cunsideratiun for mother and sister does more to mark a gentleman than the kind of necktie he wears.

That piety is not priggishness.

That to follow the crowd is a confession of weakness.

That street corners are a poor college.

That one real friend is worth a score of mere acquaintances.

It is not generally known that a Holland Dutch paper is published at Fertile.

Jack Frost's house burned at Fergus Falls the other day. Jack probably won't need it until fall, anyway.

One of our famous entomoiogists says that not one mosquito in four hundred ever tastes human blood. How to avoid making acquaintance with that one around these parts is an important question.

J. P. Morgan is pretty well known, but that does not prevent his advertising in financial journals. J. P. Morgan & Co.'s ad adorns a very conspicuous space in the Commercial and Financial World.

A recent invention is said to have the quality of robbing steel of its temper. But the average married man knows a more promising field for research than that followed by the inventor of this steel process.

That "King George" editorial in Monday's Crookston Times was scarcely up to that paper's high standard. 'Twould hardly bear investigation, though the introductory line was dignified and misleading enough.

"Smoking church services" is the latest at Westminster abbey, while a New York divine has built an annex to his church for dances and card parties. "The world do move" will have to he revised by the addition of "and heaven too."

Mrs. Roosevelt gave a musicale at the White House and included in the program several negro melodies, which are said to have been the popular features of the affair. As yet Tillman and Watterson don't seem to have caught on. Or perhaps they are getting used to it.

An American traveler in Sweden recently stated that in that country the saloons were closed on Saturdays (pay days) and banks kept open until midnight. Though a government cannot force a man to save his money, this Swedish system helps to encourage a man to place his money where his interest will amount to more than a headache.

The Supreme court of this state has reversed the decision of the lower court, touching the primary law. By this decision all parties which cast less than ten per cent. of the vote in any municipal county or congressional district, will have to nominate their candidates by petition in order to have their names placed on the official ballot. The case was brougnt by the Prohibitionists, to compell the city of St. Paul to enter upon the official ballot the names of candidates nominated by convention.

TUCKS AND RUFFLES.

Did any of you ever think about the fact that tucks and ruffles play a very important part in our domestic affairs? I trust you will stand convinced after reading this little message.

I shall speak abuut children's clothes. The principle may be applied as you like. I wish mothers would make the garments of their little ones plain. A clean little child is lovable without ruffles. But many mothers seem to think that the only way to show how highly they prize the blessing God has given them is to pile high the trimming on the child's clothes.

Mothers, I ask you candidly, when you make those ruffles—working on a garment perhaps two days instead of part of one—do you not get tired and cross? When dear little Willie wants to be read to or baby sister needs attention are you cheerful in making the little ones more comfortable? Then the ironing. Is it going to make your home the happier to have you ironing two hours on a garment that otherwise could be taken care of in a few minutes?

Help, did you say? Good for you. I wish you joy of your help. Even your maid is human and if she must spend days upon fancy ironing yuu will in common humanity, be obliged to do many other tasks about the house which will in turn take more of your time and strength than you should spend thus.

Wnich is going to endure the longer—a beruffled garment because of which the house mother is too tired to attend to the moral needs of her family, or time and thought given to the betterment of your loved ones? Think of this, mothers, when yuu do your summer sewing. Buy your children beautiful, fine dresses if you can, but I beg of you make them plain so that you will not be like a bear about half the summer. Your family needs your love, my friends. Dun't sacrifice them to tucks and ruffles.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

MAY BASKETS.

How many of my children make May baskets? Ever since the Girlies were tiny tots Virgine insisted upon making May-day keep-sakes for her many friends. Such cutting of tissue papers and such pasting. Se always covered some little pasteboard box very prettily, then filled it with flowers and left it upon the doorstep of a favored one, running swiftly away after ringing the bell. This was always done April 30, you know, and it was supposed to have been the work of fairies who were going about leaving these reminders of approaching summer.

One evening we saw a suspicious figure creeping through the shadows of our shrubbery, and as Sport, for whose judgment we had a whole some regard, sounded an alarm, papa rushed out tu look into the matter. What do you suppose he found? No a tramp, nor a burglar, but a good-sized boy who was bringing a May basket for Virgine —trying to carry out the commands of his sisters to leave it unseen. This explanation followed a severe shaking-up administered by papa. But we all made up for it, and sent the boy home happy. Virgine was highly elated over her beautiful May basket.

HOUSEHOLD.

One who has been troubled with cock roaches about her drain pipe says this formula relieved her of a great pest. It must be used several times. It is not puisonous. 10 cts. worth of alum, 5 cents worth of borax, 3 table spoons full of sugar, (all powdered.) Mix well and place where insects are seen.

The Only Good Irrigation Scheme

By Representative THOMAS H. TONGUE of Oregon, Chairman of the Arid Land Committee of the House of Representatives

I AM decidedly opposed to any wild, gigantic scheme of irrigation that would commit the federal government to the expenditure of untold millions from the public treasury, destroying present farm values and frittering away the homes of coming generations.

IN MY JUDGMENT THE TRUE POLICY WHICH THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT SHOULD PURSUE, THE POLICY WHICH HAS THE BEST OPPORTUNITY TO SECURE THE SUPPORT OF CONGRESS, IS TO IRRIGATE SUFFICIENT ARID LAND TO FURNISH HOMESTEADS FOR ACTUAL BONA FIDE HOME BUILDERS.

This should he the object and the limit of any irrigation law. There is a healthy natural demand for this, and it should be met. Irrigation should keep pace with rural settlement and the natural healthy increase in rural population. It should not go faster than this. Irrigation will not make population; neither will it increase the birth rate or the stream of desirable immigration into the United States.

It is claimed by very respectable authority that people will go from the city to seek, beautify and adorn rural homes. It is certain that the idle and the vicious will not leave the city. The present industrious, well employed and well paid part of the population should not leave the cities. The present tendency from the country to the city is a natural result of present economic conditions. It is because city and factory furnish more remunerative employment than farming or stock raising. We should not change this condition by converting them from food consumers to food producers, by lessening the demand and increasing the supply of food products. It is not to the benefit of farmers to increase the number of farms. THE FACTORY AND THE CITY ARE THE SALVATION OF THE FARM. WHAT THE GREAT WEST NEEDS TODAY IS NOT MORE FARMS, BUT BIGGER CITIES, BIGGER FACTORIES, AND MORE OF BOTH. AS A NATION WE ARE NOT IN NEED OF MORE FARM PRODUCTS, BUT WE ARE IN NEED OF MORE MARKETS FOR THE PRODUCTS WE NOW HAVE.

To build American homes and protect the welfare of the home builder, not to make a market for unsalable land grants or more agricultural implements, should be the end and the aim of this class of legislation.

"I will not tell you."

"Why not?" queried the captain in his most persuasive tone. "Oh, perhaps you don't know these other gentlemen. They'll step into the hall or out on to the balcony, I've no doubt."

"It will make no difference" replied Alden.

"What you say will be confidential, of course."

"Captain Neale," said Alden, "this is a business secret that is worth a good deal of money. If I should tell it to any man, he could force payment for his silence."

"You don't mean to say that I'd do a thing like that?" demanded Neale.

"I have no wish to offend," said Alden, "but you want the truth, and you shall have it. Your reputation, like that of many another man high up in the department, is bad—as bad as it can be. Remembering that this business matter involves others than myself, I won't trust you with a hint of it. That is my last word on that subject."

Neale's face turned red and white in strange, irregular spots.

"Now hear a word from me," he said. "I've been looking you up. You are a ruined man. You were engaged to this girl, and it was all that saved you. But you couldn't be honest even with her. You made love to this Elsie Miller, and you neglected Miss Maclane, and she wouldn't stand for it. But by that time you were so involved with Miss Miller that you couldn't break away. So what did you do? Why, you wrote her a note telling a fairy story about a lot of money, knowing that the note would be found and would make the case look like robbery. You told her how busy you were, and five minutes afterward you quit work and came up town. You had a key to this house; you came here"—

"Do you mean to accuse me of this?"

The words came from between Alden's teeth, and he strode toward Neale, who put the table between them and drew his revolver.

"Wallace!" he called.

A policeman entered from the hall.

"That man is under arrest," said Neale. "Take him in."

"This is monstrous," said Alden, but he spoke coolly. "You shall answer for it."

"We'll talk about that later," rejoined the captain. "You go with that man."

Brenda crossed the room quickly and took Alden's hand.

"I will do everything that I can for you," she said, "and for her."

"You're coming along, too," said Neale. "No; I'll stand by what I said. Go home."

Alden opened his mouth to speak and then closed it again. He turned and went out of the room with the policeman, Brenda following immediately and Dr. Blair a moment later. Elmendorf and Neale remained.

The captain dropped into a chair.

"I don't know as I done right," he said.

Elmendorf walked across the room and looked at a picture on the wall between the windows. It was a photographic copy of Nelerstein's painting of "Tantalus." The unfortunate king who divulged the secrets of Zeus was represented chained to the rock starving while the fruit laden boughs waved just beyond his reach. It was a painful picture, quite out of keeping with all else in the room, and Elmendorf regarded it curiously. A few lines, telling the legend, were printed below, and the detective read them.

"Well, he looks it," he said, glancing up at the face of Tantalus. "And, by the way, Neale, you don't think Alden did this thing, do you?"

"Not on your life!" said the captain. "The case is perfectly plain. It may be that I didn't do the smart thing."

Elmendorf turned away.

"Arresting a man for murder just because he calls you a thief when you know you are one," said he, "isn't exactly my idea of wisdom."

Neale sprang to his feet and faced Elmendorf angrily.

"Not with me, Joe Neale," said the detective. "It won't work."

CHAPTER IV.

THE EASY WAY.

POLICEMAN WALLACE did not consider it necessary to subject his prisoner to the indignity of handcuffs, but he kept a firm hold on Alden's left arm just above the elbow as they left the house. Alden seemed to be entirely indifferent to this attention. When he reached the sidewalk, he paused, bringing his captor to a halt. The cab in which he had come was beside the curb, and Alden, using his free hand, helped Brenda into the vehicle.

It is not customary for New York policemen to dally while their prisoners perform the gentle courtesies of polite society, but Alden's deadly calmness prevailed in this instance.

"Home?" he asked.

"St. Winifred's," replied Brenda. "Please tell him to drive fast."

Alden gave the order and then, addressing the young woman, said: "I shall be there soon. They dare not hold me."

Brenda would have spoken, but the horse suddenly started under the whip, and the cab lurched on the rough pavement. The last glimpse of Alden lifting his hat while the huge policeman gripped his left arm remained with Brenda like a persistent nightmare that survives the dawn. The conventional courtesy stuck in her mind. It was a little picture of the old days, the time of small pleasures and easy living, so sharply brought to an end. Everything in life had suddenly become difficult. Words must be weighed and one's conduct guided by a plan, not left to mold itself into the forms of mere usage. And thus she came to think of what she should do and say at the hospital. How meet the emergencies that might arise? Had Elsie regained her senses? Had she spoken, or did she lie dead at that moment in some small, bare room, watched by a stolid nurse who yawned and stretched herself as the day's work drew to a close? A portrait in a velvet frame—Elsie's mother beyond a doubt—recurred sharply to Brenda's memory, and she shuddered. It had stood on the dressing table—a woman not yet old; a pretty, smiling face. It was dreadful to think of that face smiling there all that afternoon, the eyes looking, yet seeing nothing, the lips unable to utter a cry.

"I must put it out of my mind," said Brenda to herself.

At the hospital there was little to be learned; nothing to be done. An elderly man who seemed to be in authority said: "The child is still living. We cannot predict the ultimate result of the injury as yet. You cannot see her nor send any message. Leave your address, and we will communicate with you in accordance with the event, whatever it may be. It will be useless to wait. If you are able to see her at all, there will be no great pressure of time."

Brenda rode to her home, and as the cab drifted through the clamoring whirlpools of the Avenue she was thinking that the white haired man had spoken almost tenderly of Elsie as "the child."

There was no mother in the Maclane mansion. She had been dead ten years. There was an aunt, an amiable old lady for whom Brenda entertained no little affection, but in the serious affairs of life she would as readily have taken counsel with her brother, who was not yet 12. Her father, for so strong a man as he was in the world of finance, was a weak man at home. He had no gift of sympathy, a deficiency which may have accounted for both the strength and the weakness. Brenda told him the story of her adventures as it has been here set forth, and he received it with painful surprise and lively alarm.

"Why did you go there?" he exclaimed. "What possible interest could you have in this wretched girl?"

"My dear father," she replied, with an excellent counterfeit of a smile, "let me remind you that my affection for Mr. Alden has been the one sincere emotion of a sadly artificial life. When I saw that terrible story, the first feeling I had was sympathy for Clarence. I wanted to do something for him, and I couldn't think of anything else but to go to her."

"Permit me to consider the legal aspect of the case."

"The papers will be full of it!" he groaned. "I have always been afraid of Alden. You know I could never reconcile myself to him."

"I remember that you always admired him," said she.

"A good many people admire him," exclaimed the old gentleman impatiently, "and they're all afraid of him. He is a headlong, reckless, unsafe man, and I never should have permitted you to become engaged to him."

Brenda smiled without effort this time. She knew that her will would dominate her father's in any conflict, and that he would permit her to have her own way to the end of the story.

"I am not engaged to him any more," said she, and her father admitted cordially that that was something to be thankful for.

"He has behaved most dishonorably to you," he added.

"I have no complaint to make of Mr. Alden's conduct," said Brenda. "I shall not break my heart for him, but I wish he might have loved me. Let us go in to dinner."

Mr. Maclane was cr prised to observe as ed that his daughter ate with a good appetite. Having a shrewd faculty of observation, he perceived at last that Brenda's body was attending to the whole matter of its own sustenance and that her mind was elsewhere. As anxiety rises in intensity the thinking part of us interferes more and more with the grosser envelope and the processes of enlightened selfishness therein implanted by nature, but there comes a point of separation whence the mind goes its own way and the body likewise, to the great betterment of the latter temporarily.

After dinner Brenda and her father went into the library, a room of which he made great use for smoking, much preferring it to the apartment especially designed for the indulgence of that pernicious habit.

Brenda fell at once into deep thought, and her father, after several futile attempts to talk with her, sat down by a desk and endeavored to occupy himself with certain household accounts. He was a man of large frame and little flesh, rather handsome in a mildly aquiline style and with eyes like Brenda's, but gentler and with more of the blue tint in them. There was something womanish about him, hard to trace, but probably in his manner altogether and not in his looks. A nervous irritability made utter trifles tragic for him. Everything worried him more or less. At the desk there, as he puttered with the accounts, his pen fell from the rest where he had placed it, and he picked it up, with a groan.

His pleasures were few. His home was something to him; his pride, of various kinds, a staff to lean upon. He had considerable affection for his son and rather more for Brenda. He thanked God daily that her health was so good; but, even so, he was always afraid that it might fail.

His chief joy in life was a business journey. He could get nothing out of a pleasure trip because of the obvious waste of time. But to be one of three or four moderately congenial men absolutely forced to travel, preferably in some one's private car, perhaps to see a bit of industrial property in the west or even no farther than Washington when there was a bill affecting business interests before congress—that was genuine relaxation. It was necessary to go, and the responsibility for getting there was on the engineer in the cab ahead. One might smoke a good cigar meanwhile and speak of small matters. When one has reached a certain stage of nervousness, it is more tranquilizing to ride 65 miles an hour under another man's guidance than to sit still at home as a result of one's own volition.

To Brenda and her father in the library entered Willett, the butler, with a troubled countenance. It appeared that two men desired to see Miss Maclane and that their names were Barnes and Haggerty.

"They mentioned a Captain Neale, miss," said the butler, "presuming to say that you'd understand."

Brenda rose hastily.

"They have come to take me to the hospital," she said. "Tell them I will be ready in a few minutes, and see about the carriage."

"Are these people policemen?" demanded Mr. Maclane.

"Well, sir, I took them to be what they call ward detectives," ventured the butler, "and I dropped the hint to James that he'd do well to keep an eye on them. There's things in the small reception room, sir, as would go into a man's pocket."

"You did quite right, Willett," said Mr. Maclane. "Brenda, my child, I suppose it's entirely useless"—

"Absolutely. I must go," she said.

"Then I must go, too," he groaned. But Brenda put a firm veto upon this proposal.

"It is wholly unnecessary," she said. "With my maid and James I shall not be afraid, even if these men are all that Willett says they are. There will be the coachman and groom besides."

Her father came up to her and touched the diamond ornament which she wore at her throat.

"I would not put unnecessary temptation in the way of the weak," he said, with an attempt at levity. "Some of these fellows are said to be very expert."

Brenda gave the pin to her father and also removed a ring of more than ordinary value, which she knotted up in a handkerchief and thrust into the bosom of her dress. Her maid entered at this moment with such things as were necessary to prepare Brenda for the ride.

After his daughter's departure Mr. Maclane paced the floor of the library for a long hour in restless anxiety. Then he received a telephone message from Brenda informing him that she had learned that Mr. Alden was still detained at the police station, which was an injustice not to be overlooked by his friends. The financier then understood why he had been left at home. As a result of Brenda's presentation of the case Mr. Maclane called upon his lawyer, who was a near neighbor, and the two men rode down to the station house in a cab, stopping at a club on the way to cash a check.

Upon giving their names to the sergeant at the desk in the station they were ushered into the captain's room, where, to their surprise, they found both the officer and his prisoner. Neale was sitting by a desk in the corner. He had the cramped look and the dull eye of a man who has neither moved nor spoken in a long time. Half a cigar with a ragged end was between his lips, and it seemed to have been driven in with a hammer. Any one who had known Neale for ten years would have said that this was the same cigar he had always been smoking. There was a tradition that he had never been seen to light a fresh one.

Alden was standing by a barred window looking out into a narrow, dark court, with a dead wall on the opposite side. There was nothing to attract a rational man's eye, but Alden continued to stare even after Maclane and the lawyer entered the room. He turned, however, when Captain Neale greeted the two men by name. At the sight of Alden's face Maclane, who was advancing toward him, stopped short. It is not the barrier between them which keeps the spectator in the menagerie from intruding upon the privacy of the caged tiger; it is the look in the creature's eye.

"Good evening, sir," said Alden quietly. "I am surprised to see you here."

Maclane started at the sound of the voice; it was so different from what he expected.

"My daughter told me there was some sort of trouble," he began.

"It was very kind of her," said Alden.

"You probably heard that Mr. Alden was under arrest," said the captain. "That isn't so. He's held as a witness. There's no charge against him. He and I had a little disagreement about what was the right thing for him to do. You see, he doesn't understand my position. I'm held accountable in these cases. But I don't want to make no trouble for no man," he went on, with that profusion of negatives which is often an ornament of his language in moments of earnestness, "and if I could see a decent way of letting him go without getting myself into trouble, why, I'd be glad to oblige him and his friends."

"Permit me to consider the legal aspect of the case," said the lawyer, sitting upon a corner of the table that was in the middle of the room and facing Neale, while the others were behind him.

There was silence of half a minute, and then the lawyer got upon his feet.

"It seems to be perfectly simple," he said at last.

"If you say so, that settles it," replied Neale, rising and walking toward the door. "Sorry to have troubled you, Mr. Alden. Good night."

And he bowed as the three men walked out, Maclane weak and trembling with excitement, Alden perfectly mechanical. As they passed the sergeant's desk the lawyer discovered that he had left his cane in the captain's room, and he returned. He was absent about five minutes, at the expiration of which time he joined Maclane upon the sidewalk. Alden was not there.

"She does not know?" echoed Brenda.

"You must understand," said Kendall, "that the assailant stood behind her. He, whoever it may have been, is supposed to have entered the room while Miss Miller was out on the balcony. I have had the place accurately described to me. In the corner of the room near the eastern window there is quite a large closet. Perhaps you noticed it."

Brenda inclined her head.

"The assassin may have hidden himself there," Kendall continued. "Miss Miller remembers stepping into the room through that eastern window, and she knows nothing of what happened between that moment and the time of her awakening here."

"She will live," said Brenda. "She will remember some day."

"She can never remember what she did not observe," replied Kendall. "It may be that she neither saw nor heard the assassin. As to the wound, I hardly know what to say. The knife entered between the first and second ribs and passed downward very close to the body wall. Ordinarily it would be almost impossible to inflict such a wound. The assassin must have been singularly ignorant of anatomy to strike downward at such a spot, for the chances were a thousand to one that the bony structure would protect the vital parts. The knife should have cleared the first rib and hit fairly against the second. But it happens that Miss Miller received an injury on this precise spot years ago, as a result of which the first rib is somewhat depressed. Thus the murderer was favored by an extraordinary chance. His idea was, first, to escape being seen by her, and, second, to strike at the front of the body while standing behind in order to avoid the blood that must follow the blow. Having struck, he undoubtedly supposed that he had reached the heart, and only a miracle prevented. Our ambulance surgeon believed that the wall of the heart was punctured and that a clot of blood was stopping the wound, as happens once in a million times. That is not the case. Not only did the knife miss the heart, but it missed the arteries in a way that only divine Providence can account for. So the first effusion of blood was not followed by the fatal drain that might have been expected. Do I make myself clear?"

"I understand enough," said Brenda. "I know that she may recover, and I thank God with all my soul."

There was a pause, during which Kendall's embarrassment, that had been less noticeable while his mind was bent upon a description of Elsie's injury, once more asserted itself. Brenda observed that his face was flushed and his forehead moist, and she was puzzled.

"Have you told her that I am here?" she asked. "Does she wish to see me?"

"We have not mentioned it," he replied, "but you need have no hesitation. We have given her a very nice room," he hurried on. "You'll find that everything in the world is being done for her. Shall we go in?"

The other physician then came forward, and Brenda gave him her hand, though Kendall, in the extremity of his embarrassment, forgot to utter the form of presentation.

A straight and long corridor, the longest, as it seemed to Brenda, that mortal architect had ever designed, led rearward to the part of the building in which Miss Miller had been sequester-

IN FEDERAL COURT

CHANGE OF BATTLEGROUND IN MINNESOTA'S FIGHT AGAINST RAILWAY MERGER.

Minneapolis Unionists Are Restrained From Interfering With Chinese Restaurants—Duluth Minister Will Oppose Sunday Baseball—Congressman Morris Not a Candidate for Re-Election—News of the State in General.

St. Paul, April 19.—Judge Otis in the district court has granted the motion of defendant's attorneys in the case of the State of Minnesota against the Northern Securities company to transfer the case to the United States circuit court. The ground on which the motion for the removal of the case was based was that the suit was a question of constitutional construction, which was out of the jurisdiction of the state courts, and, further, that the persons and corporations involved in the case were from other states than Minnesota, and therefore the case could not be tried in the state courts.

The arguments of the defendants were submitted to Judge Otis early in the afternoon. He hastily reviewed them and granted the motion on the ground that the allegations set forth were true.

Attorney General Douglas said that the latest move did not at all hinder or embarrass the state and had no particular significance. When the case comes up in the circuit court the state will make a motion to remand to the district court, which will at once bring up the question of jurisdiction on the preliminaries and final merits of the case. As soon as the question of jurisdiction is settled the case will then proceed. General Douglas says it is not a matter of material difference in which court the case is tried. Whatever the decision on the question of jurisdiction the case will be tried in St. Paul and will reach the court of final resort without delay.

UNIONISTS RESTRAINED.

Must Not Interfere With Minneapolis Chinese Restaurants.

Minneapolis, April 18.—A legal contest of great interest to laboring men and their employers reached a preliminary decision in the United States circuit court here when Judge Lochren granted the preliminary injunction asked for by Wong Guy to restrain the Minneapolis Cooks' Protective association from establishing a boycott against his Chinese restaurant. For a month or more the streets and sidewalks in the vicinity of all the Chinese restaurants in the city have been "picketed" by the labor unions, who are endeavoring to drive the "heathen Chinee" out of business. The proprietors allege that the union pickets have in some cases used violence, dragging patrons, waiters and cooks from the restaurants, or preventing them from entering. They complain that their trade has greatly fallen off as a result.

SUNDAY BASE BALL.

Duluth Clergyman Threatens to Prosecute All Players.

Duluth, April 17.—Rev. Harry W. Knowles, pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church of this city and chaplain of the house of representatives, has created consternation in the ranks of base ball enthusiasts here by the publication of a notice of warning that all persons who engage in Sunday base ball playing will be arrested and prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. Manager Van Praag of the local team will announce the personnel of the team he has been forming and declares the season will open on May 11, and that Sunday games will be played. He says that if his men are arrested the cases will be hard fought and, if necessary, carried to the supreme court.

MORRIS NOT A CANDIDATE.

Duluth Congressman Does Not Wish Re-Election.

Duluth, April 17.—A special dispatch to The News Tribune from Washington announces that Congressman Page Morris of Duluth has written a letter to Frank E. Searle, chairman of the congressional committee, saying that he has decided not to be a candidate for re-election this year. He is serving his third term and left the district bench in 1896 to become a candidate against Charles A. Towne. He defeated Towne that year and also in 1898. It is expected that Judge Morris will be appointed judge of the proposed new federal district in Minnesota.

SAY BORAX IS HARMLESS.

Defense of Meat Dealers in Suits at St. Paul.

St. Paul, April 19.—The wholesale meat dealers, arrested at the instigation of the retail dealers, have been arraigned on the charge of using borax as a meat preservative. They demurred to the charge and their cases were continued until April 29. A case similar to these is now pending in the supreme court and it is expected that a decision will be had before the date of trial. Testimony was introduced in this case tending to prove that the use of borax is not injurious. On this point the decision rests.

Butter Touches Highest Point.

St. Paul, April 19.—Butter was during the day quoted on Commission row at 33 cents, which is the high water mark of the last 10 years. Butter which is now selling for 26 cents sold a year ago for 11 cents, which gives some idea of the market situation. Commission men do not see any immediate relief for present conditions.

Much Live Stock Perishes.

Raymond, Minn., April 19.—The large barn on Thomas Stoh's farm, in Roseland township, was totally destroyed by fire. Fourteen work horses, 11 milch cows, 15 head of young stock and some 60 hogs were also burned.

DEPOT IS BLOWN UP.

Burglars Overcharge a Safe With Nitroglycerin.

Eveleth, Minn., April 16.—About 4 a. m. burglars made an attempt to enter the safe in the station of the Duluth, Missabe and Northern railroad. They made entrance to the depot easily and introduced a charge of nitroglycerin in the safe. A few minutes later there was a report that woke up the entire town and shattered windows in houses for blocks around.

When the crowd got there the station lay in ruins, and the debris had caught fire from the stove. The flames were extinguished, and then an unsuccessful search was made for the safe. It was too big to carry away, and it is thought it must have been blown into pieces too small to be located.

No trace whatever could be found of the burglars, and it is not known whether they shared the fate of the safe or made their escape.

TAKES INDEPENDENT ACTION.

Milwaukee Road Makes a Special Tariff on Flour.

St. Paul, April 17.—The Milwaukee and St. Paul has created a sensation by taking independent action on the question of export flour rates from Minneapolis to the seaboard. It has published a through tariff of 19½ cents by way of Lake Michigan ports in connection with all boat lines running between Chicago, Milwaukee and Lake Erie ports and all Eastern trunk lines. The tariff is effective immediately and expires on April 30.

The St. Paul road is understood to have made a large amount of contracts prior to the cancellation of the low rate and it desires to fulfill them.

The trunk lines, it is said, have refused positively to protect the 19½ cents tariff.

WINONA INSURANCE COMPANY.

Elevator Men Will Insure Their Own Property.

Winona, Minn., April 17.—The Winona Fire Insurance association has been formed by 21 elevator companies, which operate 1,500 elevators in Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Kansas and Nebraska. The first object of this association was for the insurance of this property, but in addition to this it will handle all kinds of fire insurance. It has a paid up capital stock of $100,000, and when it begins business on July 1 will have a paid up capital of $130,000. One line of business it will carry is that heretofore written by the Grain Dealers' Indemnity of this city, a mutual company, which will go out of business on Aug. 1. The headquarters of the new company is Winona.

NO CASUALTIES RESULT.

Northern Pacific Passenger and Freight Trains Collide.

St. Cloud, Minn., April 21.—The Northern Pacific coast train, westbound, collided near Watab shortly after noon with an eastbound extra freight. The freight was coming down a heavy grade at high speed, but the crews of both locomotives had time to jump, none of them being seriously injured. None of the passengers were injured with exception of one woman, who was seriously cut about the head. The locomotives were badly wrecked, as were many of the freight cars. One car containing horses was broken and the animals took to the prairie.

A wrecking train from St. Paul reached here at 6 o'clock, and it is expected the wreck will be cleared by morning.

SUED FOR $1,500,000.

Herbert W. Pearson Given a Verdict of $500.

St. Paul, April 15.—Judge Kelly has filed a decision in the suit of Herbert W. Pearson against the Great Northern Railway company. He awards Mr. Pearson $500 on account of unpaid salary, and judgment for his costs and disbursements. It is a modest ending of an action to recover a million and a half dollars. Mr. Pearson sued J. J. Hill of the railway company on an alleged contract, the pith of which was "big coal, big pay," and claimed to have discovered immense coal fields in Montana and Washington. By agreement the suit was prosecuted against the railway company alone.

DAMAGE TO WATER MAINS.

St. Paul Water Board Sues Twin City Rapid Transit Company.

St. Paul, April 17.—The long contemplated suit of the St. Paul water board against the Twin City Rapid Transit company for damages done to the city water mains by reason of electrolysis, has been filed in the district court.

The board asks for $500,000 damages and prays the court for an enjoining order preventing the company from further maintaining its system so that it will be a menace to the life of the water mains. The court is also asked to order the company to use some system other than the rails for the return of its electricity.

FLOUR MOVEMENT IS HEAVY.

Opening of Navigation at Duluth Finds Business Good.

Duluth, April 17.—The opening of the regular lake and rail line flour season finds heavier stocks on hand than one year ago, but not as much as was in store when the first line boat left last spring. This is partly due to the fact that navigation opened much earlier this season than was expected, and all of one month sooner, as far as the lake lines are concerned, than in 1901.

Hangs Himself With Bell Rope.

Preston, Minn., April 18.—Martin Ream, janitor in the high school building here for 11 years, hanged himself with the bell rope in the school building some time during the night after drinking the contents of a 2-ounce bottle of chloroform. Mr. Ream was 72 years old and a veteran of the rebellion.

Lone Prisoner Cremated.

Eveleth, Minn., April 16.—At 10 p. m. the city jail caught fire in some unknown manner and one prisoner was burned to death. He was the only occupant of the jail and all that is known of him is that he was a Finlander.

CURIOUS KOREAN CUSTOM.

The Battle of Stones Which Marks Beginning of New Year.

One of the most curious customs in Korea marks the advent of the new year. This is the battle with stones, participated in by inhabitants of Seoul. At a spot about a mile and a half outside the city walls, on the main road to the Han river, the people assemble by thousands either as witnesses of or participants in this truly remarkable exhibition of warlike good will. By previous arrangement piles of stones are in readiness, all carefully selected and of a convenient size.

Without previous selection of combatants the participants form themselves into opposing armies, about the only qualification for service being apparently the ability to hurl a stone at the advancing forces of the enemy. At first the stone throwing is at long range and uninteresting, but as the throwing continues the forces draw nearer, and the fight waxes fast and furious, men being detailed to collect the stones into heaps again or fetch fresh ammunition for the firing line. Then the clash comes, the two bodies meet, fierce rushes are made, stones are discarded, and knives and clubs are freely used. The clash of weapons, the screams of the combatants, the surging mass of men some being trampled to death, now falling, now struggling to their feet, the blood flowing from numerous cuts—the whole goes to make up a picture that depicts anything but the joy we attribute to the coming of a new year. The fight is kept up until the ringing of the great city bell tells the combatants that it is time to return home.

Perhaps the most singular feature of the celebration is that during the remaining eleven months of the year the Korean is as unlikely a person as can be found in any country, and by some writers the average Korean is characterized as the most arrant coward on the face of the earth.

But, cowards or no cowards, the Korean people still indulge as they have for years in this ancient warlike welcome of the new year. Indeed it is legal in Korea to fight not only on New Year's day, but during the first moon or month of the year. The custom has become a national institution, sanctioned by the government and patronized by the king and the nobility. The police attend the battles, but merely to keep order among the spectators. Fighting is the Korean's privilege with the advent of each new year and he is expected to exercise that privilege to the extent of his ability if he would be accounted a good, country loving Korean.—New York [illegible]

All In the Family.

"Biffley and his son and the Widow Binglewood and her daughter are going to form a community of interests."

"How so?"

"Biffley marries the widow, and his son marries the daughter."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cost of Improved Roads.

Three thousand dollars per mile is the standard estimate of the cost of building macadam roads of first class quality. The cost varies, of course, with quality of soil, accessibility of raw material, and so on. Some road builders contend that the cost in Illinois can be brought as low as $1,500 or $1,800 a mile.—Chicago Evening Post.

Origin of a Cravat.

At the battle of Steinkirk, which took place on the morning of Aug. 3, 1692, the French nobles were surprised in their sleep, and, hastily rushing out of their tents, they arranged their lace cravats in the most careless manner. The French were victorious, and to commemorate their victory it became the fashion after this to wear the neckcloth in a negligee manner; hence the origin of the Steinkirk cravat, as it was afterward called.

The Retort Judicial.

When Judge Barnard was on the bench and holding court in Poughkeepsie, a lawyer who did not like him chanced to see a one cent coin lying on the floor. Picking it up and holding it forth in ostentatious display, he said:

"I imagine, your honor, from the value of this coin, that it must belong to the court."

"And I imagine," replied Judge Barnard, "that if it was not such a small coin the court never would have seen it."—New York Times.

His Scent.

Mrs. Gaussip—I saw Mr. Stockson Boads at the upholsterer's yesterday. I guess he's going to get married and furnish a home.

Mrs. Malaprop—No; I'll tell you what took him there. I hear he bought a seat at the Stock Exchange last week. It was a secondhand one, and I guess he wants it fixed up.—Philadelphia Press.

How They Grow.

First Year—The biggest trout I ever caught was a foot and a half long, and he had a big fishhook in his stomach.

Tenth Year—Did I ever tell you about the trout I once caught? It was over a yard long and had an anchor in his stomach.—New York Weekly.

FREE=$5,078.00 IN 2,999 PRIZES

FOR ALL WHO CAN COUNT THE DOTS.

THE PRIZES AND CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST

This contest and the awarding of the prizes will be conducted under the following conditions and subject to the following directions: The prizes will be awarded in the order named below, to those registering the correct or nearest correct number of dots in the puzzle on this page:

First Prize . . $1,000.00	Second Prize . . . $500.00	Third Prize . . . $250.00	Fourth Prize . . . $100.00

The Fifth to the 2,999th Prizes Will Aggregate Balance of the $5,078.00.

If two or more counts are tied for one or more prizes, an equal division of the contested prizes will be made. All counts must be sent in by mail, but no counts will be registered bearing postmark of any office within the corporate limits of Minneapolis or St. Paul.

DECISION OF CORRECT COUNT.

A positive guarantee is given that no person, directly or indirectly connected with The Tribune, not even the Dot Editor, knows the number of dots, nor will they know until after the official count is made. When the contest is closed the dots will be counted by J. R. Colburn, of New York City, the originator of the Dot puzzles; and he will furnish The Tribune an affidavit of the correct count. This affidavit, when certified by the judges of the contest, shall be conclusive on all parties as to the correct count. Mr. Colburn will not make the count of the dots until after the contest, and no one can possibly know the official count until then.

THE JUDGES.

The three judges named below will decide under the conditions of the contest who are the winners of the prizes offered, and they will render their decision in writing. This decision so made shall be final and binding upon all parties to the contest; and the prize money shall be paid out on the order of these judges to the winners as so determined by them. These judges will certify the official count to be made by Mr. Colburn. The Tribune has already deposited $5,078 to the First National Bank of Minneapolis, where it will remain until disposed of to the winners according to the conditions of the contest. A forfeit of $1,000.00 will be paid to any one who will disprove this statement. The judges will be:

Rear Admiral J. F. R. Foss, formerly President Nicollet National Bank, and Vice President First National Bank, Minneapolis.

Hon. Robert Pratt, ex-Mayor of Minneapolis.

Albert Dollenmayer, of the Dollenmayer Advertising Agency, Minneapolis.

THE DOTS.

The counting is perfectly free.

The more counts you register the surer you are of winning one of the big free cash prizes, of the $5,078.00 in gold.

Somebody is going to win the first prize, $1,000. Accuracy in registering your count is all you require to win $1,000, or the $500, or the $250, or the $100, or any of the other 2,995 free cash prizes.

If you can count, win the first prize, $1,000. Think of the mortgage you can raise with it, or the farm land it will buy for you. The other dot contests helped a number of farmers to pay off their mortgages. After all your labor, did you, or did your farm, clear $1,000 the past year? It will take only a little time and less toil to win this $1,000.

Start the children counting. A 16-year-old girl won the $100 in a former Tribune Dot Contest. Such contests sharpen the eye-sight and quicken the wits. No other employment will pay so generously as successfully counting the dots.

THE BEST WAY TO WIN.

Say ten friends, including yourself, club together, each sending in a count. One of you will possibly win the $1,000. The prize can then be divided among the members of your club—winning $100 for each of you. Each of you will have had ten chances of winning any one of the 2,999 prizes—or 29,990 opportunities of getting a portion of the $5,078.00. Your club may consist of any number, or, do not form any club at all. Simply go after the prizes yourself, for yourself. You get all the advantages of a club of ten when you pay $5.00 for five years' subscription and ten registered counts, giving you, yourself, 29,990 chances of winning some of the $5,078.00.

The count is absolutely free. Every dollar is applied on your subscription. Each time you pay for a year's subscription you may register a count.

The Farmer's Twice-a-Week Tribune

Is the busy man's newspaper; all the latest news boiled down for ready reading, published Tuesdays and Fridays each week, 104 issues a year—less than a cent a copy. Each issue has a short story by one of the best writers and a part of a serial story, fashions and current illustrations, and, above all, the best Market Reports published.

IMPORTANT DIRECTIONS.

Read With Care Before Sending In Your Counts—These Conditions Must Be Complied With.

1. Write your count, name and address very plainly. If you are an old subscriber, write your name on your coupon just as it is on the red tab on your paper.
2. Say just what your count is without any "ifs" or "ands"—make it plain.
3. Be sure to state whether or not you are now taking The Farmers' Tribune.
4. Do not waste your time and ours by asking questions and writing letters. They only hinder us and delay recording your count.
5. Counts and money must come together by mail. Telegrams are useless.
6. Remit by postoffice order, express order, check or bank draft. We will not be responsible for cash sent by unregistered mail. Do not remit in stamps unless absolutely necessary. No count will be registered unless you send the remittance with it.
7. Do not send more counts than your remittance entitles you to. If you pay $1 for one year's subscription, you can register one count. If you pay $3.00 at one time for three years' subscription, you can register four counts; if you pay $4.00 at one time for four years' subscription, you can register six counts; or better still, pay $5.00 at one time for five years' subscription and get ten registered counts.
8. Two or more contestants may have their remittances applied on the same subscription, but be sure to give the name and address of the person who is to get the paper.
9. Should you forget to send your remittance with your count, send the count again when you do send your remittance.
10. For extra counts, the total remittance must be sent at one time, together with the counts, in the same envelope. For instance, if you want ten registered counts, you must send $5.00 and the ten counts at one time.
11. No one connected in any way with The Tribune can be a contestant.
12. No one residing in Minneapolis will be permitted to enter this contest. The Farmers' Tribune will not be sent to any Minneapolis address, and for the purpose of this contest, no count mailed in Minneapolis or St. Paul will be recorded.
13. All subscriptions paid prior to this contest, or sent in separate envelope, or paid through any local agent, will not be entitled to a registered count.
14. Counts cannot be changed or money refunded after they have been mailed to The Tribune office. If you have made a mistake, send another remittance with your new count.
15. Not more than one of the first four prizes will be awarded to the same person or to members of one family.
16. Your paper and receipt will be sent you just as soon as possible. It may take a week or ten days, so do not get anxious about it. Every remittance is acknowledged in the order of its receipt.
17. This contest closes Thursday, [illegible], at 11 p. m., and money received after that hour and date will be applied on subscriptions, but the counts will not be registered.
18. After you have filled out your coupon read all directions over again carefully so that you are absolutely certain the coupon is PROPERLY FILLLED OUT.

Correspondents should be very careful not to get their personal dislikes mixed up with the news when reporting items. Sometimes it is impossible for the editor when reading an item of this kind, to realize the sting that lies in it, but when read by some one well acquainted with the people is very easily understood. We want all the news but nothing that would injure any one.

The postoffice department is now advertising for bids for carrying the mail daily except Sundays from Crookston to Gentilly and return. Mrs. Marshall says this means no Sunday mail here, or at least a choice between the present system and a morning mail over the N. P. The latter seems to be generally preferred, and in the course of human events we may expect to see the change made. A move is on foot to get a Sunday mail via Dugdale or Crookston by private enterprise, after the change from present arrangements is made.

J. N. Schmitt, of Caledonia, is in the city. Mr. Schmitt is quite taken with our city and will invest considerable in farm lands in the vicinity. Around Caledonia he says farm values have gone up to $50 and $60 an acre, and farms command a rental of $4 per acre a year. He cites one investment where a man paid $2,500 for 10 acres. His neighbors gave him the laugh. But the first year he pulled out $5.0 from onions and $1,000 from potatoes, besides incidentals from other sources, and he says he will do better this year.

A young lady attending church Sunday evening sat directly behind a tall, handsomely dressed gentleman with a piece of raveling hanging over his collar. Being one of those generous hearted wholesouled girls who grow to be motherly old ladies, a friend to every body in town—she thought how glad she would be if she could do so much for her father if he should come to church with a raveling hanging down his back, so when the audience rose for prayer she concluded to pick it off. Carefully raising her hand she gave it a little twitch, but there was more than she supposed and a foot or two appeared. Setting her teeth she gave it another yank and about a yard of that horrid string hung down his back. This was embarrassing, but being determined she gave it another yank and found that she was unraveling his under-shirt. The gentleman turned around to see what was tickling his neck, and the girl looked like thirty cents.

Dr. Adams who was a Federal general in the Civil War, will deliver his famous lecture on the Civil War Monday evening, if the people here evince a sufficient amount of interest. The Gazette trusts that the ability of the speaker and the interest always felt in this subject will be sufficient to arouse the people here to an appreciation of their opportunities.

It snowed some Tuesday. It blew some too. The wind and the snow combined made it quite interesting—the combination forming a real blizzard, even if it was April 22. Then the temperature was not low, so one might as well have been out in a water-spout as in that storm To make it more impressive, terrible peals of thunder accompanied the little frolic of the weather, while drifts piled up without regard to location, nor the rights or needs of man. The storm started in Tuesday morning and lasted until late that night. The sun came out smiling the next day as if nothing had happened. Reports indicate that it was purely a local affair, accommodating only Northern Minnesota and North Dakota points. It was the biggest thing of the kind ever seen here at this season of the year.

No. 1645
To Ira Pelden:

You are hereby notified that on the 7th day of May, A. D. 1898, in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate judgment which was entered in the District Court in and for the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, in the Fourteenth Judicial District on the 21st day of March A. D. 1898, the following described pieces and parcels of land now situate in Red Lake County (formerly a part of Polk County) State of Minnesota, were bid in to the State to satisfy the amount for which they were adjudged liable in said judgment, interest and costs, for the sum set opposite each said description in Column No. 2 hereinafter designated, and that the property has become and now is the absolute property of the State. That on the 8th day of March A. TOOK THE TOWN.

Did George & Hart's Minstrel Troupe, Which Played Here Saturday.

George & Hart's Georgia Minstrels played to a crowded house Saturday night. and the audience was certainly well entertained with the rich negro melodies, the lady baritone, the mellow basso, the sidesplitting Jew and Hobo, and a juggler who beats the world. The company promised to furnish an evening of fun and they did it, while the absence of vulgar features was appreciated.

But the performance Saturday night was only an incident and so well were the coons used the following day that they voted Red Lake Falls the whitest town ever for colored people. The City Band took the negro band to the Healy & Bourdon mill, where the music of the rushing waters as they play and sparkle in their tumultous descent over the dam, was commingled with that of the bands. Some two hundred of our townsmen accompanied the boys.

In the avening the male quartet of the troupe furnished a private entertainment for a few guests, with their inimitable songs. They say they will never forget their Sunday in Red Lake Falls, and the following day they reluctantly bade adieu to our beautiful city, some of them promising to return when their season closed, to make Red Lake Falls their home.

California Via the Sunshine Route.

If you contemplate a trip to California consult the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Ry. Every Tuesday during the season a high class Pullman tourist sleeping car will leave St. Paul and Minneapolis, running through to Los Angeles without change, arriving at Los Angeles Saturday morning, four days.

The line is via the celebrated C. M & St. P. "Hedrick Route" to Kansas City, thence over the A. T. & S. P. Ry., making the most popular and interesting route to the Southern Pacific Coast.

This service includes the "personally conducted" feature west of Missouri River. A special conductor accompanies each car, whose duty is to carefully look after the wants of each individual passenger.

Write for the cheapest rates and for a copy of the "Sunshine" folder, containing full particulars of this famous route.

J. T. Conley, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt.,
C. M. & St. P. Ry., St. Paul.

'NOTHER CREAMERY

EMARDVILLE FARMERS HAVE ORGANIZED A CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION.

A meeting for the purpose of discussing the creamary question was held at the home of Victor Anderson last Saturday. After a long and lively discussion a creamery association was organized, which will be called the Emardville Creamery Association. It was decided to locate the creamery at the Clearwater bridge between sections 19 and 30. Officers elected serve until incorporated. H. G. Benson, president; P. L. Medchill, Octave Lefaive and A. E. Sorensan, directors; A. F. Anderson, treasurer; Carl Ostby, secretary. A committee of five was appointed to solicit more shares and cows and to report at next meeting. $400 and 124 cows were subscribed at the meeting.

Teachers' Salaries Are Raising.

Salaries of teachers in graded schools of the state were increased during the years of 1901-2. There was also a large increase in the number of schools, which usually tends to decrease the average of salaries The new schools are invariably small and usually pay less than the average salary.

Principals of graded schools this year receive an average salary of $911.40 as compared with $900 a year ago. The average of the salaries paid to the highest salaried male teachers in each of the various schools is $602.82 this year compared with $572 a year ago. The average for the highest salaried women teachers in the various schools is $448, compared with $445 during the previous years. The average salaries of all male teachers was increased from $513 to $523, and the average paid to all women teachers from $381 to $394.

The number of schools has increased during the year from 572 to 583, and the value of school property from $10,895,723 to $11,664,158.

NEW CHURCH EDIFICE.

A Committee of the Presbyterian Society Appointed to Further the Project, is at Work.

Rev. Andrew Walker, the indefatigable pastor of the Presbyterian church of this city, makes the announcement that the project of a new church edifice for his congregation, which has been on foot for sometime, has now taken definite shape, and it is as good as settled that a new building will be up and ready by fall. The exact location is not yet a certainty, but it will in all probability be on the corner at the foot of Main st., formerly occupied by the First State Bank building, and which we understand will be donated by the owners. However the whole matter is now in the hands of a committe—Messrs. Hunt, Healy and Bourdon, who were appointed to buy a location, and open subscriptions for a new church, it having been decided not to move the old building, but to offer that for sale. A list has been started, and is in the hands of the treasurer of the congregation, J. W. Rodgers, where subscriptions will be received. Only members and attendants of the congregation will be solicited to subscribe, but of course all donations will be thankfully received, regardless of the denomination of the generous ones. Rev. Walker informs us that several hundred-dollar subscriptions are already in sight, with the promise of others even in excess of this amount. The success of the committee in securing funds will probably in a measure determine the character of the building to be erected, but it is thought that the new church will be a brick structure, and one that the citizens may point to with pride for years to come.

A HEROIC ACT.

P. B. Gaas Saves Life of a Boy at Risk of His Own.

Ralph, the bright little son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. N. Bourdon, was crossing the Great Northern railroad tracks last Saturday, about the time the Great Northern freight was switching in the yards, and seemed not to notice the near approach of the train. P. B. Gaass spied the little fellow and called to him to hurry on, but this puzzled him, and he stopped in the middle of the track. Mr. Gaass ran for the boy and grabbed him just in time to save his life. It was a heroic act and the imagination reels at what would have happened but for the rare presence of mind and bravery of Mr. Gaass.

A Voice From the Ark.

From the Warroad Plaindealer.

For two or three years the people of Red River Valley and the country farther west have been taking a peculiar, malicious delight in referring to the Lake of the Woods and Rainy River country as a great swamp, fit only for the inhabitation of Indians and mosquitos. It is significant, that while these people are pulling down their buildings to make rafts for their stock, to save it from drowning, people are traveling all over this country, dry-shod in ordinary shoes. While traffic is suspended in the "high country" on account of washouts and inundations, heavy trains of wheat are rolling through here every day, and not a minute has been lost because of the condition of the track. These are plain facts patent to everyone, and will carry more conviction than all the ridicule of all the wits of the plains.

Status of Red Lake Bill.

Washington, April 26.—Senator Clapp had a conference yesterday with Representative Brown, in charge of the Red Lake treaty bill, and urged that it be reported from the house committee on Indian affairs to-morrow. It is probable the bill will be considered then, and it may be amended to meet the objections of the lumbermen along the Red Lake river.

Sunday School Missionary.

As the Missionary of the American S. S. Union for this district, I earnestly beg of all who read this notice to be kind enough to write me of any district where there is need of a Sunday School; or of any school that has lapsed, or is in existence but needs help. I stand ready to do all in my power to build up the religious interest in any or all of these needy sections of this district, and shall take it as a very great favor to hear of any such points as the above.

Will you not dear readers help me to help along in a work that means much for God, Home and Country?

Yours in the Master's Service,
C. M. Williams,
Missionary American S. S. Union,
Crookston, Minnesota.

The outcome was a decided victory for the machinists and they will all return to work in the morning. Ed Leach, who caused the trouble, will be set back to the drill press and hereafter no handy men will be promoted to a turret machine.

STATE AFTER FACTS.

Minnesota Railway Commission Submits Questions to Roads.

St. Paul, April 26.—Passenger officials of Minnesota lines say they intend to make an exhaustive showing at the rate hearing before the railroad and warehouse commission in June. A list of questions has been furnished by the commission and they will go to the bottom of the matter.

The principal thing wanted by the commission is the division of operating expenses between freight and passenger. Earnings are apportioned now in the reports, but no division is made of operating expenses. The commission wants to know passenger earnings per train mile, and the cost of operating passenger trains per train mile.

At a later day this information may be valuable for another purpose. There will be an inquiry into freight rates within a year or two, and it will be a step toward determining the reasonableness of present freight revenues to find the cost of operating freight trains.

Duluth Longshoremen Serve Notice on Lumber Carriers.

Duluth, April 28.—The Duluth Longshoremen's union has decided to demand an increase in the wage scale for loading lumber from 50 cents to 60 cents an hour. Notices to that effect were at once served on the masters of lumber carriers in port, with the additional information that the new scale would be effective at once. The masters are waiting instructions from owners and until these are received it is uncertain that these demands will be met. In case they are resisted the men say they will strike. The members of the union are confident they will receive the increase without a fight.

TWO RIVERMEN DROWN.

Boat Capsizes While They Are Gathering Logs at Bemidji, Minn.

Bemidji, Minn., April 28.—William Taylor and John McGinty, rivermen, were drowned in Lake Bemidji, near Diamond point, while gathering logs for Patcher & Lynch, contractors.

Cries were heard and Freeman Doud, who lives nearby, saw one man lying on the keel of a capsized boat. He went out in another boat to his rescue, but being old and crippled, could do nothing, and the man slipped into the water and perished.

His companion was drowned previously. The cause is unknown, as the lake was smooth. The bodies have not been found.

Drouth in Minnesota Broken.

St. Paul, April 26.—Rain, long prayed for and almost despaired of, came to Minnesota during the day, just as the farmers were on the verge of final surrender of hope. Reports indicate that the rain was very general throughout the entire state. In many parts of the state the rain was exceptionally heavy, and developed into a severe storm and many wires were down. In this city the precipitation was fully two inches.

Will Be United States Attorney.

Washington, April 25.—Charles C. Haupt of Fergus Falls, Minn., Senator Clapp's former law partner, will be United States district attorney for Minnesota after May 1, succeeding Milton D. Purdy, temporarily appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Robert G. Evans. This appointment, agreed upon finally between Senators Clapp and Nelson, ends a long and bitter fight for the position.

Burglars Secure Only Ten Dollars.

Bemidji, Minn., April 24.—F. D. Coleman & Co.'s store was broken into and burglarized during the night. Ten dollars was taken from the till. Revolvers and other articles are missing. The safe contained $700, but was not opened. The guilty party is not found.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

—BY—

PHIL. A. KAUFER.

Published weekly, Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the post-office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

Well, you must admire the persistency and courage of the Prohibitionist, anyhow.

The civilized world unites in fervent prayer that the life of Holland's beloved queen be spared, and the latest report gives the sweet hope—that she will recover.

A Chicago detective has arrested a woman on the theory that she is Mrs. Luetgert, the supposed murdered wife of the sausage maker. This is important to both Mr. and Mrs. Luetgert, if true.

It is now conceded that Gov. Van Sant will be renominated. His chances of re-elcction are very bright. He has made a good governor—one of the best in the state's history, and the character of Minnesota's chief executives has ranked high.

Coffee has scored another victory, and postum a black eye. Mrs. Herspool, teacher of boys in a Sunday school at Canton, O., has just received a letter from Admiral Dewey, in which he declares the battle of Manilla bay was won on coffee, and the men did not have liquor of any kind.

A Washington despatch says for the first time since the administration of President Arthur the White House is to be thoroughly renovated and refurnished. It is a well-known fact that at the present time the dining service of the White House is made up of odd dishes to such an extent that any hostess in private life would be ashamed to ask her guests to sit down to a table so badly set. New draperies will also be provided, the walls will be redecorated and the interior will be brought into keeping with the exterior appearance as well as the important position which the residence of the president naturally occupies from a social standpoint.

A dwelling house famine is on in Red Lake Falls. A large number of new houses have gone up this spring, but they are in most cases snapped up by eager tenants as soon as the contracts are let. In consequence of the lack of dwelling houses many families are compelled as a matter of necessity, to put up with inadequate quarters, or cramped flats on second floors. New eight room houses command rentals of from $17 to $19 per month, and the supply is not equal to the demand at that. New families are coming in and the situation grows constantly worse. However, this shows a healthy state of affairs, and conditions will gradually adjust themselves to the rapid and substantial growth of the city.

The situation in the Ninth from a Democratic standpoint is now presenting some interesting features. The atmosphere has not been materially cleared by the announcement of Senator M. J. Daly that he will stand for re-election to the senate, for the friends of Alex McKinnon and Nat Campbell, of Crookston, are in the game to stay, and there is said not to be the friendliest feeling between the two factions. The old saying that familiarity breeds contempt probably holds good in their case. Mr. Campbell is apparently far in the lead, however, and The Gazette repeats its prediction of a month ago that he will be the nominee. However, McKinnon was ever a worker—and work counts in politics as elsewhere. Both gentlemen are strong vote getters and either would give the elusive office an interesting chase.

DECLINE OF PARTY ORGAN.

Kansas City Star: "Why can't a Democratic newspaper be maintained at Kansas City?" inquires the Jefferson City Daily Press, "If a national campaign was on," it adds, the same question would apply to St. Louis as far as 'metropolitan dailies' are concerned."

The inquiry might be extended to most of the large cities of the United States, for instance, not a newspaper of importance is supporting the Tammany city ticket. The American Newspaper Directory classes a majority of the journals of widest influence there as "independent." In this category are the Evening Post, the Evening Telegram, the Herald, the Sun, the Times and the Journal. The Republican papers are the Tribune—which, however, has always opposed the Platt machine—the Mail and Express, the Press and the Commercial Advertiser. In the Democratic list the only paper of importance is the World, which is now fighting Tammany.

In Chicago the parties nominally have an imposing list of organs. A recent manual classes the Inter-Ocean, Tribune and Journal as Republican, the Chronicle, Post and American as Democratic and only the Record-Herald as independent. But all of these newspapers break over party lines so frequently that in reality most of them are independent. The Tribune refused to support the Republican candidate for mayor last year and frequently criticises severely the party's tariff policy. The Chronicle in common with all Democratic papers of importance, fought Mr. Byran in 1896. Mr. Knl.lsaat, proprietor of the Record-Herald, was a personal friend of Mr. McKinley and generally supports the Republican policies. But a few weeks ago when the New York Evening Post quoted from the Record-Herald as a Republican newspaper, he wrote a line to its editor asking that it be regarded as independent.

The fact that so many great newspapers have become in fact, if not in name, independent, is not accidental. The evolution is the result of a popular demand. It was the plan of the old party organ to suppress news unfavorable to its policies. Its correspondents were given constantly to misrepresentation. A Democratic procession in which 5000 men took part would be reported in a Democratic newspaper as a parade of 20,500 voters, while a Republican organ would declare that possibly 1,500 "hirelings" were in line. Against such "journalism" the American people rebelled. They wanted the news—not distorted accounts of events. As Lincoln remarked, "you can't fool the people all the time." Men began to turn to the indenpendent newspapers because they knew that there they would find the truth about men and events—so far as it is possible to get at the facts.

The result has been that today many of the greatest newspapers in the United States are avowedly independent, and a fair share of the remainder, while retaining the party name are no longer machine organs. The people have secured what they demanded. The newspaper of today and the future must be independent—in practice if not in name.

It is an instance of the survival of the fittest.

President Roosevelt and Governor Van Sant are traveling in the same class. The President has just given the tip to Attorney Gen. Knox to go for the beef trust. Our governor ought to feel pleased that his particular brand of Republicanism has been indorsed by the chief executive and the nominal head of the Republican party. The course of both Roosevelt and Van Sant is decidedly popular, however the interests adversely affected take it. It now remains to be seen if the people will stand pat for these officials who are facing the music.

A philosopher says: More people would succeed in small things if they were not troubled with great ambitions.

WASHING LAGE CURTAINS.

I hear many sighs and expressions of dread at this season as regards work connected with the freshening of lace curtains. Now, my dear friends, there is no need of all this sighing. Life is short—but it is sweet or sour as you make it.

I grant that curtains look the very best when dried in a stretcher, next best, perhaps, when you pin them down; in lieu of a stretcher or line, muscle and nerve force, one may yet have nice looking curtains without aching in every bone and without sore fingers to nurse.

But as to washing curtains. First of all, after taking them down shake them well in the open air, then examine closely and darn every hole, big or little. Do this if you wish your curtains to last and to look well. I have seen a beautiful room that lost its charm just because of a neglected tear in the lace curtain.

Frail sash curtains should be treated in the same manner as lace, and never should they be done in the week's washing.

When mended fold the curtains till you have a square of about 18 inches, then sew each curtain so that it will remain folded, thus insuring safety of the lace. Now if you have a bath tub where you can let the water run, just turn it on, and let your curtains soak, leaving the drain open. You will be surprised and pleased to see how the dust is washed out, with never a bit of trouble. Stationary wash tubs of course are the proper places for this work but many do not happen to own them. You all know that it is not safe to forget the running water as the curtains might clog the drain. One can arrange to work where one bears the water running. When the water in the tub is no longer black and dusty looking, you are ready to wash your curtains. Have plenty of hot suds and do not use the board. Add a table spoon of borax to the water in the boiler and leave the curtains to soak but not boil for at least fifteen minutes. Rinse, blue slightly, and starch a little and you are ready for the battle.

If you wish to use the sheet-stretch way of drying, try pinning your sheets to the carpet; then place your curtain on the sheet. Be sure to have it even and straight. Stretch your curtain both ways. It will cling to the sheet. You may use a few pins for the ends, but you'll not need a dozen. Just before you are ready to take up the dry curtains you may use a hot iron to advantage on the points.

Another way is to pull your dining table out full length. Pad very well so the dampness does not spoil the polish, and stretch your curtains there.

Yet another way for a weak person—now don't be shocked—is to dry the curtains on a bed. The spare bed of course, for that may air after the curtains are removed. Place a clean sheet on top of the bed. Stretch curtain by rubbing with the flat of the hands and fold back what is too long. The writer has tried every one of these ways and can say with pleasure that things were much more congenial around after the easy way. A hot iron may be used on the wrong side to stretch the points. Any net curtain should not be ironed while wet for there never was such stuff to pull out of shape. Dried on bed, floor or stretcher, and perhaps pressed a little when dry, it keeps its shape.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

A STORY ABOUT A LITTLE GIRL AND A BOOK.

About thirty years ago little Mary was a school girl. She loved books and she enjoyed going to school so much that she cried when her mamma kept her at home. But what she liked best of all was Friday afternoon, for then one of the elder girls at school read fairy stories. Little Mary drank in, as it were, every word, and she thought that such a story book would be the greatest treasure one could wish for. You have no idea my dears how scarce books were in those days, especially in the little towns such as Mary lived in. So Mary treasured the memory of that book in her heart until she grew up to be quite a girl. Then there was a fine Sunday school library to draw from and Mary's love for books could be satisfied. Many duties came with womanhood; still Mary thought of the story book, but she did not know the name of it, so what do you think? When her own little ones were old enough to be read to, that very book was given them. Mary recognized the stories and enjoyed reading them to her babies. They are all big enough to read now and have many books which they prize, but the real treasure, though no one reads it now, is a battered, much worn copy of Grimm's Fairy Tales.

This is a true story for your Auntie Katherine was the little girl.

HOUSEHOLD.

Those who have poor success in baking cookies will find that a cup of chopped nut meats or a cup of cocoa-nut will be just the ingredient to make the cookies fine. Many use too much flour, and in rolling they handle all the dough. Results are much more satisfactory if only a small portion is rolled at a time. The dough should be just stiff enough to handle.

HERE AND THERE.

Rumor has it that the two steel companies at Duluth will be merged in the near future. They are the Minnesota Mining and the Oliver Iron Mining companies.

Fraud charges have been preferred against several parties who made entry to valuable lands in the Duluth land district under the stone and timber law. It is claimed that they were made for speculative purposes, and, in some instances, the parties making the entries were never on the land at all.

Inasmuch as the passenger departmente of the roads operating in the state declared at the conference with the commission on the matter of reducing passenger rates that they could not press their side of the case within 60 days, they were given that time to prepare, and a hearing was set for June 24.

The first annual dinner of the Minnesotans, now residents of New York city, was held Wednesday evening at the Waldorf-Astoria. It was a most brilliant success. Mail Carrier Simpson looked in on us yesterday. Mr. Simpson threw up his job when the roads broke up and wouldn't play, because he said he couldn't accomplish impossibilities. He got in as far as the city limits, he says without serious difficulty, but upon reaching this point his whole equipment went nearly out of sight in the mud. There is no gainsaying that the road leading into the city from the west needs improvement, and needs it badly. Preachers like editors become tired of too much repetition. After a time the stereotyped expressions used at funerals become meaningless and occasionally a preacher will make an attempt at originality. A striking example of originality occurred at a Roseau funeral recently when a preacher tired of the expression, "friends will now view the remains" announced that "An opportunity will now be given to pass around the bier."

Lots one (1), two (2), three (3), four (4) and five (5) in blk three (3) of Railroad addition to Red Lake Falls, according to the official plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the said county of Red Lake and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one hundred and ninety-five dollars with interest thereon at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, payable annually, on the 4th day of June in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note and interest coupon notes thereto attached, by failure to pay the annual interest falling due on the 4th day of June 1901 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said realestate for the years 1897, 1898, 1899 and 1900, and whereas the said assignee of the mortgagee, by virtue of the power contained the said mortgage, paid to the County Treasurer of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, the following taxes duly levied and assessed by the said county against the land described in the said mortgage, and were due and delinquent at the dates when said payment were made, to wit: On July 31st, 1900, paid $9.49 taxes for the years of 1897, 1898 and 1899; on April 10th, 1902, paid $3.86 taxes for the year 1900, in all the sum of $13.35 and with interest amounting to $15.41.

And whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said realestate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable; and whereas said mortgage also provides that if such taxes are not so paid the holder of said mortgage may elect to pay the same and be entitled to interest on the same at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum and said mortgage stand as security for the amount so paid, with interest.

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon and to the date thereof and for said amount paid for taxes and interest thereon the sum of two hundred and forty 33-100 dollars.

And whereas, because of said defaults and of each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the front door of the Court House in Red Lake Falls, in said County, on Saturday the 31st day of May 1902 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the Attorney's fees of $35.00, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

"Permit me to consider the legal aspect of the case," said the lawyer, sitting upon a corner of the table that was in the middle of the room and facing Neale, while the others were behind him.

There was silence of half a minute, and then the lawyer got upon his feet.

"It seems to be perfectly simple," he said at last.

"If you say so, that settles it," replied Neale, rising and walking toward the door. "Sorry to have troubled you, Mr. Alden. Good night."

And he bowed as the three men walked out, Maclane weak and trembling with excitement, Alden perfectly mechanical. As they passed the sergeant's desk the lawyer discovered that he had left his cane in the captain's room, and he returned. He was absent about five minutes, at the expiration of which time he joined Maclane upon the sidewalk. Alden was not there.

"He has gone to the hospital in our cab," said Maclane. "The man is in a trance. He scarcely spoke ten words. What detained you?"

"The captain was showing me a present that he had just bought for his little boy," replied the lawyer. "It's one of those iron banks. 'That'll make him thrifty, like his father,' said the captain. So, to encourage the child," sinking his voice to a whisper, "I put $300 into the bank while the captain was looking out of the window. Perhaps you didn't notice that I counted some of my fingers as I sat on the corner of the table; not so many as I had expected, but Neale was really glad to get rid of him. It's the easy way all around."

"Only $300!" exclaimed Maclane. "Well, that was easy."

CHAPTER V.

THE PATIENT AT ST. WINIFRED'S.

ON the way to St. Winifred's with Brenda Mr. Barnes and Mr. Hoggerty exerted themselves to be entertaining. By way of opening a conversation and showing that personal interest which a lady always appreciates Mr. Barnes mentioned the singular circumstance that he happened to know a man who had seen Miss Maclane that afternoon. He wondered whether Miss Maclane could guess where it was that this man had seen her. Upon Brenda's acknowledging that she was unable to solve this riddle Mr. Barnes kindly gave her a clew.

"If you could remember where you were at precisely ten minutes to 3," he said, "why, that would settle it."

Brenda smiled at the great astuteness of Mr. Barnes, but she declined to be led into a review of her movements that afternoon. Mr. Haggerty then struck into the conversation with the remark that it was curious how people could forget where they had been, and he instanced the case of a young lady who had lost an excellent alibi in a criminal affair through the error of not taking the police into her confidence at an early stage of the proceedings, while the facts were fresh in her mind. Brenda suggested that perhaps the lady did not fully trust the police, whereupon Mr. Barnes asserted warmly that that was the greatest mistake possible to a human being.

"Always trust the police," he said. "Guilty or innocent, it's the only thing to do."

At the hospital it became immediately evident that Barnes and Haggerty had encountered a mysterious and formidable obstacle. They were about to accompany Brenda into the reception room, and she had begun to fear that they might never leave her while she remained in the building, but for some inscrutable reason they vanished, and Brenda's last glimpse showed them obviously crestfallen.

She had been somewhat lightened in spirits by the absurd comedy played by these dull witted men. It had ended, however, and the real significance of the drama again asserted itself.

The reception room of St. Winifred's is lofty and bare, and there was a chill air in it even on that sultry June evening. Brenda observed that the place inspired her two companions with a vague terror. The maid was seized with a visible trembling, and the stalwart James shifted his heavily shod feet upon the floor, arousing singularly loud echoes that seemed to affect him unpleasantly.

The attendant who had shown them in returned after some minutes' absence with two men, one of whom Brenda had seen in the hall as they entered. He was the typical hospital physician of the popular conception. Brenda noted only that he wore spectacles and that his upper lip was very thin and rigid. In his companion Brenda was rejoiced to recognize a young doctor of her acquaintance, Sumner Kendall. She advanced hastily, with extended hand.

"Dr. Kendall," she exclaimed, "I had no idea you were connected with St. Winifred's. I have come to see Miss Miller. Is she conscious? What has she said?"

The physician seemed to be laboring under considerable embarrassment. He took Brenda's hand with a quick, nervous movement, and he clasped it harder than the forms of polite society permit. But he did not meet the young lady's eye.

"Our patient is conscious," he said. "She has an excellent chance of recovery. Indeed under ordinary circumstances there would be small cause for alarm. To our great surprise, we find that she does not know who inflicted the wound. It may be only a lapse of memory due to shock, but I myself fear that she will never be able to answer the question."

"Miss Maclane!" she cried in a weak voice.

"She does not know?" echoed Brenda.

"You must understand," said Kendall, "that the assailant stood behind her. He, whoever it may have been, is supposed to have entered the room while Miss Miller was out on the balcony. I have had the place accurately described to me. In the corner of the room near the eastern window there is quite a large closet. Perhaps you noticed it."

Brenda inclined her head.

"The assassin may have hidden himself there," Kendall continued. "Miss Miller remembers stepping into the room through that eastern window, and she knows nothing of what happened between that moment and the time of her awakening here."

"She will live," said Brenda. "She will remember some day."

"She can never remember what she did not observe," replied Kendall. "It may be that she neither saw nor heard the assassin. As to the wound, I hardly know what to say. The knife entered between the first and second ribs and passed downward very close to the body wall. Ordinarily it would be almost impossible to inflict such a wound. The assassin must have been singularly ignorant of anatomy to strike downward at such a spot, for the chances were a thousand to one that the bony structure would protect the vital parts. The knife should have cleared the first rib and hit fairly against the second. But it happens that Miss Miller received an injury on this precise spot years ago, as a result of which the first rib is somewhat depressed. Thus the murderer was favored by an extraordinary chance. His idea was, first, to escape being seen by her, and, second, to strike at the front of the body while standing behind in order to avoid the blood that must follow the blow. Having struck, he undoubtedly supposed that he had reached the heart, and only a miracle prevented. Our ambulance surgeon believed that the wall of the heart was punctured and that a clot of blood was stopping the wound, as happens once in a million times. That is not the case. Not only did the knife miss the heart, but it missed the arteries in a way that only divine Providence can account for. So the first effusion of blood was not followed by the fatal drain that might have been expected. Do I make myself clear?"

"I understand enough," said Brenda. "I know that she may recover, and I thank God with all my soul."

There was a pause, during which Kendall's embarrassment, that had been less noticeable while his mind was bent upon a description of Elsie's injury, once more asserted itself. Brenda observed that his face was flushed and his forehead moist, and she was puzzled.

"Have you told her that I am here?" she asked. "Does she wish to see me?"

"We have not mentioned it," he replied, "but you need have no hesitation. We have given her a very nice room," he hurried on. "You'll find that everything in the world is being done for her. Shall we go in?"

The other physician then came forward, and Brenda gave him her hand, though Kendall, in the extremity of his embarrassment, forgot to utter the form of presentation.

A straight and long corridor, the longest, as it seemed to Brenda, that mortal architect had ever designed, led rearward to the part of the building in which Miss Miller had been sequestered. Kendall led the way, and his colleague walked behind. For the third time that day Brenda experienced the sensation of surrendering her volition. The hospital became a prison; she was being marched to some deep cell beyond the reach of rescue or the light of day. Then, in a moment, she saw Dr. Kendall open a door and step back that she might pass before him.

Brenda's first glance happened to fall directly upon the face of the patient, and she cannot truly be said to have seen anything else in the room. The bed was only an indistinct splash of white. The bare walls, the plainly curtained window, the nurse in profile motionless as a figure on tapestry, entered into the feeling, but not into the view of the scene. She beheld only that sweet and sad little face, so pretty, so maidenly and tender. And the real essence of this despicable crime, the inconceivable inhumanity of it, seemed to speak straight to Brenda's heart in that language of nature which is without words.

Elsie's brown eyes opened wide. They had been half closed, and she had been looking at heaven knows what; nothing in that room surely, nothing that ever had been anywhere perhaps. They turned to Brenda with utter surprise.

"Miss Maclane!" she cried in a weak voice, but distinct as the tone of a little silver bell. "You have come to see me! How kind of you!" Then suddenly, "Why did you do it?"

Brenda sank upon her knees beside the bed and took Elsie's hand.

"It was an impulse—a mere impulse," she said; "but I am very glad I came. I am so sorry for you. I am a good nurse. I have been taught. Will you let me stay here with you until you are well?"

Two tears gathered in Elsie's eyes and glided slowly down her cheeks. Her lip quivered like a child's.

"I shan't get well," she said. "I don't want to."

And then the tears came very fast.

CHAPTER VI.

AN ARGUMENT FOR THE DEFENSE.

WHEN one is in the valley of the shadow, age and experience may furnish many reasons for desiring to go farther in preference to returning. As a rule, however, these reasons are swallowed up in the instinct of living and in the interest one takes in one's own struggle with the dark angel. A physician will hear many people say that they do not wish to recover, but most of them will wait until after the danger is over before giving utterance to words which the supernal powers may take too seriously.

Dr. Kendall was not in the least prepared to hear such an expression from this particular patient. He would have said that she was one who enjoyed life, every minute of it. Certainly she was as full of natural vitality as a young fawn in the woods. Plainly Brenda was at least as much surprised as Kendall, and the physician awaited her response with critical interest. If she should ask an explanation or offer an argument, it would show that she had not the instinct of the nurse. It was in the nature of an examination, and Brenda passed it with great credit.

"If you will tell me I may stay," she said, "I will do something that will make you feel much better."

"You know that I want you to stay," said Elsie. "It was very, very good of you to come, and I thank you truly."

"Such being the case," replied Brenda, "I am going to fix your hair. One moment, while I make myself ready. And now," she added, "don't move; not a muscle. See, I can reach it without the slightest trouble."

And with cool and steady hands she arranged the brown masses in which there lurked a strange glow like red gold in the sun. It was cleverly done. Elsie felt the caressing hands, but they were so deft that not a tremor reached the wound. Dr. Kendall, observing closely, nodded his head as one who considers a question satisfactorily settled.

"Such beautiful hair!" said Brenda. "You must be very vain of it."

But Elsie averred that she did not care for dark hair; it was so common. She would much rather have Brenda's.

"The entente cordiale is now fully established," said Kendall. "Miss Maclane, the patient is in your hands. I shall expect her to be playing golf in about a week. It won't be necessary for you to assist me any further, Dr. Johnson," he continued, addressing his colleague. "I will join you in my room."

Dr. Johnson bowed and withdrew. Dr. Kendall took a seat by the bed, and without appearing to do anything particularly important he determined with great thoroughness the condition of his patient. Not all that he observed would be comprehensible by a layman. The most conspicuous feature in the case was the improvement of Elsie's spirits. She spoke cheerfully to Brenda and seemed to have acquired in so short a time a certain dependence upon her. Then, almost as she was speaking, her eyes closed, her hands upon the white coverlet relaxed, and she fell asleep.

Kendall and Brenda watched her in silence for a moment while the professional nurse, who had remained in attendance, adjusted the shades upon the electric lights.

"While she sleeps," whispered Brenda, "I would like to telephone to my father. Dr. Johnson told me that Mr. Alden is probably still held at the station. He must be or he would be here. My father must try to secure his release. By the way, of course Miss Miller asked for him?"

"For Mr. Alden? Yes," replied Kendall.

"What did you tell her?"

"We said that he had sent all sorts of kind messages and that he received constant reports from us, but that she must not ask to see him before tomorrow."

"Did she plead to see him at once?" asked Brenda.

FAVOR HOUSE CUBAN BILL.

Minnesota Senators Will Vote for the Measure as Passed.

Washington, April 28.—Senators Nelson and Clapp of Minnesota will stand for the Cuban reciprocity bill as it passed the house of representatives, including the abolition of the tariff differentials on refined sugar.

They would consent to a larger percentage of reduction on Cuban products in the belief that it would possibly aid the cause of general reciprocity. Senator Clapp, in speaking of the situation, said:

"I am in favor of giving a very substantial reduction on raw sugar. There are other people besides the sugar trust who will benefit by the lower duties on raw sugar. They do not use refined sugar, but the raw products. Others are engaged in the confectionery business. They can use sugar products in this business, and if the duties are lowered it will inure to their benefit. At the same time I believe strongly in taking off the differentials on refined sugar. We need not fear any great influx of German beet sugar if the differentials are removed. The American Sugar Refining company can easily meet any competition in the world. They are paying fine dividends on a big capital stock. And any foreign competition could easily be met."

FOR THE NORTHWEST.

Appropriations in the Omnibus Public Building Bill.

Washington, April 28.—In the omnibus public building bill just introduced in the house by Representative Mercer of Nebraska is contained large appropriations for the construction of federal buildings in the Northwest. The total amount carried by the bill is $15,800,000. Of this, $1,213,000 is divided among the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota. The latter sum is allotted among the states as follows:

Minnesota—Minneapolis, $250,000; Stillwater, $50,000; Fergus Falls (increase), $15,000, making a total of $115,000; Albert Lea, site, $3,000, total $318,000.

Wisconsin — Superior, $175,000; Green Bay, $14,000; Wausau, $50,000; Fond du Lac, $60,000; Baraboo, $35,000; Eau Claire, (increase), $30,000, making a total of $140,000; total, $475,000.

South Dakota—Deadwood, $200,000; Aberdeen (increase), $75,000, making $175,000; Pierre, $50,000; total, $280,000.

North Dakota—Grand Forks, $125,000.

WANTED IN MINNESOTA.

Montana Man Arrested for a Murder Committed in 1874.

Helena, Mon., April 23.—James Noonan, who has lived in Helena 15 or 20 years, has been arrested on the charge of having committed a murder in Preston township, Fillmore county, Minn., Oct. 18, 1874.

It is charged that Noonan, known in Minnesota as Patrick Noonan, killed John Shinner. The authorities had given up ever finding the murderer until recently when there arrived in Preston a man from Montana, a former resident of the township, who had been working here. He told of having met a man named Noonan who corresponded in appearance with the Patrick Noonan who killed Shinner. The grand jury soon afterward met and the man from Montana was called before the jury. An indictment was returned April 9 charging murder in the first degree.

Noonan is about 57 years of age and is well known. Noonan denies his guilt and says a mistake has been made.

BOY'S EXPERIMENT STARTS FIRE.

Friction of Corn Stalks Causes a Destructive Blaze.

La Crosse, Wis., April 24.—A successful attempt to produce fire by friction by rubbing two corn stalks together, made by Harry McMillan, the 14-year-old son of John McMillen, a wealthy farmer residing at Mabel, Minn., 10 miles west, resulted in a disastrous fire. The fire was communicated to a stack of corn stalks and from them to the barns. The McMillan farm is a small village. The fire destroyed the barns, with much hay and four imported draft stallions. It then spread to the tool and machinery sheds, destroying valuable machinery; leaped to a sawmill several rods distant, which it reduced to ashes.

DR. CYRUS BROOKS DEAD.

Pioneer Methodist Minister Passes Away at St. Paul.

St. Paul, April 22.—Rev. Dr. Cyrus Brooks, the veteran Methodist minister, whose death has been momentarily expected for several days past, died at 6:45 o'clock p. m. at his home in this city, 868 Mound street, where he had lived since 1861. He was 91 years of age at the time of his death. Dr. Brooks was one of the pioneers of Methodism and one of the oldest ministers in point of service in the United States, having been connected with the Methodist Episcopal church for 69 years. He was at one time one of the most influential preachers in the West, and his councils were powerful in the church of his devotion.

MINNESOTA PASSENGER RATES.

Roads Given Until June 24 to Prepare Their Case.

St. Paul, April 23.—Inasmuch as the passenger departments of the roads operating in the state declared at the conference with the commission on the matter of reducing passenger rates that they could not press their side of the case within 60 days, they were given that time to prepare, and a hearing was set for June 24.

With the exception of one or two lines every road in the state was represented at the meeting. To give the railroad commission the desired information it will be necessary to make tables showing the comparative standing of the gross and passenger earnings and expenses.

Son of Noble Sire is Dead.

Morgan, Minn., April 28.—Unktominxsha, otherwise White Spider, halfbrother of Great Chief Little Brow, is dead at the old Redwood county agency. He was 75 years old and a son of the chief of the Rapoja band, Wakingatanka (Big Thunder).

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

Rev. Andrew Walker went to St Hilaire Sunday where he conducted services in the M. E. church, in the absence of the local pastor.

The Presbyterian church building is for sale. The price asked is very reasonable—$1, , and no doubt the edifice will be bought and converted into a residence.

The annual meeting of the Northwestern association of the Baptiste church will be held this year at Detroit, June 10-13. The program is now being prepared.

The month of May in the Catholic church is given to especial devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary. May devotions will be held at St. Mary's church after mass in the morning.

May 2 is dedicated in the Catholic calendar to St. Athanasius, one of the four Greek Fathers of the Church. He was one of the greatest theologians of his day and earned the title of "Father of Orthodoxy."

May 3 is the day of a festival celebrated by the Roman and Greek church, known as the Invention or Discovery of the Cross. It was on this day in 326 that St. Helena, mother of Constantine the Great, is reported to have discovered the cross on which Christ died. Portions of the cross were sent to Constantinople and Rome, where churches were built to receive it. Relics are now scattered all over the earth. The church of St. Francis Xaxier and also the church of St. John the Baptiste, in New York city, claim to have relics of the cross and they are exposed to view and veneration on Easter Sunday. They are preserved in gold and crystal caskets.

May 1 in the church calendar is a combined day, in honor of St. Philip the Apostle and St. James the Less. The former is patron saint of Brabant and Luxemburg. May day was formerly celebrated with great festivities in England and various European countries. May poles were erected and the spring season thus celebrated. Cromwell's parliament prohibited May poles, a writer of the times characterizing the May pole as a "stinckyng idol," which the people bring from the woods, "followying it with greate devotion." And when they set it up they "leape and daince aboute it, as the heathen people did at the deycation of the institution of May games."

A PAPER MILL.

Will Be Established at Some Point Along the Red Lake River at Crookston or Above.

A paper mill will shortly be established on the Red Lake river either here at Crookstoon or at some point up the river where sufficient water power can be secured. L. Lindauer of Kaukauma, Wis., was in the city this morning and went to Thief River Falls where he will investigate the water power. He will also visit Red Lake Falls and other points along the river and will seek to find the best water power that the river affords. When Mr. Kindauer returns to Crookston he will look up the water power west of the city.

Mr. Lindauer's company has definitely determined to put in a paper mill in this section and it is simply a question of the best water power together with the best transportation facilities. The company has recently put in a big mill at Grand Rapids. They regard this as a highly desirable point to establish another mill, and if sufficient water power is found they will put in a very large mill. It is to be hoped that a suitable location may be found immediately and the work upon the mill commenced this summer.—Crookston Times.

Music in the Air.

The old members of the band met Tuesday evening in the city hall and before the rehearsal a business meeting was called by Manager Berthon. Treasurer Kaus reported the band as in good financial standing, having $57 in the treasury.

This was the first meeting held since the Easter concert and ball given by the band on April 1. A meeting was held immediately after the concert that evening and it was decided to let Prof. Frick go, as some members saw and knew that the band would not hold together much longer under his leadership, thinking this the best way to maintain a band that would give the citizens summer evening concerts, and thereby keeping their good will, so that in future when another leader is hired there would be no kicking on the part of the citizens.

Secretary Armstrong tells us that another leader has been hired. His name is withheld for certain reasons, although it is a certainty that he will come the first of August. H. A. Whittmore, of Hendrick, Iowa, operator at the G. N. depot, a very able musician, has consented to lead the band until that date.

The band now has fourteen members and there are ten members in the Junior band, who will gradually join as they become competent.

California Via the Sunshine Route.

If you contemplate a trip to California consult the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Ry. Every Tuesday during the season a high class Pullman tourist sleeping car will leave St. Paul and Minneapolis, running through to Los Angeles without change, arriving at Los Angeles Saturday morning, four days.

The line is via the celebrated C. M & St. P. "Hedrick Route" to Kansas City, thence over the A. T. & S. P. Ry., making the most popular and interesting route to the Southern Pacific Coast.

This service includes the "personally conducted" feature west of Missouri River. A special conductor accompanies each car, whose duty is to carefully look after the wants of each individual passenger.

Write for the cheapest rates and for a copy of the "Sunshine" folder, containing full particulars of this famous route.

Do Not Have to Refile.

The Cass Lake Times says that the scare crow to warn those who filed on homesteads since January 1st, 1900 outside of the county in which the lands are located, they have to refile before the land office or a U. S. Commissioner located in the same county as the land is not warranted. The Times editor who made some of these filings for the parties wrote to Senator Nelson about the injustice that the department had placed upon the settlers and the senator answers, that all these cases have been referred to the Board of Equitable Adjudication and that no more cases will be sent back for refiling.

RED LAKE LANDS

SENATOR CLAPP THINKS SETTLERS WILL HAVE TO PAY FOR THEM.

GOVERNMENT WILL HAVE A GREAT DEMAND AT THE GOING PRICE.

Washington May 5.—Senator Gamble is greatly pleased with the outcome of the bill for opening up the Rosebud Indian reservation, with a provision that the Eddy free homes bill will apply to these lands.

Some inquiries have been made of Senator Clapp as to whether the Rosebud bill will be made a precedent for the Minnesota reservations at Red Lake and the Chippewa reservation, so that entries can be made under the free homes bill.

Mr. Clapp to-day made the following statement: "The situation relative to the Red Lake and Chippewa reservations is very much different than that of the Rosebud reservation, in South Dakota. Surrounding both of the Minnesota reservations are valuable farming lands, well settled, and there are near by towns, having every facility for railroad and markets. The lands on both reservations are, therefore, valuable, and we shall not ask that the free homes act be made applicable, for the reason that there will be more than enough settlers who are ready and willing to take the lands at the small price per acre which the government will ask. Now, the Rosebud reservation is in an unsettled country, and is very poor in comparison to the Minnesota tracts. There will be a different class of settlers going there. As for the Minnesota lands, there is no doubt but what the government will have a great demand for every acre at the going price."

VILLAGE OF MENTOR.

Has 182 Inhabitants and Seeks Incorporation.

Messrs. F. E. LePage, I. L. Messalt and Ovide Moreau of Mentor appeared before the county commissioners of Polk county Monday with a petition asking that the village of Mentor be incorporated.

Mentor is one of the most flourishing villages in Polk county, being located in a good farming country and also the headquarters of Maple lake resorters. The farming country tributary supports a large number of good substantial farmers who make Mentor their trading place, and those who spend the summer months at the lake get most of their supplies from Mentor merchants. The little burg has grown during the past year and now feels so large and robust that it wants to take its place among Polk county's incorporated villages.

The territory that it proposes to cover includes all of section 27, the south half of section 22 and the west half of section 26. In this area reside 182 souls, of which 47 are legal voters.

No action has as yet been taken by the commissioners, but it is safe to say the prayer of the petitioners will be granted, as they are entirely within the law, it only being necessary to have 175 inhabitants and 30 legal voters in order to incorporate as a village.

RED RIVER VALLEY.

Hydrographic Investigations in the Red River Valley of Minnesota and North Dakota.

The Red River of the North and its Valley occupy a unique position among the streams and valleys of the United States. Collecting the waters from between the two great northern arms of the Mississippi system, this river takes its course directly north, uniting with numerous streams draining the lake region of central Canada, and finally reaching Hudson Bay through Lake Winnipeg and the Great Nelson River system.

The Red River Valley, besides bringing the Artic slope for a distance of over two hundred miles within the United States represents an equally unique position among the agricultural districts of the west. It is safe to say that no equal area within the four northern states, lying on the Great Plains, immediately west of the ninety-seventh meridian, possesses a more productive soil or has such promise of rapid future development The Red River Valley, originating at Big Stone Lake with a width of only a few miles, spreads its V shaped valley northward in a broad level plain reaching a width of no less than seventy or eighty miles at the international boundary. The Red River of the North takes its course down the middle of this almost flat valley, one of the most tortuous streams for its length in America. The Valley is not a valley of erosian, but the bed of an ancient glacial lake built up by a lacustrian deposit to a thickness of thirty to seventy feet. The stream represents the very youngest type of river development. Indeed on either side of the main stream, large areas lie with such gentle slope that definite drainage channels have been unable to develop and the heavy clay beneath preventing underground drainage, has given rise to extensive areas where the water stands late into the summer months, unless artificially drained.

The Red River of the North has eroded a channel varying from 100 to [illegible] feet in width, from 20 to 60 feet deep and which has an average fall of only [illegible] inches to the [illegible] the capa[illegible] sufficient [illegible] water from [illegible] the spring [illegible] average [illegible] unusual[illegible] the snow [illegible] suddenly [illegible] of rain, the river is [illegible] for the surplus water, and the resulting flood has been known to extend over the middle of the Valley in places for a width of ten to fifteen miles. When the early settlers came into this region, the undrained surface presented an aspect most forbidding; but by perseverance in draining, through ditches and road making, the aspect has altogether changed.

The Red River of the North has been aptly called the "Nile of America." True, it flows northward; its broad, fertile valley is formed of a lacustrian or alluvial deposit; and it is in a sense still subjected to occasional inundations. The total area within the United States covers between eight and nine million acres or is considerably greater than the productive area of the Nile Valley. But unlike the Nile the Red River Valley is located in a region having cold winters which renders the land unproductive for one half of the year. The Red River Valley lies on the border of the sub-humid area, receiving an average annual precipitation (about twenty inches) sufficient to produce the large crops for which this valley is famous, even though the moisture is very uncertain in its distribution. However, depending upon variable cyclonic storms for its rainfall, which varies from fifteen to thirty inches, it is seldom that conditions favor a maximum crop yield of which this rich soil is capable.

As the country develops and intensive and diversified agriculture results, the question is not alone that of drainage and getting rid of surplus water in wet seasons, but also that of equal importance how to conserve and utilize the water during dry seasons. The Nile Valley, with a productive area of only three-fourths the size of that of the Red River Valley within the United States, and with crude methods of irrigation and agriculture, was able in 1890 to support a population of over 6,000,000 people, while the population of the Red River Valley is less than one-thirtieth of that number. The Red River Valley, for climate reasons, can never hope to equal in productiveness that of the Nile, yet with intensive agriculture which is rapidly daveloping, who will

EDDY WITHDRAWS

EDDY RETURNS TO WASHINGTON AND ANNOUNCES HIS WITHDRAWAL.

WILL QUIT POLITICS AND ENTER INTO BUSINESS IN THE WEST.

Washington, May 3.—Congressman Frank M. Eddy has returned to Washington after an absence of two months, the greater part of which was spent in Norway. Yesterday Mr. Eddy issued the following statement:

"I do not know that I have anything to say that will be of interest to the people of Minnesota, except that I will not be a candidate for re-nomination.

"Last fall I made an exceedingly close canvass of the new Ninth district and came to the conclusion that while my chances for re-nomination were perhaps as good as those of any other of the candidates, I could only secure such nomination after a hard struggle. I found many of my former friends and supporters lined up for one of the other candidates, and I felt that many who pledged me their support really preferred some one else.

"It is hardly necessary for me to say that I am not afraid of a fight, but all of my fights heretofore have been with opponents of republicanism, and I had no desire to enter into a contest with republicans and friends. After my canvass I received what I conceived at the time a very flattering business proposition, and I concluded that I would close my political career with being the first and only republican congressman from the old Seventh [illegible] and leave the republican [illegible] and Norwegians [illegible] also offered in the growing west. He said:

"A great deal of misapprehension and many misstatements have been made about my trip to Norway. It had nothing to do whatever with bringing in immigrants or laborers to the United States.

"Last December in conversation with J. H. Clergue, president of the Algona & Hudson Bay railroad of Canada, the proposition was submitted to me to secure working men and settlers for a region of undeveloped Canada territory. I sent two men to Norway for the purpose of offering inducements to 500 men, and they went to Christiania in January.

"A few weeks later I received a message asking me to come over and aid in their efforts, and in February I started on what I supposed at the time would be a flying trip, but which was prolonged for two months. We brought 475 men to Sault Ste. Marie, and I might add that we started with 476, thus breaking all records in the transportation of men such a long distance. They will be set at work at once. and some of them will take up Canadian lands."

STRIKE OF LONGSHOREMEN AT DULUTH SETTLED AFTER LONG CONFERENCE.

Independent Operators Opening Many New Mines on Mesaba Range—Case Brought to Test Constitutionality of Drainage Law—Alleged Log Thieves Captured Near Brownsville—General State News.

Duluth, May 5.—The longshoremen's strike which was inaugurated one week ago has been settled on a compromise basis after conferences between the representatives of the Lake Carriers' association and the Longshoremen's union, lasting four days.

The longshoremen will receive 52½ cents an hour unless the rate for carrying lumber goes up to $3 per 1,000 or over, in which case they will receive 55 cents an hour. In addition the Lumber Carriers' association agrees to regulate the arrival of the lumber boats so that the longshoremen will be given more steady employment than heretofore.

The longshoremen demanded 60 cents an hour and struck because the demand was refused. They had been receiving 50 cents an hour, which was the same rate which was paid them last season.

When the conference between representatives of the vessel owners and the union broke up, after a session lasting almost all night, the former presented to the latter a memorandum of an agreement for the settlement of the strike. An immediate call was issued for a special meeting of the Longshoremen's union to take place at 1 p. m. At that meeting the proposition of the carriers was discussed and accepted and the representatives of the two parties met once more and the agreement was signed.

MESABA IRON MINES.

Independent Operators Are Opening Many New Ones.

Duluth, May 3.—The number of new iron mines that will be opened on the Mesaba range this year will be greater than in any year since the commencement of business there. About all these mines are for independent operators, concerns outside the United States Steel corporation, and most of them are actual consumers as well as miners of ore.

June 1 nine new mines will be shipping over the Great Northern to its docks at this harbor, and though none of them will be big mines this year they will add about 500,000 tons to this year's business of the road. Later in the season two more will ship over that road and the rest will be served by the two roads of the steel corporation.

Most of the day was consumed by the employers and employes in trying to get together, but in each instance the effort was a signal failure.

It is expected that the new cheese factory will start up on the 19th of this month, if the conditions are such as to warrant doing so. The cheese maker has written that he will be here soon to put everything in readiness for starting up. It is to be hoped that all the farmers who do not live too far away will give the factory their hearty support by bringing all the milk they can and do so as long as the factory is in operation. Do not get discouraged if the roads should sometimes be bad or if the returns should no be as large as you have figured on. It always takes time and labor to get a new thing started, but the cheese factory is bound to be a paying institution if the farmers will stay by it. Give this matter your serious thought and in the meanwhile we say, success to the Wylie cheese factory and if you want a good chunck of cheese, buy Wylie cheese.

George Bell, with a face veiled with great seriousness announced last week to the good people of Lambert that he had found a purse containing about five thousand dollars. Everyone within earshot, of course made a dash for his pocketbook to look at its contents, but as they did not notice that this little sum was missing, they concluded that it must have been lost by a stranger.

Sciatic Rheumatism Cured After Fourteen Years of Suffering.

"I have been afflicted with sciatic rheumatism for fourteen years," says Josh Edgar, of Germantown, Cal. "I was able to be around but constantly suffered. I tried everything I could hear of and at last was told to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which I did and was immediately relieved and in a short time cured, and I am happy to say it has not since returned." Why not use this liniment and get well? It is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

TO UPLIFT THE NEGRO.

It is not generally understood that the movement known as the Negro Young People's Christian and Educational Congress, which is to convene in Atlanta next August, from the 6th to the 11th, is the most gigantic movement in the interest of the spiritual and educational uplift of the negro ever attempted.

Prof. I. Garlland Penn, who will be remembered as the commissioner of the negro department of the Cotton States and International exposition of 1895, and now one of the general secretaries of the Epworth league in the Methodist Episcopal church, is the executive officer of this Christian congress as corresponding secretary.

In speaking of the history and purpose of the movement Prof. Penn says:

"The Negro Young People's Christian and Educational Congress had its origin in a meeting of a number of men of the negro race who are in some way officially connected with young people's Christian work in the City of Washington, March 1, 1901. These men had been invited to come to Washington for the purpose of considering the relation of our young people to church work and as to whether a large concerted movement among all denominations on this one idea of aggressive Christian work among the young people would be a wise and timely one. It appeared to those men whose judgments were made up by actual experience through travel throughout the United States, among our people, that the young people are not as actively engaged in Christian work as they should be. This lead to a unanimous decision to issue a call for the meeting now known as the Negro Young People's Christian and Educational Congress to be held in the City of Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 6 to 11, 1902.

"It is to be a congress of sturdy, thinking Christian workers who come to reason together, study our problems in conference, and if possible, start out on aggressive lines to reach the young people of the race at the proper period in their history. We submit twenty-one purposes which this movement hopes to cover, emphasize and inspire.

"We are expecting 10,000 of the most enlightened, as well as the most prominent and best behaved Christian men and women of the race from all sections. To secure this we have effected a thorough organization by appointing 2,000 commissioners to see that delegates are elected and that the most prominent Christian and educational workers in every community are directed, given information, etc. If 2,000 commissioners average five delegates each we will have our 10,000 delegates.

THE SPREADING OF TASTE.

Sylvester Baxter, writing for the April Century, says that one of the most hopeful chapters in the record of American progress toward the ideals of a higher civilization is that which tells of the development of a more beautiful life for the people at large. A higher standard of living is marked, he says, in more beautiful home surroundings; in better architectural standards, domestic, mercantile and public; in better kept highways, improved paving, good sidewalks, etc; in the beautifying of public places, creating parks and backgrounds, planting shade trees in town or country, protecting scenes of cherished beauty and setting them apart for public enjoyment, and in organizing associations for accomplishing some of these ends through voluntary effort, and inducing action on the part of municipalities, etc., toward effecting other improvements of perhaps more comprehensive character.

Mr. Baxter says that in some of the newest and crudest communities which seem hopelessly involved in raw ugliness, the response to this movement has often been most alert. "When I first visited the capital of a certain state beyond the Mississippi, nothing could have been more depressing than the impression which it made. Every street was a wide slough of mud in wet weather, and was suffocating with dust when dry. The entire city had a correspondingly slouchy, unkempt and vulgar appearance. Ten years later I found a wonderful change; the streets all well and smoothly paved, good buildings on every hand, pleasant and tasteful homes the rule, the whole city well groomed in appearance, and the seat of a genuine civilization."

Mr. Baxter maintains that cleanliness, order and beauty are within reach of the smallest and poorest community, and that they are cheaper to maintain than slovenliness and dirt. One man can do much to arouse village pride to organize efforts for betterment. "To keep the interest alive in organized work of the kind, it is essential to be able to point to practical results achieved, and to hold out various desirable things to be definitely aimed at. The community should be interested by some definite advance made each year—certain tangible objects accomplished, and certain inviting ends to be looked forward to. And the public should be impressed with the practical advantage derived from such activities—how they actually pay in dollars and cents by increasing the attractiveness of a place, and consequently the value of the property, as well as in adding to the beauty of existence and making life richer and fuller."

The Crookston Times refers to Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls as small towns. Don't let your jealousy get away with you like that again Bro. McKenzie. It's poor policy.

A prominent republican yesterday made this statement on the congressional situation: HalvorSteenerson will be nominated, but Ezra G. Valentine is the ideal, broadminded, capable candidate.

Mrs. Margaret Challis, of Crookston, carries a double column ad in the Crookston dailies. Mrs. Challis is a milliner and her style of going after business, as well as her hats, are the very latest.

The building bee goes merrily on in Red Lake Falls, and if the present rate of progress continues throughout the season, this will be the banner year in our city's advancement. Red Lake Falls is a good town to tie to.

Crookston retail merchants have formed a local association, the object of which is to effect uniformity of prices—Democrats, Pops and Republicans in the grocery business there joined in a common cause. The harmony prevailing at the meeting is said to have been touching.

The past few weeks was the time to apply James Whitcomb Riley's philosophy:

It ain't no use to grumble and complain;
It's just as cheap and easy to rejoice;
When God sorts out the weather and sends rain,
Why, rain's my choice.

The sun is shining again, but the good idea may be stored for future use.

Those suspicious mortals who like to refer to the press as subsidized, are invited to glance over the formidable list of state papers opposing the merger. Certainly there was never a larger interest effected, or freer occasion for the press to take a position favorable to an immense organization of wealth. He who cries fraud and dishonesty the loudest, bears the closest watching. There are good men on both sides of this question, taking their positions from conviction. Why not take a broad and generous view of such matters, and be less free in attributing wrong motives?

JIMMIE DONNELLY.

As I sat shelling peas for dinner to day the pleasures of yesterday (an ideal spring Sunday) flitted through my mind like a panorama. Suddenly my thoughts refused to wander from one group. Strange, too: just a man, a woman, two little chaps, three and five respectively, and a baby in arms. So I'm going to tell you about the man in the group and hope you will bear with me to the end.

A couple of years ago Jimmy Donnelly moved into a small cottage in our neighborhood. The neighborhood raised its eyebrows, shrugged its shoulders, and held aloof. Jimmie came and went, and even in its utmost indifference the neighborhood saw that Jimmie had a swagger and also heard that he had a rich brogue that would turn a bowery policeman green with envy. In the many months of Jimmie's residence here he noticed no one but the "neighborhood" saw how his boys, dubbed the "Jimmies," were fondled by the fond papa, how he took them out when possible, how, when the third Jimmie appeared upon the scene, Jimmie pater spent hours upon hours at home while many other men found no time to be at home. When sickness seemed to have a never ceasing grip upon the inmates of the little cottage, the writer of this story made a visit to the sufferers. You may be pleased to learn that though there was plain furniture to be seen there was no squalor nor yet was there evidence of disorder. The wife of Jimmie told me how good "that man" had been through it all, feeding the tiny infant and caring for the rest. The "neighborhood" has learned to respect Jimmie. Now here is my point. THAT MAN IS A BARTENDER AND FOREIGNER. HE IS AN IDEAL HUSBAND AND FATHER IN SPITE OF HIS OCCUPATION AND NOT BECAUSE OF IT. HE IS THOUGHTFUL OF HIS WIFE IN SPITE OF HAVING NO EDUCATION.

Many men, of whom we can recall dozens, fail to be ideal husbands, not because of environment or lack of education; but in spite of all their advantages they let Jimmie of my story put them to shame. How is it with you my friend? Where do you spend your Sundays. "Oh, with the boys" many of you will say. Then go home to the wife you have chosen. Do not forget that she would appreciate your company much more than "the boys." You have taken her from congenial pleasant surroundings. Do you think she forgets the fact, though she never complains? Take her and the babies out. It will do them good. She perhaps has been indoors all week. Do not waste your time on some street corner but hie you home and do at least as well as Jimmie does.

Note.—I expect the men to get the sense of this, even though they do not read it. Women are good quoters and I trust them to quote to the lords and masters of their homes should the men decline the reading of such "rubbish."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

BILLY THE ROBBIN.

One spring day after a terrible rain storm, Trude and Willie were playing about, and their attention was called to the garden, for under the plum trees there lay several bird's nests, near them were broken eggs and dead birds. But here was a poor little thing saying "Peep, tweek." Willie saw it first and picked it up tenderly. Immediately Trude said, "Why it is a robin. Poor little thing let's try to raise it." So indoors they went, all sympathy with the mass of feathers and bones, nearly all head. The whole family loved robins dearly, so the little fellow had a warmer reception than his appearance would have warranted. Johnny and Adam arranged a cage for him—a fine big cage. They all fed him, and when the sun came out next day the father and mother robin came hunting and calling their baby. Perhaps he did not belong to them, for anyway, even though he was placed out among the plum trees every day, he never left his kind friends and if you could only have seen him hop and run when Trude called, "Come Billy, Billy," you would have loved him as much as that whole family did. While running towards the person calling him he would answer so sweetly and the children declared he was saying, "Yes, I'm coming just as fast as I can. Coming, Coming." How about some of my little friends—do you, too, answer promptly when called?

HOUSEHOLD.

DINAH DOORWEIGHT.

Fill a catsup bottle, or one of that shape, with sand. Cut the foot off of a black stocking and gather the end tightly. Stuff end with cotton enough to make a doll's head, then pull stocking over bottle which has been filled with sand and tightly corked. Draw stocking together tightly at bottom of bottle and fasten. Next take black goods enough to make a mother hubbard dress. Hem and feather-stitch with yellow. Then gather dress around neck of bottle. Next make a little white apron also feather stitched with yellow and tie about waist of Dinah. For arms take small piece of the stocking and make arms stuffed with cotton, cover with sleeve made of dress goods and sew to Dinah on each side. Next hem a white square for a handkerchief and fasten about the shoulders. Another square with a knot tied in each corner for Dinah's head and you have her dressed. Mouth, nose and eyes are made by button-holing the proper shape. Mouth worked with red, nose and eyes with white. This can be made out of patches and any little girl will find it easy to make a Dinah door weight without spending a cent for mother's patch bag will supply all the goods needed, I'm sure. A bow of yellow at the neck is a pretty finish for Dinah.

The above made of a small bottle and supplied with a flannel square under the apron makes a pretty pen wiper and paper weight combined.

Industrial Progress a Modern Juggernaut

By Bishop HENRY C. POTTER of New York

I HAVE YET TO HEAR ANYTHING MORE TRAGIC THAN THE STORY OF THE MODERN WORKING GIRL IN THE MODERN GREAT CITY.

These girls come into the city by the thousands, only to disappear again after a moment, broken, decrepit, prematurely aged. This devouring machinery takes the young life, uses it for a moment and then dismisses it as nothing but "a rag and a bone and a hank of hair."

The religious newspapers have pointed out that the working girl can now have cheaper shoes than she used to have and more trinkets, but THE FACT IS ONLY JUST BEGINNING TO BE REALIZED THAT MODERN INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS, ABOUT WHICH AMERICANS SWAGGER IN A MANNER THAT IS PERFECTLY ODIOUS TO ME, IS A DESTROYER OF BODIES AND SOULS.

Failing in this, the promoters plan to build on the lot between the post office and Mrs. Zaiser's building.

There is talk of a big paper mill being located at Red Lake Falls. An establishment of that kind would be of great benefit, not only to the Falls, but to the entire section. What the northwest needs is more manufacturing industries of every description, which will add to the value of the local market. It is not agriculture alone that has made real estate so valuable in the older states of the union.—Warren Register.

The rear end of the building occupied by Zaiser Bros. livery stable is gradually sinking, on account of the slide-out occasioned by the Great Northern cut. Chas. N. Bourdon, who owns the property, has taken the precaution to brace the building, but it is continually settling and he will bring action for damages against the Great Northern in district court.

The Elwood Land Company as a Red Lake Falls business institution is no more, Healy & Bourdon having bought the company's interests here. Ole Christensen, who has so capably conducted the firm's business during its career here, has taken a position with Healy & Bourdon. The Elwood interests have fallen into good hands—the firm of Healy & Bourdon being recognized as among the foremost real estate firms in Northern Minnesota.

The Two Harbors Iron News, commenting upon the success of a musical entertainment in which Oliver Colbentson, the talented son of our former townsman, Thomas Colbentson, took part, says: Although but 14 years of age, Oliver Colbentson, of Duluth, is one of the best violinists yet to appear here. It is wonderful how one so young has attained such a masterful conception of the instrument, and indicates that Oliver has coupled with his talent for music, application seldom shown by one so young. His playing alone was well worth the price of admission. He certainly has a bright musical future in prospect.

This, from Admiral Schley, will, if possible, still further endear him to the American people, who love a generous, charitable heart: "I regret very much the death of Admiral Sampson and I sympathize with his family. No one has ever heard me utter one unkind word about him. On account of his death I have requested my friends in Baltimore to postpone the delivery to me, which was intended to have taken place to-night, of the Cristobal Colon service of silver, and they have accepted my request."

The marriage of Fred W. Zeh and Miss Mabel Owen was quietly and prettily solemnized at the groom's South Missoula home yesterday at high noon. The service of the Presbyterian church was employed. Rev. Walter Hayes of the First Presbyterian church of Missoula officiating. But the relatives of the bridal couple and a limited number of intimate friends were present. Numerous handsome and costly wedding gifts were made. From Mr. Zeh's companions at the Missoulian office a handsome silver service with tray, a charming present and with an expression of best wishes for all prosperity. From the Order of Hermann Sons, in which Mr. Zeh is a prominent member, a delegation of nearly 100 visited the home of the bridal couple last evening. Their visit was as a serenade, for which they were graciously received.—The Missoulian.

Will Knight returned yesterday from Itasca county where he has been cruising all winter. Will says he did not time his return properly, and the spring break up necessitated considerable wading and inconvenience. Since the discovery of iron ore deposits there has been a great rush of prospectors to Itasca county. The government does not permit homestead entries on mineral lands, and inspectors are keeping such close tab on the situation that it is feared many homesteaders who have not yet proved up and who took their claims in ignorance of their mineral deposits, may now lose their lands, after several years of residence. Of course once the patent is issued there is no revocation. The Waukesha Paper Company has scripted thousands of acres of spruce lands in Itasca county, and it is their intention of putting in a paper mill as soon as the railroad extension into that country from Deer River is completed. Some of the finest agricultural lands in the state are located north and northwest of the upper body of Red Lake, and many settlers are filing there.

St. Hilaire.

From the Spectator.

Thanks to the laborers and generous contributors, St. Hilaire's Catholic church is now completed. The pews are being placed in position and are first class and will be a lasting ornament. A costly chalice and ciborium and a beautiful vestment case have also been presented. All have reason to be proud of the church and are invited and always welcome to attend the services held in it.

Jas. Sutor, chairman of the county board, called on us Monday on his way to attend the commissioners' meeting at the county seat. He says that seeding has been progressing quite favorably in the vicinity of Wylie, and a good deal of the wheat is showing up nicely over ground. He has about 80 acres of wheat seeded himself which is nicely sprouted and looks as fine as any he has ever seen at this time of year.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed, and delivered by Levi Brouyette, and Mary Brouyette, his wife mortgagors, to May Buse mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 4th day of June, 1900, was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota on the 31st day of July, 1900, at 3:10 o'clock p.m., in Book 20 of mortgages on page 226 and is now recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, in Book 20 of mortgages, on page 226.

Which said mortgage, together with the debts secured thereby, including taxes paid by the mortgagee, was duly assigned by May Buse, to M. O. Sortedahl by written assignment dated July 31st, 1900, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, on December 9th, 1901, at 4:15 o'clock p. m., in Book "T" of Mortgages, on page 61, and which said mortgage, together with the debts secured thereby, including taxes paid by the mortgagee and the assignee under the mortgagee, was again assigned by the said M. O. Sortedahl, to Ernest Buse, by a written assignment dated March 3rd, 1902, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota on April 10th, 1902, 3:30 o'clock p. m., in Book "S" of Mortgages, on page 22 to-wit:

Lots one (1), two (2), three (3), four (4) and five (5) in blk three (3) of Railroad addition to Red Lake Falls, according to the official plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the said county of Red Lake and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one hundred and ninety-five dollars with interest thereon at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, payable annually, on the 4th day of June in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note and interest coupon notes thereto attached, by failure to pay the annual interest falling due on the 4th day of June 1901 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said realestate for the years 1897, 1898, 1899 and 1900, and whereas the said assignee of the mortgagee, by virtue of the power contained the said mortgage, paid to the County Treasurer of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, the following taxes duly levied and assessed by the said county against the land described in the said mortgage, and were due and delinquent at the dates when said payments were made, to wit: On July 31st, 1900, paid $9.49 taxes for the years of 1897, 1898 and 1899; on April 10th, 1902, paid $3.86 taxes for the year 1900, in all the sum of $13.35 and with interest amounting to $15.41.

And whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said realestate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable; and whereas said mortgage also provides that if such taxes are not so paid the holder of said mortgage may elect to pay the same and be entitled to interest on the same at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum and said mortgage stan.. as security for the amount so paid, with interest.

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon and to the date thereof and for said amount paid for taxes and interest thereon the sum of two hundred and forty 33-100 dollars.

And whereas, because of said defaults and of each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the front door of the Court House in Red Lake Falls, in said County, on Saturday the 31st day of May 1902 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the Attorney's fees of $35.00, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

"Miss Miller is a very obedient patient," he said. "No one could give less trouble."

"Well?" rejoined Brenda. "Please proceed."

"I don't quite understand."

"You have something more to say."

"It occurred to me," said Kendall slowly, "that she exhibited less anxiety to see Mr. Alden than I should have expected."

This statement seemed to furnish Brenda with abundant food for thought. She said nothing as they traversed the long corridor, and Kendall also was silent. After Brenda had sent the message to her father she conferred with Kendall in regard to her remaining in the hospital as Elsie's nurse and then dispatched her maid under James' escort for such things as she would need.

The departure of the servants left Brenda and Kendall alone in the reception room.

"I wish you would tell me more about Miss Miller," said she. "I cannot understand why she should not have wished to see Mr. Alden."

"I did not say that," responded Kendall. "It was her manner that struck me as peculiar."

"She seems as unaffected and impulsive as a child," said Brenda. "I can imagine her asking for Mr. Alden as naturally as if he had been a drink of water."

"That is precisely what she did not do," said the doctor. "Let me tell you just what happened. When she was brought to the hospital, she was unconscious. For certain reasons we took her to the room where she now is, though that would not have been the ordinary course. While I was making my first examination of the wound she began to revive, and I believe that she regained the full command of her faculties within a few minutes. It is not always possible to say just when a patient's mind becomes effectually clear, but I am perfectly sure that Miss Miller's was wide awake some little time before she chose to let that fact appear.

"You must remember that we overestimated the gravity of the wound and indeed were expecting the worst at any moment. Considering the nature of the case, it was important to question her immediately. I asked her who had inflicted the injury, and I know that she heard and understood me as well as you do now, but she made no sign. After her first view of the place, which she must have recognized as a room in a hospital, she closed her eyes, and I think it must have been a matter of five minutes before she opened them."

"Thinking," said Brenda, "thinking, thinking. Poor child!"

"Though she is obviously abnormally sensitive to pain," Kendall continued, "she bore what had to be done with the fortitude of a Christian martyr. I made up my mind after awhile that a miracle had protected her and that she had a chance to survive; therefore I ceased to ask questions, deciding to let her take her own time. When she spoke, it was not in reply to me, and she seemed to address no one. 'I am going to die,' she said, and then she began to cry very softly, as you saw her a few minutes ago. I replied that I did not think so, but she shook her head, murmuring something about the grief of her mother, who could not come in time to see her. I asked for her mother's address and was informed by a police sergeant who had just been admitted to the room, coming under orders from Captain Neale, that Mrs. Simmons, the landlady, had telegraphed to Mrs. Miller.

Kendall and Brenda watched her in silence for a moment.

"The sergeant then came lumbering up to the side of the bed armed with a notebook and a pencil. Without waiting for him to put a single question Miss Miller told her story of the crime as I told it to you. She had stepped out upon the veranda and had almost immediately re-entered the room by the eastern window. She neither saw nor heard any one. Beyond a confused memory of a sharp and terrible pang, sudden, unexpected and probably meaningless, because the mind is darkened before it can comprehend, she can recall nothing. There was very little for the sergeant to put down in his notebook."

"Did he believe her?" asked Brenda.

"Yes; I think the sergeant did," replied Kendall, with a slight emphasis on the noun. "At least the only indication of doubt he gave me was to ask me in the corridor afterward whether the wound could have been self inflicted. I told him to dismiss the idea, and he seemed to have no difficulty in doing so. It is not, at the first glance, a physical impossibility, but practically it is precisely that."

"Suppose she should say that she did it," said Brenda.

"With apologies to Miss Miller," responded Kendall, "I must tell you that that would not affect my opinion in the least. If she has any desire to shield the guilty, she cannot do it in that way."

Brenda's keen gray eyes searched the physician's face.

"Do you believe that?" she demanded.

"Frankly," said Kendall, "my opinion is that Miss Miller knows perfectly well who did this deed."

"And her motive for concealment?"

"I leave that to her own heart," was the reply. "Yet it would seem that there could be but one."

"A motive of the heart," said Brenda. "Do you realize that this amounts to an accusation?"

"Then let us not speak of it any more," said Kendall. "Let us get back to Mr. Alden."

"We have already done so," she said; but the doctor would not be drawn into such an admission.

"After the police officer had gone," he resumed, "Miss Miller asked me whether a note addressed to her had been found in her room. I answered yes, and then she inquired whether Mr. Alden had been informed of her misfortune. Fearing to excite her, I substituted for the truth the fiction that I just outlined to you, and my poor little patient merely sighed. She did not ask when she could see Mr. Alden nor mention his name again in any connection."

"From which you infer"—

"Nothing whatever," insisted Kendall.

"You do not trust me," said Brenda, not without bitterness. "You believe Mr. Alden guilty of this frightful crime, and you dare not say so in my presence for fear that I may not be discreet and you may be put into an unpleasant position."

"I could scarcely be put into a position more unpleasant than this one," said Kendall earnestly. "I want to tell you the exact truth about—about everything that I know or imagine, and it is deadly hard to do it when you look at me as if I were an enemy. This is as near as I can come to an accurate expression: Miss Miller's manner convinces me that she is shielding the assassin, and there is no known reason why she should shield any one else than Mr. Alden."

"But why not take the perfectly easy alternative that she is telling the truth?"

"I will," said Kendall, "if you wish me to."

"I am very serious," said Brenda. "This is a promise you are making?"

"It is," replied Kendall, his face flushed and his voice not quite steady. "It is my word of honor given to you, and so twice sacred as the word of a friend," he added. "You were good enough to say that we were friends two years ago."

"I have better cause to say it now," she replied. "Let me hasten to prove my sincerity in the usual way, by burdening you with a confidence. You must be wondering at me."

"Why?"

"Because I am here."

"It is a fine thing," said Kendall earnestly. "So much I know."

"I will tell you more," rejoined Brenda, "and it will make you think better of Mr. Alden. This tragedy of today is a revelation to me, but not of the kind that you suppose. Mr. Alden had not concealed from me that his heart had been won away, but I did not understand. He told me of Miss Miller's existence two months ago, but I would not hear all he wished to say. He intimated that he had begun to regard her with feelings that made his engagement to me dishonorable. I viewed him with pity," and Brenda laughed very softly and without mirth. "I was so incredibly ignorant of everything outside my own sphere that I could not imagine the existence of such a woman as lies now in that room out there.

"Clarence said she was an actress, and he looked at me as a man upon the defensive. I can see him now. I pictured a siren, a creature grotesquely unworthy, appealing to his wild and reckless nature with thin artifices that would be clear as glass to him when he should view them with a dispassionate eye. Truly, I was only sorry for him, ashamed of him a little, yet very anxious to help him. It seemed to me that breaking our engagement would be the very worst thing that could happen to him, and so I refused to consider the woman at all. One meets men in society, Dr. Kendall, whose well known ways of life have an unfortunate tendency to pervert women's ideas in such matters. We admit the existence of certain persons whom we see in the park with elegant equipages, but we cannot consider them as rivals."

"But surely he spoke of her with respect," said Kendall.

"Absolute," replied Brenda, "but I thought him the more a fool. He said one evening, I remember—and it was only a very short time ago—that Miss Miller cared nothing for him and never would. I was merely convinced by his sincerity that the woman was playing a deep game, and I swore by such gods as I have that I would save him from her. And so it went on until last evening, when he sent me a note which made it impossible that our engagement should continue. It was only a frank, honest statement that his heart had passed utterly out of his control. I can see now that he could have done no better, but I did not take the right view at the moment. Perhaps it was because I had heard that day for the first time that Mr. Alden's engagement with me was of the highest importance in his business affairs. If he had allowed it to continue for that reason—But he had not. It was really all my doing.

"However, to continue, I went to his office today because I was impatient, and I told him that the engagement was at an end. That was in ten words. And the loss of me, Dr. Kendall, affected him so little. He was obviously so wrapped in an impenetrable happiness that I lost my temper for the first time in a good many years and cut short the interview. Oh, we were perfectly courteous to each other, and when we parted—most unromantically, with an elevator man rattling the catch of the door to make me hurry—we shook hands upon a vow of friendship. But I was in a shameful rage as I left the building.

"I went up town as far as the shopping district and wandered aimlessly in the stores. Then I got upon a street car, preferring it to the loneliness of a cab. And so it happened that a newsboy thrust the story of this crime into my face. The paper was wet from the press—printed and upon the street within half an hour after the discovery of the crime. A reporter must have been right upon the scene by accident and have rushed to his office immediately.

"Let me confess my own folly. In the very first instant I feared that Mr. Alden might have struck the blow. It was sheer madness. I was overwrought by the excitement of the afternoon, and, remember, I then pictured Miss Miller as a desperate and scheming woman, one whose real nature was likely to be revealed to Mr. Alden in an instant by an unguarded word. What mad scene might follow, who could say? There might have been some sort of struggle. She might have turned the knife against herself, meaning to strike him. Impatience smothered me. I must know at once, and, besides, I had a deadly longing to see her—to see the woman who had wrecked a life that was dear to me and lost her own in doing it.

"My first awakening was in her room. There was something of herself in it. Afterward I came here and heard that old man in the office say 'the child.' And then I saw her, with indescribable surprise, even after such preparation as I had had. Her rival? I am not so vain. Why did I not see her before? And the idea that Clarence Alden could have lifted his hand against a creature so pathetically beautiful that she must appeal irresistibly to a man so strong as he is utterly monstrous. You can't believe it."

"You are quite right," said Kendall. "I don't believe it."

CHAPTER VII.

THE PROSECUTION IS HEARD.

BRENDA returned to Elsie's room after arranging with Kendall to be notified at once if her father should secure Alden's release and he should come to the hospital. As she passed out of the reception room she encountered Dr. Johnson, who was in the act of entering. He took a seat upon a corner of the table and met with some evidences of embarrassment the look which Kendall turned upon him.

"Were you listening there?" demanded Kendall after half a minute's silence.

"Well, I couldn't help hearing a word or two," the other admitted. "You see, I was looking for you, and I didn't want to interrupt the conversation."

"This thing must stop, Mr. Elmendorf," said Kendall. "I've been dragged into it by the heels. I gave you my word in the dark before I knew what you were going to do."

"I didn't know myself what I was going to do," replied the detective. "I came up here with orders to be present when Miss Maclane went into Miss Miller's room."

"I did not suppose that this deception would extend to Miss Maclane when I made my promise," said Kendall. "I understood that she had seen you; that she knew who you were. And you are not disguised."

"I have shaved off my mustache," said the detective, "and I look like the devil without it. But this whole matter of disguise is merely knowing what somebody else will notice. When you're going to be recognized, send another man. Miss Maclane had too much on her mind at the Thirty-eighth street house. She couldn't have told afterward whether I was white or black. And so, with the mustache gone and these goggles for my eyes, it was a sure thing."

"Why was it necessary?"

"I reported to headquarters that Miss Maclane was coming down here," replied Elmendorf, "and the old man wanted to get a line on it."

"On what?"

JOIN DULUTH AND KLONDIKE.

Hill and Pacific Roads Back of Company Just Incorporated.

New York, May 1.—A Herald special from Trenton, N. J., says:

A gigantic railroad scheme was launched during the day in the incorporation here of the Great Northern Consolidated Company of Canada with an authorized capital of $10,000,000.

The corporation papers are signed by dummy incorporators, but the story has leaked out that this company is the first step toward the building of a railroad from Duluth, Minn., to Dawson City, in the Klondike.

The road is to cost $150,000,000 and James J. Hill, the Northern Pacific and the Canadian Pacific roads are behind the scheme.

The line will go through long stretches of wilderness and in some places will be 300 miles from any other railroad. Freight will come over this line to Duluth and from there will be loaded on boats for the East and Europe. The road is to be commenced this summer, it is said.

TWO VESSELS ASHORE.

Deflection of Compasses Causes a Marine Disaster.

Duluth, April 30.—Because of a deflection in their compasses, caused by a magnetic deposit on the north shore of Lake Superior, the steamer Tempa and schooner Aurora, coal laden, went ashore 20 miles from this city. News of the accident to the vessels came to Duluth by telephone from the city pumping station, eight miles from the city, after a number of the crew working the boats had walked from the scene of the wreck. The tug Zenith, with a wrecking outfit, was sent at once to the scene. The boats are lying on a rocky shore. There was no wind when they stranded but heavy fog prevailed.

AN AID TO NAVIGATION.

Heavy Rains Cause a Rise in the Mississippi.

La Crosse, Wis., May 5.—The heavy rains of early Saturday morning in La Crosse and along the Mississippi above here brought joy to the hearts of steamboat men, for the rain will raise the water in the river to a navigable stage again. The river has been so low up to a week ago that navigation was practically suspended and the outlook for the season extremely blue. During the past week, however, it has gone up nearly a foot and a half and the rains of last night will cause it to go still higher. No Diamond Jo packets have made a trip up river yet this year owing to the poor stage of the water.

NOT IN QUARRY TRUST.

St. Cloud (Minn.) Concerns Refuse to Enter.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 1.—The quarry owners of this city all deny that the recently organized trust has an option on any of their properties, but it is known that at least two East Side quarries have been optioned to a local man, and it is further known that the money for the purpose was furnished by outside parties. It is possible also that other owners have been approached with a propositon to sell, but it is considered very doubtful if any organization could get control of all the quarries for the reason that they are mostly owned by small producers and co-operative concerns.

INJUNCTION AT FUNERAL.

Body Is Delayed While Law Grinds Out Decision.

Winona, Minn., May 5.—Owing to a dispute over the title to some land in Pleasant Valley, supposed to be a cemetery, the funeral of John Gatzlaff was stopped by injunction proceedings. The funeral procession had reached the cemetery and the interment was about to be made when the papers were served by the sheriff, and the body had to be placed in a vault in Woodlawn cemetery over night. In the morning the cemetery officers showed a deed to the property and the interment was allowed by the court.

CLOSES BIG LUMBER DEAL.

Cass Lake Company Buys 80,000,000 Feet From Minneapolis Firm.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 2.—J. Neils & Co. of this town have made arrangements with the Scanlon-Gipson company of Minneapolis for the purchase of 80,000,000 feet of standing and cut pine. It is rumored that this sale means that the Glenmont mill will not be rebuilt at present, and the town suffers a loss in its pay roll of $500 a day. Thomas Shevlin of Minneapolis is a member of the Neils company.

WISCONSIN ORATOR WINS.

Ten Colleges Engage in Interstate Oratorical Contest.

St. Paul, May 2.—In the interstate oratorical contest held at the Central Presbyterian church, and in which there were 10 contestants, first honor was awarded to Oscar Edward Maurer, Beloit college, Wisconsin; second place to Frank Brown, Knox college, Illinois, and third place to Charles A. Culver, Carleton college, Minnesota.

Wins the Governor's Medal.

St. Paul, May 1.—Minnesota's first educational butter contest is at an end, and John Fridner of Strout, Meeker county, becomes the proud possessor of Governor Van Sant's gold medal, which represents the championship of the state in butter making. Mr. Fridner's average for the 12 months, 95.78, is an extraordinary record.

Fright Causes Heart Failure.

Winona, Minn., May 1.—Fright caused by an accident resulted in the death of John Gatzlaff in Pleasant Valley. Mr. Gatzlaff was on top of a load of hay and in making a turn on a sharp decline the load tipped over and he was thrown off. He was not injured, but the fright induced heart failure that caused his death.

Wisconsin Defeats Minnesota.

Madison, Wis., May 3.—Wisconsin defeated Minnesota in the intercollegiate debate here on the question: "Resolved, That railway rates in the United States should be regulated by governmental authority." Wisconsin upheld the negative.

dare predict what the future shall be, when the natural resources are fully developed? The one question is either of the areas above compared has been that of the natural development and control of the water resources. The demand has been growing for a number of years that some effort be made to determine whether a better control of the surface waters of the Red River Valley could not be accomplished. In response to these demands, and recognizing their importance, the United States Government has, through the hydrographic division of the U. S. Geological Survey, taken up the work in the Red River Valley with a view of determining the annual discharge and capacity of the principal streams, the location of possible reservoir sites where water may be stored not only to relieve the spring floods, but to be used later for power or irrigation. Gage stations are being maintained along the Red River and on its principal tributaries, and the results of these investigations will be published each year as a part of the annual report of U. S. Geological Survey.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

THE HOME COMING.

RED LAKE FALLS WARMLY WELCOMES BACK HER SOLDIER BOYS.

VICTOR PATNAUDE, SIMON PAUL AND WM. BEAUTROW HOME AGAIN.

Saturday's incoming Great Northern had as passengers Victor E. Patnaude, Simon Paul and Wm. Beautrow, three Red Lake Falls boys who were returning home after three years' service in the U. S Army in the Philippines. That our people appreciated the significance of the occasion could not be doubted, and the three brave boys, as they stepped off the train were fairly smothered with the warmth, cordiality and enthusiasm of the welcome home, which took the form of a public reception at the depot, followed by a love feast in the square in front of the city hall. No such crowd as assembled at the depot to make the home coming of our soldier boys memorable was ever seen here before. Mayor Watson with aldermen Healy, Schreiter, Crompe, Bray and Borchers, headed the procession that marched for the City Hall to stirring strains from the city band. The soldiers, three abreast, in uniform, presented a decidedly natty and attractive appearance. They were given seats of honor on the balcony of the city hall, while surrounding them were members of the G. A. R., among them Simon Paul Sr., father of the handsome young soldier who sat beside him.

Mayor Watson delivered the opening address of welcome, and was listened to by an attentive and sympathetic audience. The effort was perhaps the finest public deliverance ever attempted by Dr. Watson. The beautiful sentiment pervading his speech, clothed in flowery language, seemed to touch a responsive cord in every heart, and there were very few dry eyes in the audience at his conclusion. Other fine addresses followed by Thos. Germo, Wm. McIntyre, S. A. Swanson, Dr I. Lemieux and F. A. Grady, and had the boys entertained any doubts as to whether their sacrifices in leaving home and friends to fight their country's battles in far off climes was appreciated, they were quickly dispelled. Red Lake Falls is proud of her soldier boys, and she wanted them and the world to know it.

After the addresses of welcome, Victor E. Patnaude, with whose letter over the nom de plume "Vic" the readers of The Gazette have for three years been entertained, spoke for the soldiers, assuring our citizens that the manner in which they had been welcomed home was deeply appreciated.

"Public speaking is not in my line," Mr. Patnaude said, leaving his hearers to frame in mental vision a picture of the line that had been his—fighting for his country.

Three cheers and a tiger, and music by the band followed, and the respective relatives of the boys in blue once more claimed their own.

In the evening the Junior Band, not to be outdone by the Regulars serenaded the soldiers at their homes.

Messrs. Patnaude, Beautrow and Paul left Red Lake Falls together on May 1, 1899, enlisting at Fargo May 6, leaving immediately on the transport Sheridan with 2800 men, for Manila, where they arrived July 24, having made the voyage of 8,000 miles in one month. Messrs. Beautrow and Paul were in Cos. E. and G., 4th Cavalry, respectively, and Mr. Patnaude in Co. D., engineer corps. All served under Gen. Lawton for a time, Messrs. Patnaude and Beautrow up to two days before his death, while Mr. Paul was with him at the time. The boys were finally separated—Mr. Beautrow with MacArthur's advance, participating in many engagements among them the Battle of Porac, a provincial capital. Messrs. Beautrow and Paul left the Islands the 3d of August on the Hancock, the fastest transport in the U. S. navy, returning via the Pacific, and after their arrival going to Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas. Mr. Patnaude embarked on the homeward journey via the Suez Canal, on Oct. 17, reaching New York City Dec. 24, and Jefferson Barracks, Mo., Dec. 29, April 11 being transferred to Ft. Leavenworth, where he rejoined his old comrades. Their meeting there was as accidental as the meeting of three cards in a deck, since there are some 150 garrisons in different parts of the country, and their return home together completed an adventure which was as romantic in its termination as in its inception.

Individually, their army records are as follows:

CORP. VICTOR E. PATNUDE.

Victor E. Patnaude first enlisted in Co. L, 14th Minn. volunteer infantry, in 1898, serving 7 months and 19 days, and later with the regulars, serving three years. He participated in engagements in the Philippines in the Battle of Arayat Oct. 13, 1899, the Battle of San Isidoro, Oct. 19,' 99, the Battle of Talabara, Nov. 5, '99. On June 7, 1901 he was promoted from private to cook Corporal.

WM. BEAUTROW.

Wm. Beautrow's papers show that he took part in fourteen distinct engagements: Fall of Porac, Sept. 28, 1899; skirmish, Barrios de Camnuig, Oct. 27, '99; Battle of Porac, Nov. 22, '99. skirmish between Caluiit and San Pedro de Mugalang, Nov. 5, '99; between San Isidore and Capas Nov. 11, 99. Occupation of Tarlac Nov. 12; skirmish in the mountains San Rafeel Nov. 12, 1900; San Miguel Mar. 1, 1901.

SEGT. SIMON PAUL.

Simon Paul Jr. saw continuous 3-year service in the Philippines, and is given credit for participation in actions as follows: Sebul Dec. 10, 1899; engagements in mountains east of Penowandu, May 31, 1900; Balubid June 11, 1900; Papaya June 14, 1900; skirmish, Rio Chico, July 18, 1900; engagements, Santo Christo, Aug. 30, 1900; Dora Mts. Nov. 22, 1900, Buloc Mts. Mar 18, 1901. Appointed corporal July 22, Sargeant Nov. 25, 1900.

The Gazette takes a peculiar pride in all three of these boys, inasmuch as each in turn has served time as "devil" in this office.

Wm. Beautrow at Crookston described the "water cure" to a Journal reporter as follows:

"It consists in the main of placing a refractory Filipino, or one from whom a confession or some matter of information is desired upon his back on the ground where he is firmly held. His jaws are then pried apart with something—a gun barrel generally being the handiest thing—and a half dozen canteens of water were then poured down his mouth. He has to swallow or strangle and sometimes does both. If not ready to give up the desired information when this is completed, the victim is then slapp d on the stomach and his discomfort is added to in some other manner, but he generally "gives up." "It is no worse than our fellows were treated in numerous instances," said Mr. Beautrow, "and not nearly as bad. It strikes me that the officers who are testifying in the matter before the committee in congress are making a mistake in denying that the 'water cure' was practiced, while others equally as creditable are acknowledging it. They are all saying things now that they are liable to regret later on."

WYLIE CHEESE

THE LOCAL ASSOCIATION NOW READY TO BEGIN ITS MANUFACTURE.

Wylie, Minn., May 13.—Didrik Kvindlang, of McIntosh, who is to run our cheese factory the coming season was here last week and put things in readiness at the factory. Mr. Kvindlang is a first-class cheese maker, and a hustler, and Wylie is fortunate in securing his services. He is sure to make the factory a successful institution if he gets proper support from the farmers. But a cheese-maker cannot make cheese without milk, no matter how good he is and it is therefore to be hoped that all who have any milk to spare will send it in if the distance is not too great.

The factory will open on the 19th of May and we hope that all the farmers in the vicinity will be there on the opening day, even though they have not much to bring at the start.

Everybody put their shoulder to the wheel and give the factory a lively boost.

TAX JUDGMENTS

THE TAX SALE MONDAY WAS MOSTLY ON FARM LANDS.

"Pursuant to that certain tax judgment entered the 21st day of March, 1902, on 1900 taxes, delinquent on the first Monday in January, 1902," was fairly well attended, the principal buying being on farm land descriptions. These are not plentiful on tax rolls now, the values on acres having stimulated the tax payments.

The principal purchaser was Wm. Erb, who bought to the extent of about a thousand dollars. Others were John A. Duffy, Prichard Stone Co., Sortedahl & Bjorneby, J. K. O. Sherwood and Netherlands American Mortgage Bank.

A total of 112 descriptions were disposed of, the average payment on a quarter section being about $14.12, and the total amount paid into the treasury, as a result of the sale, in round numbers, was $1600.

The sale was made under the provisions of the new law enacted at the recent session of the legislature, which provides that the bids shall be made on the interest and not on the amount of the tax judgment, as has been done in previous years. The maximum bid on interest is placed at 12 per cent. but the bidders have the privilege of bidding any rate under that, the amount of the tax judgment remaining the same and the sale being made to the party offering to take the judgment on the lowest rate of interest.

There was but little competitive bidding Monday, and on all descriptions but four the legal rate of 1 per cent a month was secured by the wiley capitalists.

OPERA HOUSE A GO.

ANDERSON & SCHWALEN WILL RECEIVE A BONUS OF $1,000.

Anderson & Schwalen have completed plans for their new furniture store, and have decided to put the opera house on the second floor. The building will be 48x84, 32 feet to top plate, with truss roof. The opera house will have a level floor space of 30x59 feet, with an eight foot gallery. The stage will be 20x24, and there will be two dressing rooms. Sufficient subscriptions have already been pledged to insure the $1000 bonus offered the firm as an inducement. It is proposed to give the proceeds of the opening night to the subscribers, and in this way by properly utilizing the event, the subscribers think at least five hundred dollars may be realized, which would cut the donations in two. Messrs. Anderson & Schwalen may be relied upon to give the public something substantial and creditable in return for the encouragement now being offered them. The project is in good hands.

LE SUEUR WON.

AND THE FERGUS FALLS SUPERINTENDENT WAS SURPRISED AT THE DECISION.

Fergus Falls Journal: Superintendent Vandyke returned from the cities Saturday morning where he attended a meeting of the directors of the High School Debating league and listened to the debate between Glenwood and LeSueur for the state championship and the Journal's cup.

The debate took place in the chapel of the state university and was very largely attended. Mr. Vandyke states that Glenwood made a stronger showing than in the debate in which it contested honors with the Fergus Falls team at St. Cloud, and the audience was very much disappointed when the judges decided in favor of LeSueur. The decision of the judges was unanimous, but how they reached it is a mystery.

HE ADMITS DEFEAT

PRESIDENT HILL BELIEVES HIS MERGER SCHEME WILL BE KNOCKED OUT.

Decision Against the State in Cass Lake Land Case—Increased Salaries for Minnesota Postmasters—Republican State Convention to Meet in St. Paul July 1—News of the State in General.

Minneapolis, May 12.—A special from Washington to The Times says:

James J. Hill, the railway king, practically admits that he is beaten in the litigation against the Northern Securities company, and is preparing a line of retreat.

It is conceded by his legal advisers that the federal suits probably will be successful, and he therefore must arrange the business of the three railroads involved so that no great damage will be done the properties.

It is his present intention to prepare for this change gradually, making little of it public in an authoritative way from time to time and thus try to avoid the shock which would come if it were announced that the Northern Securities company was illegal.

It is proposed to make the Burlington system the chief one of the three great railroads. Last winter the legislature of the state of Iowa passed a law under which the Burlington got a new charter.

The Burlington will not attempt to absorb the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific, but the last two will work as closely under the direction of the mother system as the charter and the laws of the state will permit.

DECISION AGAINST STATE.

Minnesota Loses Suit Affecting Indian Lands.

Washington, May 6.—The case of the original action of the State of Minnesota against Secretary Hitchcock of the interior department and Commissioner Hermann of the general land office was decided by the United States supreme court during the day, the opinion being delivered by Justice Brewer. The suit was brought by the state to restrain these officers of the interior department from selling the land included in sections 16 and 36 in the old Red Lake Indian reservation, the state claiming those lands under the grant for school purposes.

The decision was against the state, the court holding that as all the lands embraced in the reservation had been the property of the Indians they are entitled to the proceeds of the sale of them.

WANTED IN ST. PAUL.

One of the Men Charged With Mayer's Murder Nabbed in Kansas City.

Kansas City, May 10.—Al Beard, with many aliases, wanted in St. Paul on a charge of murder, and for whose capture the Minnesota officials offered a reward of $1,500, has been arrested here. Beard is said to be one of three men who shot and killed Policeman Charles Mayer in St. Paul on Feb. 1 last, while they were robbing a saloon. Beard was connected with a gang of bank robbers and highwaymen that was broken up at Hanover, Kan., in 1896, and in 1897 was convicted with two others of robbing the Bank of Davenport, Nev. He is also wanted for alleged complicity in the robbery of the Bank of Turin, Ia., last fall, when $1,600 was taken. In Beard's room here were found burglar tools, dynamite and other paraphernalia.

MONEY FOR MAIL MEN.

Minnesota Postmasters Will Get Larger Salaries.

Washington, May 8.—Announcement was made at the postoffice department of increases of $100 a year in the salaries of the following postmasters in Minnesota: Fergus Falls, Glencoe, Graceville, Hastings, Heron Lake, Lake Park, Leroy, Luverne, Moorhead, New Prague, Fulda, Greenwood, Hallock, Hopkins, Lakefield, Lanesboro, Little Falls, Montivedeo, Morris, New Ulm and Olivia. Increases of $200 a year are also made in the salaries of Minnesota postmasters, as follows: Milaca, Northfield, Herman and Mapleton. The salary of the postmaster at Janesville will be reduced from $1,300 to $1,200. These changes will take effect July 1.

MINNESOTA REPUBLICANS.

State Convention Will Be Held in St. Paul July 1.

St. Paul, May 9.—The Republican state convention will be held in St. Paul, Tuesday, July 1. The date of the convention was settled by a unanimous vote of the state central committee. The county conventions will be held June 24, one week before the state convention, and the total number of delegates entitled to seats in the nominating convention is 1,172. The apportionment of delegates was made on the vote for McKinley in 1900 at the ratio of one delegate for each 250 votes and five delegates at large for each county.

ON A LEVEL WITH WHEAT.

Milwaukee Road Makes New Rate on Export Flour.

Chicago, May 7.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road has placed export flour on a level with wheat in the matter of transportation charges. This action, according to The Record-Herald, which makes the announcement, will be followed by all Western lines with similar rates and means a saving of millions yearly to the millers of the Northwest.

For years the millers have vigorously contended that if the rates were made the same on wheat and flour grain would not be taken from the United States, but would be made into flour here and then shipped for export. Strong appeals for relief have recently been made to President Roosevelt direct, to congressional committees and to the interstate commerce commission.

The rate from St. Paul and Minneapolis on both flour and export grain is now 20½ cents; formerly it was 23 cents on flour. The rate of 20½ cents applies to part lake and part rail shipments. From St. Paul the rate on flour for export by all-rail is 25 and on grain 17½.

HEAVY FALL OF SNOW.

North Dakota and Northern Minnesota Are Visited.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 10.—Snow fell over almost the entire Red river valley, reaching from Winnipeg south to the main line of the Northern Pacific. At Grand Forks the ground is covered with nearly two inches of snow, which is rapidly melting.

Reports from outside indicate that the storm was general over the valley. Winnipeg had heavy snow and the storm extended 100 miles west of there. Between here and there the fall was somewhat lighter and at Fargo the fall was scarcely noticeable.

The western boundary of the storm was the higher land just west of the valley. Beyond there there was only a light drizzle. To the east practically all the wheat growing territory of Northern Minnesota was covered and the storm reached into the woods.

CAPITAL OF $3,500,000.

Big Company Organized to Deal in Railroad Lands.

Duluth, May 12.—Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago capitalists have organized what will be known as the Saskatchewan Valley Land company, with a capitalization of $3,500,000, with headquarters at St. Paul. TYPHOID AT ST. CLOUD.

State Board of Heath Investigates the Water Supply.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 12.—Dr. H. M. Bracken of the state board of health met with the city council in special session yesterday to consider the question of a pure water supply.

Repeated tests of the water have shown that it contained typhoid germs, and an epidemic of that disease has afflicted the city for the past year.

Filtration was decided to be the only remedy, and the attorney of the first mortgage bondholderds, who are operating the plant, made a proposition to install a $50,000 filtering plant and it is probable that it will be accepted.

GREAT WESTERN EXTENSION.

Syndicate Organized to Provide Capital for the enterprise.

Chicago, May 8.—It is officially announced that the Chicago Great Western will extend its lines to St. Louis. A syndicate has been organized to provide the capital for the extension. John W. Gates is a prominent underwriter.

It is understood that the company will issue a first mortgage lien on the new line. The bonds will be taken by the underwriters at about 90 and the difference between this figure and par will be filled with common stock in the way of a bonus.

ST. LOUIS TO TWIN CITIES.

Rock Island Road Planning a New Through Route.

Chicago, May 8.—The Record-Herald says: Unless present plans of the Rock Island management fail, Chicago will soon have another line to St. Louis and St. Louis will have a new through line to St. Paul and Minneapolis. Agents of the Rock Island are negotiating for the purchase of a majority of the stock of the Chicago, St. Louis and Peoria road with a view to making it the southern portion of a new St. Louis-Chicago line.

SMOOTH SWINDLE.

Red Wing (Minn.) Man Is Done Up for $3,000 by a New Game.

Red Wing, Minn., May 7.—A man giving his name as James Moore, by means of a forged deed succeeded in recording the farm property of W. J. Swenson as his own. He then borrowed $3,000 from William Lawther, giving a mortgage as security, and disappeared. It is one of the smoothest swindles ever perpetrated in this locality.

"Whether they'd seen each other before. The result was a little peculiar, as you'll admit. Your patient recognized Miss Maclane at a glance, but Miss Maclane says she never saw Miss Miller before. What do you make of it? Of course Miss Maclane has told so many different stories"—

"It is perfectly natural," said Kendall, checking Elmendorf by word and gesture. "Miss Maclane is prominent in society. Her picture has been printed in the newspapers a hundred times. With a natural motive for interest in her, Miss Miller has undoubtedly familiarized herself with Miss Maclane's appearance. She may even have seen her entering a church on the occasion of a society wedding—or in some similar way."

"That's the easy answer," replied Elmendorf, "and I guess it's right. One thing is certain—if Miss Maclane struck that blow, Miss Miller didn't see her, and the poor girl's story is true."

"If Miss Maclane struck the blow!" repeated Kendall, dazed. "What earthly reason have you"—

"Now, see here," said Elmendorf, "let's view this matter calmly. Nobody can be hurt by a straight, honest view of the facts, except the one that ought to be hurt, the cowardly, black hearted murderer who did this thing. Talk about calmness! Wait a minute."

He walked back and forth two or three times between the table and the corner of the room, finally facing Kendall squarely and continuing:

"I don't usually care a— Excuse me. I don't usually swear, either, and I won't do it now. I was going to say that these things don't effect me, as a rule; they're all in the way of business. But somehow this takes hold of me. How could anybody harm that little girl?"

And he took another turn across the room.

"Miss Miller exerts a strange influence," said Kendall. "I suppose we're at least as hard hearted as the police, but I caught Dr. Carrington, the ambulance surgeon who went out on this case, walking up and down in his room and telling another of our young doctors what he would like to do to the man who was responsible for this. The room smelled of brimstone from the language that he used. And between ourselves, Mr. Elmendorf, the thing filled me with horror such as I haven't felt in a good many years. It is the personality of the girl undoubtedly. There's nothing unusual about the case."

"Well, I would hardly say that," returned Elmendorf. "There are a few things that I wouldn't call exactly ordinary—Miss Maclane's conduct, for instance."

"She explained that perfectly to me," replied Kendall.

"Yes," said Elmendorf. "I happened to hear the explanation. And now let me tell you something. It is a moral certainty that Miss Maclane went to that house before she says she did; that she was there very close to the moment of the crime, not to put it any stronger."

"What do you mean?" demanded Kendall.

"You have heard of the mysterious woman in the case?"

"Yes. She was seen by Dr. Blair leaving the house. But there's always something of that sort in every affair of the kind. It will be explained."

"I wish Miss Maclane would explain it," said Elmendorf, "for she was the woman. Dr. Blair knows it beyond a shadow of doubt."

"If he knows it," returned Kendall, "why hasn't he said so?"

"Would you? Put yourself in his place. Would you throw that rope around a woman's neck before getting a little more light on the matter? As a man of the world and a doctor who's learned in his business the value of keeping his mouth shut, would you do it? No. And Dr. Blair feels just the same way. He wasn't born yesterday. When the time comes, he can give his evidence."

Kendall laid his hand upon his hair, perhaps to satisfy himself that it was not beginning to stand on end.

"Do you believe that he will testify against her?" he demanded. "Elmendorf, this is deadly serious."

"Well, I should think it was," said the detective, "and the longer she keeps quiet about it the more serious it gets."

It was Kendall's turn to walk the floor, and he did it.

"There are a thousand chances to one," continued Elmendorf, "that if the story she tells you is true she can't prove it. Suppose she was in a store. Who's going to remember her or the time of day? Take her motive, take her admissions to you if they were made in court, combine them with Blair's evidence, and what do you suppose the result would be?"

"You cannot have seen her with Miss Miller," said Kendall, "and still suspect her of this crime."

Elmendorf hesitated, as if he could hardly bring himself to destroy the last refuge.

"There's one way to look at that," he said at last. "Miss Maclane goes to that house wild with rage after her scene with Alden. She has the 'fixed idea' that's more in crime than even you doctors think it is. She gets in without seeing anybody because of the defective catch of the lock. She walks into that room. Miss Miller is on the balcony. Right on the table, where the devil must have put it, is that knife, open perhaps, for the envelope that held that note was cut. Miss Maclane takes that knife, and on the instant Miss Miller comes in through the window, the other girl shrinking back toward the closet. She is behind Miss Miller. She doesn't see her. You know how it would be with the girl entering from the balcony, the bright light behind her. My friend, it's all over in a second, and Brenda Maclane doesn't know what she's done until she comes to this hospital and sees in that bed a creature as different from the woman she supposed she had struck down as God could make."

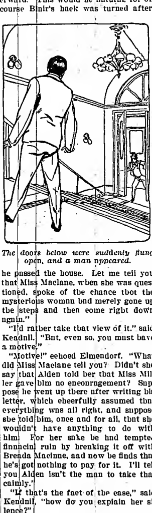
Kendall's forehead was dripping wet.

"But the money?" he gasped.

"Who knows anything about the money?" demanded Elmendorf. "It may have lain out of sight until Neale and his men got there, and one of them may have lifted it. This is not for publication, Dr. Kendall. It's between ourselves."

"It's a nightmare," said Kendall. "I don't believe a word of it."

"If you don't like the way I've put it, let me give you another view," replied the detective. "Miss Maclane goes to the house—heaven knows why, perhaps from curiosity. She goes up the steps and sees through the glass panel of the outer door Alden in the hall. With the door of Miss Miller's room open this would be possible. I've tried it. Seeing Alden, Miss Maclane hurries away. She doesn't know what Alden has just done, but she doesn't want to meet him. Dr. Blair sees her, but does not see Alden, who comes out afterward. This would be natural, for of course Blair's back was turned after he passed the house. Let me tell you that Miss Maclane, when she was questioned, spoke of the chance that the mysterious woman had merely gone up the steps and then come right down again."



The doors below were suddenly flung open, and a man appeared.

"I'd rather take that view of it," said Kendall. "But, even so, you must have a motive."

"Motive!" echoed Elmendorf. "What did Miss Maclane tell you? Didn't she say that Alden told her that Miss Miller gave him no encouragement? Suppose he went up there after writing his letter, which cheerfully assumed that everything was all right, and suppose she told him, once and for all, that she wouldn't have anything to do with him. For her sake he had tempted financial ruin by breaking it off with Brenda Maclane, and now he finds that he's got nothing to pay for it. I'll tell you Alden isn't the man to take that calmly."

"If that's the fact of the case," said Kendall, "how do you explain her silence?"

"My dear sir," replied Elmendorf, "you've got me. I can't. But who can explain a woman anyhow? You believe that Miss Miller is telling the truth, don't you?"

"Did you hear me say so?"

"To Miss Maclane? No. The first thing I heard you say to her was that it was a fine thing that she had done."

"I did say that I believed Miss Miller. That is my present attitude."

"In some respects," said Elmendorf, "it is the worst you could take—for Miss Maclane. By the way, you will permit her to remain with the patient?"

"Why not?" demanded Kendall sternly.

Elmendorf replied with haste that he saw no objection whatever. There was a brief silence, and then Kendall left the room, saying that he would return presently. As he passed the head of the steps leading up from the main entrance of the building, the doors below were suddenly flung open, and a man appeared. He seemed to Kendall to come up the steps without touching them. In an instant his hand was on Kendall's arm, and the doctor carried three bruises for a week as the result of it.

Though the two men had a club acquaintance, Alden did not show the slightest trace of recognition.

"Miss Miller?" he said, his voice perfectly steady, ghastly steady, as Kendall afterward described it. "Is she alive?"

"She is," replied the doctor, "and there is no immediate danger."

"I thank you," said Alden. "I was pretty nearly gone. I beg your pardon, how do you do, Dr. Kendall?" And he extended his hand.

"I understand perfectly," said the doctor. "Miss Miller is conscious, entirely rational and suffering far less pain than you would suppose."

"Who did this?" demanded Alden. "She has told you?"

"She does not know."

"She does not know!" echoed Alden, his head sinking upon his breast.

"I am sorry to say that it will not be wise for you to see her tonight," said Kendall. "We must not subject her to excitement. Please wait here." And he led the way to the reception room. "I will go to Miss Miller's room and bring you word."

Alden found himself in the presence of Elmendorf, whom he took to be one of the doctors connected with the establishment, which may indicate that there was more in the detective's disguise than he had been willing to admit to Kendall.

"I called to inquire about Miss Miller," said Alden after maintaining silence to what seemed the limit of his power.

"You are Mr. Alden, I take it," was the reply. "Well, you want to cheer up. Miss Miller is doing fine."

"Has she asked for me?"

"Yes," but it was not Elmendorf's voice that replied. "She has asked for you many times."

Alden turned to see Brenda at the door. He stared at her as if she had been a figure raised up by some sudden conjuration.

"Brenda!" he said at last. "I find you everywhere."

"Did not my father tell you I was here?" she asked, and he shook his head.

"I shall remain with Miss Miller until her mother comes," said Brenda. "Dr. Kendall has arranged it."

Alden seemed momentarily to be at a loss for words, but he did not struggle for them or labor visibly with emotion. His manner still remained as it had been throughout—restrained, mechanical.

"You are true blue, Brenda," he said steadily. "You always were."

"I am very glad to be here," she interrupted, speaking softly and leading him aside. "She is an altogether lovable girl, and I am going to be a sister to her," she added, smiling, "instead of to you, as is customary under the circumstances. I will see that she is not harassed by questions and that she lacks nothing that can possibly be had."

"I cannot see her tonight," said Alden. "Can I send a message?"

"I will take it to her," replied Brenda. "And, by the way, I saw some violets in her room. She likes them especially, does she not? I think Dr. Kendall would let me take in a few from you."

"In five minutes I will have them," said Alden. "You will wait here? It is very kind of you."

He left the room hastily, and Brenda explained his errand. Kendall's manner led her to think that she might have made an error in suggesting the violets, but it was a very different matter that was upon the doctor's mind. He was making an effort to express himself when Elmendorf interrupted him.

"Dr. Kendall is worried," he said, "because he has permitted me to play a trick upon you. To tell the truth, I don't like it any better than he does, and here is where it ends. I am not a doctor. I am a detective sergeant from headquarters. You saw me at the Thirty-eighth street house this afternoon. My name is Elmendorf."

Brenda exhibited surprise, but no resentment, merely saying that the detective's presence was doubtless necessary for reasons unknown to her.

"I am as anxious as any one can be," she said, "to have justice done in this deplorable affair. Do you think you can find out who committed this crime, Mr. Elmendorf? Do you suspect any one?"

"I haven't got any authority to find out anything or suspect anybody," replied Elmendorf, in a tone which indicated that this familiar situation was not agreeable in the present instance. "I go where I am sent and then I make a report. What becomes of the information afterward is a matter with which the sultan of Sulu has more to do than I have. But I'll tell you what I think," he added earnestly. "If this poor girl gets well, that will be the last you'll hear about the case. If she dies, it will all have to come out."

"But you don't think she will die?" cried Brenda, paling.

"I hope not," replied Elmendorf, "and of course my opinion in that matter is worth even less than it is in the other. But we mustn't take her recovery for granted at this stage of the game. Am I right, Dr. Kendall?"

"There can be no certainty yet," replied the doctor gravely.

"Her condition might change for the worse quite suddenly. Isn't that so?" continued Elmendorf. "And if it did she might become unconscious and remain so to the end. That's the fact, and we must face it. This may be murder, and the safe way is to get at the truth now while we can."

"I won't have her questioned any more tonight," said Kendall, with decision. "I've blocked off a coroner already who was here for an antemortem statement, and I am prepared for the next comer. Miss Miller shall not be harried into her grave, and if any attempt of the kind is made I will show a few points of law that will surprise some of our hit and miss officials in this town. A physician's authority beside his patient can be put into practical form if the individual understands the subject. And I do."

"Your advice goes with me," Elmendorf hastened to say; "but I don't think the particular question I had in mind could do any harm."

"You may state it," said Kendall.

"It was about a picture that I saw in her room," replied the detective, "a photograph of a painting, I should say. I'd like to know where it came from; how she happened to get it. Ugly looking thing it is, and I couldn't help wondering about it."

"You mean the picture of Tantalus," said Brenda. "I saw it. Why do you attach any importance to it?"

"If I should tell you, you'd laugh at me," replied Elmendorf, "so I won't do it just now. But if you should get a good chance to ask the question"—

"I have already done so, singularly enough," said Brenda. "She was awake when I returned to the room, and we spoke of some things that she wished to have brought here. She asked for that picture. I must have shown my surprise, for she immediately began to praise the picture, saying how much she admired the facial expression of the tortured king, and she mentioned having bought it at an art store on Twenty-third street a few weeks ago. As a student of facial expression, having her dreams of tragic triumphs some day, the thing might naturally have appealed to her."

"I didn't think about her being an actress," said Elmendorf. "That explains it no doubt. They like those extreme typical faces. I was foolish to imagine that the picture could have had anything to do with this case."

CHAPTER VIII.

MAKING TROUBLE.

WHILE Elmendorf was speaking Alden returned, bearing a bunch of violets wrapped in such paper as florists use.

"I was gone longer than I had expected," he said. "I did not know just where to find a florist hereabout. They are all covered up, you see. It is an evening that might wither a flower with one breath."

He passed the bouquet somewhat awkwardly across the big table to Brenda, who in the act of receiving it was so startled by the sudden appearance of the ward detective, Barnes, upon the threshold that she let the flowers fall.

With due allowance for its general lack of intelligence, it may be said that the countenance of Barnes was full of meaning. The man looked self assertive, confident and pleased.

"I beg your pardon," said he. "Who is in charge here?"

"I am for the moment," replied Kendall.

Barnes hesitated, looking sidewise at Alden. Then his glance shifted to the bouquet upon the table and rebounded in the direction of the doctor.

"I'd like to have a word with you," he said.

"Speak up," said Kendall. "What is it?"

"Those flowers are for the Miller girl, of course?" said Barnes. "Well, you'd better take a look at 'em before you send 'em in. Oh, they're all right, I guess, but you can't be too careful."

"What do you mean?" demanded Kendall.

Barnes pointed a finger at Alden.

"That man put something into them," he said. "I saw him do it. I don't know what it was, but there's drugs that, if you smell of them, why, it's your finish."

Kendall was too much surprised to speak. Alden took a hasty step toward Barnes and collided with Elmendorf, who courteously begged his pardon. Meanwhile Brenda picked up the bouquet from the table, and as they all turned toward her she opened the paper over the violets and pressed them against her lips.

"They are very fragrant," she said.

"That's all right," returned Barnes doggedly, "but he put something in there. What was it?"

"This bit of paper, I suppose," said Brenda, taking it in her fingers. "Your message, Clarence?"

"I think somebody ought to read it," said Barnes, looking at Elmendorf out of the corner of his eyes.

Alden thrust Elmendorf aside as if he had been a paper dummy and then checked himself. Barnes was already in the hall.

"I can have no quarrel with this creature," said Alden. "As to my message, I appeal to Dr. Kendall."

"This is more than absurd," rejoined the doctor. "Miss Maclane, whenever you are ready"—

As Brenda stepped forward the bit of paper slipped out from among the flowers and fell to the floor. Elmendorf picked it up.

"I hope you won't misunderstand me," he said. "Perhaps I see further ahead than you do. If I was in Mr. Alden's place, I'd let somebody read this."

He gave the message to Brenda, who glanced at Alden as she took it. He raised his hand in a gesture of negation.

"Now, look here, all of you," exclaimed Barnes. "Here's this girl in the"—and he pointed with his thumb in the supposed direction of Elsie's room—"who's hiding what she knows. I don't say it's in this man's interest, but it's in somebody's interest; that's sure. She wouldn't be the first woman that's had the nerve to get the knife and say nothing. I don't accuse anybody, especially not this man, for I ain't got a thing against him. He's all right so far as I know. But what I say is that the girl ought not to be getting messages on the quiet."

Alden's face was white as paper, and his eyes were afire. It is probable that every bone in Barnes' body ached with anticipation, but he had been kicked too often in the way of business to flee before the actual contact.

"I've stood all of this that my system can absorb," said Kendall, with a seriousness that scarcely fitted with the peculiar phrase which had come into his mouth. "After this dime novel

GOOD ADVIDE FROM NORTHROP.

President Northrop, of the state University, seems himself to have discovered the spring of perpetual youth, and when he lectures on such subjects as the "Strenuos Life" his remarks are especially well worthy of attention as coming from a man who is qualified by high intellectual attainments, and a practical personal application to lay down rules for the guidance of others.

"Do with your might, but don't worry; live the life strenuous, but avoid the life of worry."

That was the key note of a stirring address delivered by President Northrop before 2,000 students last Friday.

The address, which was on "The Strenuous Life" was given in response to a request from the students and is considered the best expression of sound advice, vitalized by lofty inspiration, that has been heard in many a day. Through the entire address ran a current of wit and humor so characteristic of President Northrop. He began with a denial that the American people to-day live too strenuous a life. The president proceeded:

American life to day is not so strenuous as fifty years ago. Many of us do not work as hard as we think we do. Student life to-day is not the strenuous life it was at Yale and Harvard a half century ago. This is true in other industries of life. Take the common laborer. Who ever saw a common laborer working strenuously? It's touching to see the philosophical regularity with which a street laborer deposits the spoonful of earth on the staging above him, then stops to meditate upon the shortness of life and the possibility of early death through over-exertion. The life of the farmer is easier than it used to be.

Life upon the grand fields of the west is not the strenuous life of the eastern farmer back a half century ago, before the general use of agricultural machinery. The same is true of the mechanic, the lawyer, the doctor. The old-time clergyman lived the strenuous life when he preached sermons an hour and fifty minutes in length, but public sentiment now upholds him in giving up his strenuous life. The life of the educator is a paradise compared with that of fifty years ago, but there is one class in American society that does live the life strenuous, and that is business men. There is no peace for him. Pleasant competition of a few years ago has given place to combination and aggregation of industry. Business men are the men who collapse, who die suddenly. What is it that does it? It isn't work. It is worry. What kills is not work but worry. The lesson is, not to be lazy, not to avoid a strenuous life, but to avoid a life of worry.

ALL EYES ON WATSON.

The Bemidji papers have been quarreling over the Republican senatorial candidate, W. F. Street. There are three papers in Bemidji and they cannot get together on the subject. One thing is certain, if Dr. Watson, of this city, declines a nomination, and W. F. Street succeeds in landing, he will make it mighty interesting for his opponent. Street is a tactician of no mean ability, and is a power to be reckoned with. However, the division in his home support weakens him as a candidate. With Waton a possibility, Street is in the background. C. G. Rapp, of St. Hilaire, also mentioned for Republican senatorial honors, is another strong man; with a good record as a legislator. But he will not enter the race so long as there is a possibility of securing the consent of Dr. Watson to become a candidate. Dr. Watson has a lucrative practice, and it would be at great personal sacrifice if he finally entered the lists. He is the man of the hour, however, and conceded the most available man in the district. At present strong pressure is being brought to bear from all parts of the district, to persuade him to become a candidate. As yet he has given little encouragement to those who are endeavoring to persuade him to run.

There is no doubt that the, plum is his for the picking. He is the strong man in the political arena. His candidacy means Republican success. All eyes are on Watson. Will he consent to make the sacrifice?

VAN SANT THE LEADER.

The Republican state central committee has decided on July 1 as the date for holding the state convention. Gov. Van Sant has announced himself a candidate for re-election, and the date for holding the convention was picked by him. The hold Gov. Van Sant had secured on the members of the committee was a surprise to the general public, and it had not been thought that the stand the governor has taken against the railroad merger would have left so little opposition within the ranks of the leaders in his own party. The committee meeting developed the fact that the VanSant sentiment sways the Republican organization almost as completely as does the Lind adherance dominate that of the opposition. There is now no longer any doubt in the public mind that Van Sant will be the Republican nominee. The leaders who have not looked with favor upon his anti-merger record have gracefully bowed to the well of the majority of the party.

The Red River Valley is coming up smiling as usual, thank you.

MOTHER'S CORNER

BY MOTHER KATHERINE

A Staff contributor, who will write of every day affairs—the little units that go to make up the sum total of existence. Mother Katherine writes exclusively for THE GAZETTE. She is a mother who presides over an ideal home. A letter addressed to her in care of The Gazette will reach her. She is worthy of confidence.

A STITCH IN TIME SAVES NINE:

What a lot of truth there is in those old expressions, and what a lot more of trouble it would save if mending were done systematically.

A man's garment should be mended while he is at home for a meal as soon as the tear occurs. "No time" is no plea, for it is just as necessary to keep the mending done as it is to do any other household duty.

Now, the weekly washing is always to be examined before being put away. If the housekeeper does the ironing she is pretty apt to remember just what article needs a stitch. Such pieces if kept in a specified place until mended, will never cause the annoyance that a torn garment can cause when wanted in a hurry. I find that if the article to be mended is in a place where one is sure to see it frequently during the day, it is surprising how one can FIND time to put in the required stitches, where if the article in question is out of sight it is very often "out of mind" too until needed.

One can sew buttons on while waiting dinner. Nearly everybody has neighbors who run in—sometimes they stay a long time. One can on such occasions excuse one's-self and bring in mending or if no mending is to be done, other handwork. It makes a long call, especially if the caller be uninteresting, less trying.

I once went to a neighbor's to help care for an infant in convulsions. In removing the clothing I found there was not one button, but such heaps of safety pins! The mother remarked that she never put buttons on anything as there was no time. Yet I know she had time to read novels.

You can keep order, my friend, be you rich or poor. Why, little children are glad to sew on buttons and darn stockings if patiently shown how.

I've often thought it is no wonder men seek the Klondike, the Philippines and other extremes when we see how slipshod their homes are managed.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

SQUEELY.

Freddie and Josie were out after the cows one evening when they found the dearest baby squirrel on the ground. Josie carried it home while Freddie took care of the cows. The family was fond of pets and the children knew that Squeely, as they named their little friend, would be welcome.

Sister Barbary made a nice, warm bed for the little stranger, and fed it milk out of a bottle. Such tender care as little Squeely received was never known in squirreldom. When night came he seemed restless so the boys took him to bed with them. One cold night Squeely fell out of bed and little Barbary found him stiff and cold in the morning. She cried and mourned, but at the same time tried warming him up and sure enough Squeely was soon as lively as ever. Soon he could frisk around, and when he grew to be a little larger he found a bed entirely to his own liking. Now where do you suppose that bed was? Why, in the pocket of an old overcoat. There you would see him every night and when morning came he said "good morning" to all the children in his own cute way, thus giving a lesson which some children need to learn. I hope my boys and girls never forget to bid their good parents a sweet "Good morning" and "Good night" at the break and close of day. If you form the habit while young it will always remain with you.

HOUSEHOLD.

If housekeepers will kill off the tiny moth millers seen about the house in the spring, it will insure an absence of moths. Also things to be packed away should be well sunned as the heat from the sun's rays will break the germ from which the moth comes. Printer's ink is the moth's pet aversion. Therefore if furs are securely wrapped in newspapers the moth miller will not pass beyond the paper. I have followed the above rules for ten years in taking care of beaver, and have never had a bit of trouble.

One who has suffered endless distress from indigestion and sick headache says she was entirely cured by taking liquorice powder immediately upon feeling the least distress. A half to a whole teaspoonful may be taken at a dose. Such a simple remedy, within the reach of all, may relieve many a sufferer. Try it. I have found it effective.

All nations unite in sympathy over the terrible calamity that has befallen inhabitants of the island of Martinique. King Edward sends a personal contribution to aid the survivors while the heads of all the great governments have taken timely and decisive action to alleviate the conditions of the sufferers which is appalling beyond power to describe.

The ditch law of 1901 will be tested as to its constitutionality in the supreme court to-morrow. The attorney general is confident that the law will be upheld.

Wm. J. Bryan opposes Lamont or any reorganizer for the Democratic nomination. Mr. Bryan says it is better to take a man absolutely unknown than a reorganizer.

This item from the Grand Forks Herald, regarding a former Red Lake Falls school teacher, will be of interest to many here: W. E. Davis, more familiarly known all over the flickertail state as "Prunes," made Grand Forks a brief visit yesterday to mingle with the politicians of the state and get a few ideas to elaborate upon in the Minneapolis Journal. Mr. Davis spent many years in Grand Forks, having been in the newspaper business here also, but having spent the greater portion of his time as a commercial traveler, and made a success of both. His many friends here regretted that his visit was so brief. He is as good-natured as ever, and slightly better looking, and that is saying a whole lot for "Prunes."

NEWS OF THE WEEK

TOWN DESTROYED BY VOLCANO.

At 7 o'clock a. m., on the 8th inst., a storm of steam, mud and fire enveloped the city of St. Pierre, Martinique, and community. Out of 25,000 residents not more than 20 persons escaped with their lives. Eighteen vessels were burned and sunk, with all on board, including four American vessels and a steamer from Quebec named Horaima. The United States consul and family are reported among the victims. The inhabitants of the southern districts of the island, who were dependent upon St. Pierre for provisions, are menaced by famine.

A report from San Juan, Porto Rico, says: The cable officials here have received advices from Dominica that a schooner which has arrived there from the island of Martinique reports that over 40,000 people are supposed to have perished during the volcanic disturbances there. The cable repair steamer Grappler, belonging to the West India and Panama Telegraph company of London, was lost with all hands during the eruption of Mount Pelee at St. Pierre, Martinique. The Grappler was one of the first ships to disappear.

A dispatch from St. Thomas, D. W. I., says: From 8 o'clock in the forenoon of May 8 until 1 o'clock in the afternoon St. Pierre was a mass of fire. During the intervening hours a torrent of red hot cinders poured down upon the commercial capital. The streets were filled with the destructive outpouring, cutting off all avenues of escape. Very few of the 25,000 inhabitants are believed to have escaped. The French cruiser Suchet was in port when the disaster took place. Her officers went ashore to give relief, but were unable to render much assistance, except to rescue about 30 persons. Great heaps of bodies were seen on the blazing wharves. It was impossible for the Suchet's officers to penetrate into the town.

Later reports of the West Indian earthquake show that the island of St. Vincent also suffered severely, at least 600 persons having perished.

Lots one (1), two (2), three (3), four (4) and five (5) in blk three (3) of Railroad addition to Red Lake Falls, according to the official plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the said county of Red Lake and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one hundred and ninety-five dollars with interest thereon at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, payable annually, on the 4th day of June in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note and interest coupon notes thereto attached, by failure to pay the annual interest falling due on the 4th day of June 1901 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said realestate for the years 1897, 1898, 1899 and 1900, and whereas the said assignee of the mortgagee, by virtue of the power contained the said mortgage, paid to the County Treasurer of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota the following taxes, duly levied and assessed by the said county against the land described in the said mortgage, and were due and delinquent at the dates when said payment were made, to wit: On July 31st, 1900, paid $9.49 taxes for the years of 1897, 1898, and 1899; on April 10th, 1902, paid $3.86 taxes for the year 1900, in all the sum of $13.35 and with interest amounting to $15.41.

FRIDAY FIRE

MRS. VICTORIA GOSSELIN SUFFERS A HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE.

The residence of Mrs. Victoria Gosselin was destroyed by fire last Friday morning. The evening previous a number of young people had been there to spend the evening, remaining until about twelve o'clock. The night was cold, and a good fire was kept up in the heater. The family retired shortly after the departure of the guests, and were all asleep when about one o'clock a passer-by saw that the building was ablaze about the chimney. An alarm was turned in, but the fire had gotten such a start that the department turned its attention to saving the contents, and keeping the flames from communicating to the adjoining buildings. The loss is considerable to Mrs. Gosselin. There was a loss of $500 on household furniture and clothing, with only $250 insurance, while the building was valued at $1200 and only $650 was carried on that. The loss has already been adjusted, and allowed in full by the Phoenix Assurance Co.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Why not use this liniment and get well? It is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

WYLIE

Carl Akerlund was a passenger for Crookston Monday.

Miss Ida Wylie came up from Crookston Sunday for a short visit with relatives here.

Several parties took advantage of the frost Saturday night and got their skates on Sunday.

Miss Sophia Erickson, of East Grand Forks arrived Monday for a visit with relatives at Bray.

Miss Isabella Reed, of Thief River Falls was visiting her friend Miss Lottie Wylie the first of the week.

Fred C. Leppert is excavating a cellar and will build a residence. Fred is trying to explain the matter satisfactrily but still the people are asking: "Why is it, Fritz?

The cheese factory has a supply of milk cans on hand but they will be going fast and parties wanting cans should call immediately, as there may be a shortage. "First come first served."

Friday and Saturday were busy days about the cheese factory. Nels Person built a foundation under the boiler; George Weiss was doing carpenter work and Mr. Kvindlang with a crew of men built the engine house. Things are commencing to loom up nicely.

The last few weeks of wet weather has set many a thinking and wishing that there were some better outlet for superfluous water than there is at present in this vicinity. We think it would be a wise plan to build a county ditch through here. Let us hear from some of you, land owners, about your ideas. If it is found advisable and necessary. (It certainly is necessary) some one should take the matter up and if it is found that the public favors it, the matter should be pushed as fast as possible. This much for a suggestion.

LUNGS THAT ARE LAZY.

Their Owners Digest Poorly and Catch Cold Easily.

Fresh air is a free gift, but it is like most of the gifts of heaven in that we must do our share of work to benefit by it. No one would expect to have a good fire just because a pair of bellows hung on a nail by the chimney, but this is exactly what many people expect of their lungs, which are really only the bellows given us by which to keep the fire of life burning bright and clear within us.

It is not too much to assert that lungs properly used in a comparatively close room will do more good than lazy lungs in an open field. This trick of lazy lungs is a habit, like any other, and may be overcome by persistent effort. Many persons, for example, are afflicted with a nervous habit of holding the breath unconsciously. These are the people who, in spite of plenty of time spent out of doors, yet catch cold easily, digest poorly and are always more or less "under the weather" physically.

Many other persons—and they constitute the great majority of mankind—breathe only with the upper part of the lungs and although they may breathe regularly do not draw in sufficient air at a breath to fill all the lung cells.

When once the pernicious habit of poor, shallow breathing has been broken up, the health undergoes such marked improvement, there is such brightening of the spirits and improvement of the looks, that the luxury of deep breathing is not likely to be readily foregone.

A good way to start the new habit is to take deliberately a few minutes at stated intervals and devote them to proper breathing. If this is done systematically, the reformer will find himself unconsciously breathing more and more, until very soon he is obeying nature and really breathing to live.

Besides the gain to the general health which comes from the habit of deep breathing there is created a reserve strength and preparedness which is often of great service in warding off acute pulmonary diseases.—Youth's Companion.

Florence Nightingale's Real Name.

The fact is but little known that the family name of Florence Nightingale was not originally Nightingale, but Shore. Her father was a rich Sheffield banker of the name of Shore and connected with an old family which had been in possession of land in the counties of Derby and York since the fifteenth century. Mr. Shore assumed the name of Nightingale long after the birth of his children and because he inherited the fortune and estates of his mother's uncle. There were but two children in the family, both girls. The eldest was named Parthenosse, because she was born in Athens, and this name was supposed to indicate her father's profound admiration for the Parthenon. The younger, Florence, was also named after the city of her birth.

The Nile is noted for the variety of its fish. An expedition sent by the British museum brought home 2,200 specimens.

In Java

Natives do not glaze coffee with a cheap and impure coating. They have too high a regard for health as well as for the naturally delicious flavor of their popular berry. The very American roasters who glaze their package coffees do not dare to touch or glaze their high priced Mochas and Javas. Why?

Lion Coffee is never glazed or adulterated. It is JUST PURE Coffee.

PETTY BURGLARIES

TWO CASES WITHIN A WEEK IS THE RECORD FOR RED LAKE FALLS.

GREAT NORTHERN DEPOT AND SHAGNON'S STORE REPORT VISITATIONS.

Agent Thomas reports that on Saturday night his till was tipped, and that the robbers secured the sum of thirty cents for their pains. Be this as it may, had there been thirty thousand dollars instead of thirty cents, the thieves would no doubt have been the more pleased and would not have hesitated on account of the degree of the crime. The doors of the depot were all locked as usual, and entrance was secured by forcing in the sash in the gentlemen's waiting room. This was evidently accomplished by placing a heavy timber or iron against the outside and it must have been the combined force of two or three husky fellows to have pressed in the sash as it was found. Cigarette stubs and used matches were found lying about the waiting room in goodly quantities. It is the belief that the work was that of boys or young men.

The store of Shagnon & Benoit was also entered by burglars Friday night and what little change was left in the money drawer was taken. Mr. Shagnon, manager of the store, says the loss does not exceed $4.00. Entrance was secured by breaking in the door of the warehouse, then forcing the door leading to the store proper.

UNLUCKY CASS LAKE.

Her Career Has Ever Been One of Dissappointments

Frank Sirois is over from Cass Lake in company with his wife, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Paul. He reports Cass Lake as very dull.

The settlers on section 16, at Cass Lake are greatly distressed over the supreme court decision that the land belongs to the government. There are fully 1,000 people on the section, nearly 30 residences, twenty-five business houses, three schools with 300 scholars and three teachers. The assessable property exceeds $100,000, and over $1,800 was spent this year in educating the children. To forcibly move these would prove a great hardship to many. But there seems to be little hope for them. A late Washington dispatch says:

Judge Frank Ives, now the publisher of a newspaper at Cass Lake, is coming to Washington to learn what can be done to straighten out the section 16 situation that has bothered this new town for a long time. Ives is a squatter, and the recent decision of the supreme court probably knocks him out, although he does not think so. At least, he thinks it is worth a trip to Washington. It is understood that nothing can be done for him here. The supreme court decision has been read carefully by experts, who hold that the squatters must all move. That is the opinion of the interior department, which is already moving in the matter.

Now follows the startling statement of the wonderful work at Cisco Tex. of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. "My wife contracted a severe lung trouble," writes editor J. J. It's positively guaranteed for coughs, colds and all throat and lung troubles. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. A. Schreiter's.

Cuba Now a Nation.

May 20th the government of Cuba was turned over to the Cubans; the Stars and Stripes were hauled down from Moro Castle, and the Cuban flag waved in triumph, alone—the gift of liberty by a great nation to a thankless, unappreciative people, whose ability to maintain peace and order we very much doubt. But we have done our duty—a self imposed duty, and our reward is in a deed well done.

NOW MAKING CHEESE

THE WYLIE CHEESE FACTORY IS NOW IN OPERATION.

Wylie, May 20, 1902.—The Wylie Cheese Factory commenced the manufacture of cheese Monday morning, May 19 under auspicious circumstances. The supply of milk on the first day exceeded expectations, there being nearly 700 pounds brought in, while the second day showed an increase of nearly 250 pounds. Although this is not a large showing it is satisfactory for a starter, and we have no doubt the supply will soon be equal to the capacity of the factory.

J. Thill was the first man to bring milk to the factory, and Chas. Zutz was the first farmer to come in and he also brought the largest supply—110 pounds.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Moses Viau Succumbs to Attack of Heart Failure.

The following account of the death of Moses Viau, son of Mrs. Pierre Emard of this city, is taken from the Malone, N. Y., "Farmer."

Moses Viau, one of Malone's young attorneys, and a justice of the peace, died suddenly from heart failure last week Tuesday evening. He had not been feeling well during the day and was unable to attend a meeting of the town board of health held at his office. His father died suddenly some years ago in almost exactly the same way, and his mother, who has since married, now resides in Red Lake Falls, Minn. Mr. Viau has filled two terms as town clerk before becoming a justice. He was a young man of amiable presence and of good mind and made an exceedingly fair and straightforward judicial officer. He was well educated, having attended Franklin Academy and graduated from an Ottawa school before entering upon the study of the law. His age was 35 years. Mr. Viau leaves surviving a widow and one little girl, two sisters and a brother. The latter is engaged in military service in the Philippines. One of the sisters, Olive, of Grand Forks, North Dakota, came East, but arrived here too late for the funeral. The other sister, Ella, of St. Louis, Missouri, was present at the funeral, which was held from Notre Dame church Sunday morning. The sympathy of a large circle of friends goes out to the afflicted family in their bereavement.

Expect Bill to Pass.

Thief River Falls Press: A letter was received yesterday from Mayor Kratka in which he says the lumbermen are entering strenuous objection to the passage of the Red Lake treaty bill, dozens of protests being received daily. They have, however, been informed by the Minnesota delegation that it is now too late to do anything and the bill must pass as it was recommended by the house committee on Indian affairs. In another letter Mr. Kratka signifies his intention of returning to Thief River about May 20th.

WE GET A DITCH

STATE DRAINAGE COMMISSION PROVIDES FOR ONE IN EMARDVILLE.

WILL BE FOUR AND A HALF MILES LONG, RUNNING EAST AND WEST.

Geo. A. Ralph, state drainage engineer, was in the city Tuesday and told of the ditch which the state drainage commission, at a meeting held several days ago, decided to give Red Lake county.

This canal commences east of the coulee at the Clearwater bridge in Emardville township, running due east four and a half miles, to the Garnes ditch, and will cost in the neighborhood of $5,000. The earth excavated will be used to grade up the county road alongside.

This is Red Lake county's first taste of state aid in drainage. The $25,000 appropriated by the 1900-1 legislature was not ample to go around and was soon used up on Roseau, Polk, Norman and Marshall county work. Mr. Ralph has all along strenuously insisted upon the pressing need of work in this county, but a lack of funds curtailed the commission's work from the start. The Red Lake county ditch will be constructed this season.

County Commissioners.

A special meeting of the county board convened at the auditor's office Monday.

$100 was appropriated out of the road and bridge fund to be expended on the county road in Garnes, provided the township appropriate a like amount.

Geo. A. Ralph was appointed engineer on four ditches, as follows: Rocksbury-North No. 1; Sanders-Norden No. 1; Sanders-Rocksbury No. 1; and Gervais No. 1.

L. C. Simons made application for absolute deed on all lots in Railroad addition delinquent on 1897 and subsequent taxes, bidding 60 per cent of the tax. The board accepted his offer, subject to approval of state auditor. Ferdinand Altnow made a like offer on four blocks in Kretzschmar's addition.

A petition signed by taxpayers and citizens, was presented to the board for a county bridge over the Red Lake river west of the city, on section 19, Red Lake Falls township, and to lay out a county road running as follows: Beginning at the northwest corner of section 24, Louisville township, thence east on section line to the north-east corner of section 24, thence south on range line to a point 302 feet north of section twenty-four in Louisville and 19 in Red Lake Falls townships, thence east through the centre of 19, 20 and 21 in Red Lake Falls township to the city limits.

Another road petition signed by John Dwyer and others for a road between the townships of Black river and Red Lake Falls, running east and west, was presented to the board.

These petitions were referred to a committee consisting of Commissioners Demana, Hebert and Johnson, who are to report at the next meeting of the board on July 14.

PAY YOUR TAXES

REMEMBER, A PENALTY OF 10 PER CENT. IS ADDED ON JUNE 1.

Those owning realestate and who have not paid the current taxes, will do well to read and ponder over the following:

All the real estate taxes become due on the first Monday in January of each year. If not paid on or before the 31st day of May following, a penalty of 10 per cent. is added; and if not paid on or before the first Monday of the following January, an additional penalty of 5 per cent. is added, and the land will be sold on the first Monday in May. But, if one half of the tax due on the first Monday in January in each year, shall be paid on or before the 31st day of May following; then no penalty will be added to the remaining one half, if the said remaining one-half shall be paid before the first day of November. If not so paid a penalty of 10 per cent. will be added, and if still unpaid on the first Monday in January, an additional penalty of 5 per cent. of the original tax remaining unpaid will be charged.

Interest on Tax Sales is one per cent. a month.

MOOSEDUNG CASE.

First Testimony Being Taken At Thief River Falls.

Today at Thief River Falls, some evidence is being taken in the Moosedung Meehan case, says the Crookston Journal. The question involved in the phase of the case now under consideration is whether or not the heirs of Moosedung are tribal Indians. The testimony is to be taken before the referee, Mr. C. H. West, of St Paul, and the attorneys who are looking after the case are Charles Loring of the city and R. E. Olds of St. Paul. Among the witnesses are a sister of Chief Moosedung and her son Charles Summer, and a son Joe Moosedung.

The witnesses came in from the agency on Wednesday and spent the day sight seeing in Crookston.

Lass to the State School Fund.

State Auditor Dunn expresses deep disappointment over the decision of the United States supreme court in the school land case. It loses to the state over 100 sections of land in the Red Lake reservation, much of which is covered with valuable pine, and in all is worth probably $2,000,000. The state is entitled to other selections from government land in place of those secured, but the trouble is that the valuable government land has been taken, and what there is left for the state to select from would not bring much to the school fund.

TWINS TO THE RAINY

MINNEAPOLIS, SUPERIOR, ST. PAUL & WINNIPEG RAILWAY INCORPORATED.

WELL KNOWN TWIN CITY MEN ARE THE MOVING FACTORS IN THE PROJECT.

Articles of incorporation of the Minneapolis, Superior, St. Paul & Winnipeg railway company were filed last Friday. The articles call for a line or lines to be constructed from a point at or near Minneapolis and St. Paul, running northerly through Anoka, Mora, Aitkin and Grand Rapids, to a point on the Rainy river in Beltrami county, this state, to connect with the Canadian Northern railway. A line from a point in Anoka county northeasterly to the city of Superior, in Douglas county, Wisconsin is provided for also.

The amount of the capital stock is $100,000 for incorporation purposes, as the articles provide for an increase of the capital stock to $10,000,000, as well as a bonded indebtedness of $10,000,000.

The incorporators are Samuel M Hanley, John J. Elliot, Harlan P. Benton, Ervin H. Fuller, of Minneapolis, and James L. Lovering, of St. Paul.

A Peaceful Invasion.

"The people of Northern Minnesota do not realize what the present year is doing for them," said an Iowa man the other day. "Immigration like a great army is rolling northward. The people only who live in the southern part of the state have a true idea of the horde of the homeseekers from Iowa, Illinois and the central states who are eager y taking up the cheaper and vacant land of Minnesota. Much of this immigration stops south of the homestead country, but it looks like a lively game of checkers. When the invaders buy a farm, the man who sells usually moves a little further north or west where he can buy four acres for the money he received from one. The increase in farm values south of here effects the land further north, and every sale hastens the end of vacant and government land in the north."

The Time to Invest.

Now is the time to invest in Red Lake county farm property. J.J. Hill says prices will continue to go up for some time to come.

RED LAKE FALLS WON

ADA DOWNED IN SATURDAY'S BALL GAME—SCORE 8 TO 16.

The Red Lake Falls and Ada High School nines which have been trying to get together on the diamond all spring, but without success heretofore, on account of the wet weather, met at Fertile Saturday last, and the result was a walk-a-way for the Red Lake Falls team, the score at the end of the 9th inning standing 8 to 16 in favor of our nine. The Fertile High School boys were hosts, and proved themselves in every way equal to the occasion. Both teams expressed satisfaction and gratitude for the many courtesies shown by the Fertileites. The Red Lake Falls nine is a strong one, and our boys feel able to do anything that comes along in the way of a High School team.

STRIKES SNAG.

RED LAKE RESERVATION BILL RUNS UP AGAINST THE LUMBERMEN.

Washington, May 20.—Minnesota lumbermen are here lobbying against the Red Lake and Chippewa reservation bills. As to the Red Lake bill they want some provisions made whereby the lumbermen will be protected from damage suits brought by settlers against the lumbermen for overflows on Clearwater river caused by logging operations.

During the day they conferred with the Minnesota senators and representatives concerning the bill.

FOUR LIVES ARE LOST

RESULT OF SEVERE ELECTRIC AND RAIN STORM IN VICINITY OF PRESTON.

Minneapolis Grand Jury Indicts Police Officials, Including Chief Ames—Ex-Convict Sentenced for Robbing the Stillwater Prison—Murder and Suicide at Minneapolis—News of the State in General.

Preston, Minn., May 19.—A severe electric storm burst over this town at 6 p. m., causing extensive damage to property and the loss of four lives.

There was violent wind and incessant lightning. Although many persons still insist that the storm bordered on a cyclone the characteristic funnel shaped cloud was not observed. H. M. Conkey went out to his stable to attend to his horses soon after the storm began and was killed by an electric bolt that descended just as he was entering the stable door.

Chimneys, fences and signs were blown down all about town.

Ten miles west of Preston there was a cloudburst. The Root river began rising so rapidly that Herman Willbright, a young farmer, hurried his wife and three children into a buggy, and started for high ground. But he was obliged to ford a gully that is ordinarily dry. Here an unexpected stream, five feet deep and roaring like a mill race, caught and overturned the buggy and swept the three little ones to sudden death. They were two girls, aged 7 and 5, and a boy of 10 months.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Traveling Man Kills a Young Woman and Himself.

Minneapolis, May 14.—Julius W. Voight, a traveling man, whose home was in Chaska, Minn., shot and killed Miss Ruth Welch of Verndale and then blew out his own brains at the Parker hotel, this city. Unrequited affection is believed to have been the cause of the double tragedy.

The young woman's death was not instantaneous. She expired in the patrol wagon that was conveying her to the hospital.

Her murderer, who turned the gun upon himself immediately after shooting the woman, fired a bullet into his mouth and dropped to the floor dead.

Voight was a travelling man in the employ of the Milwaukee Harvester works, and had formerly worked for the Minneapolis Cold Storage company.

AFTER THE POLICE.

Sensational Indictments by the Minneapolis Grand Jury.

Minneapolis, May 17.—The grand jury returned 12 indictments during the day and among them were indictments against Fred W. Ames, superintendent of police; Christopher Norbeck, plain clothes man; Irving Gardner, son of License Inspector Gardner, who is alleged to be the go-between in the collection of the "graft" money, and another indictment against James C. Howard, a plain clothes man, who was indicted several days ago.

The indictments have not yet been made public, so it is impossible to determine just what the nature of the charges are against the men. It is alleged, however, that they are charged with receiving money for allowing criminals to engage in unlawful pursuits in the city.

ROBBED A PENITENTIARY.

Minnesota Convict Gets Five Years for Unique Crime.

Stillwater, Minn., May 16.—Andrew Anderson, released from state's prison on Feb. 5, after serving a 5-year term for grand larceny, committed in Minneapolis, was convicted in the district court of burglarizing W. B. & W. J. Jordan's shoe warehouse in the penitentiary yards and sentenced to a term of five years. This will be his fourth or fifth penitentiary term.

Anderson robbed the prison in a sensational way about three weeks after he acquired his freedom, scaling the walls and then letting himself down in the yard and robbing the warehouse of three cases of shoes. These he managed to get over the walls by means of a rope and was engaged in selling them in the Twin Cities when apprehended.

SCHWAB WELL PLEASED.

Visits Steel Trust Properties in Northern Minnesota.

Duluth, Minn., May 16.—President Charles M. Schwab of the United States Steel trust and party returned to the city today after a trip over the range, visiting Two Harbors and the several mines in that section. President Schwab was very much pleased with the conditions of the mines in the Iron Range and said that the business of Duluth was increasing from year to year and the growth was a great aid to this section of the country. The party left for Michigan late this afternoon. President Schwab will return to New York Monday, where business calls him.

HIGH PRICE FOR CATTLE.

Record Broken at the South St. Paul Stock Yards.

South St. Paul, Minn., May 14.—A small bunch of fat steers raised by H. Knippel of Gibbon, Minn., were sold at the South St. Paul stock yards for the highest price ever paid for steers at this place. Eight head, weighing 1,511 pounds each, were sold for $6.80 per 100 pounds. A load of steers belonging to Palmer Bros. of Fairfax, which were not so high in quality as the others, brought $6.50. In the opinion of cattle experts none of these steers would have sold for more on the big Eastern markets.

James H. Morrison Dead.

Duluth, May 17.—James H. Morrison, a prominent logging contractor, formerly of Oshkosh and Minneapolis, died here of apoplexy. He was stricken while in court and conveyed to St. Mary's hospital, where he became unconscious and finally sank away. He owned several large wheat farms in North Dakota and Western Minnesota.

A BIG MILLING DEAL.

Properties of Flour Trust Sought by the Standard Company.

Minneapolis, May 13.—The deed conveying all the properties of the McIntyre flour trust, better known as the United States Milling company, to the new trust, the Standard Flouring Mill company, has been filed with the register of deeds in this county. The deed was made upon an order of the court, following foreclosure proceedings, in which the Standard company was the highest bidder. The sum paid was nearly $9,000,000. This includes the old Minneapolis Flour Milling company, which operated the Standard, St. Anthony, Union and Excelsior mills, but which is now under the direct control of the Northwestern Consolidated Milling company.

The recent transaction is the result of a mortgage made by the United States Milling company to the Central Trust company of New York as trustees for the bondholders. This mortgage matured and foreclosure proceedings were then instituted, and at the bidding the new trust secured the property.

Aside from the Minneapolis properties there are mills in the following other cities that come under the new trust:

Duluth, Superior, West Superior, Milwaukee, Syracuse, Buffalo, Baldwinsville, New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City. They have a combined daily capacity of 50,000 barrels. The Minneapolis mills will continue under the direct management of the consolidated for two years at least, as a three years' lease was entered into a year ago.

ENLARGE FORT SNELLING.

More Than a Million Dollars to Be Spent at That Post.

Washington, May 15.—Acting Secretary Sanger of the war department has signed the formal order providing for the improvement of Fort Snelling along the substantial lines desired by Representative Stevens.

The order is sweeping in its scope and provisions, and under it Fort Snelling will be enlarged to eventually be one of the largest posts for military of all kinds in the United States. The order as it stands provides for the construction of the necessary buildings to accommodate a full regiment of infantry, two full batteries of field artillery, and spaces are reserved for two battalions of cavalry. This improvement will provide accommodations for 1,700 men, with the plans outlined for accommodating 2,500 men. The grounds and water supply to be afforded when the improvements are completed will be sufficient for 10,000 men. The buildings at present planned will cost at least $600,000, exclusive of an officers' club, post exchange, chapel, drill hall and other necessary buildings, which will bring the total cost to more than $1,000,000.

NEW BLAST FURNACE.

Will Commence the Manufacture of Pig Iron by July 1.

Duluth, May 17.—The purchase of the West Duluth blast furnace by Zenith Furnace company, a newly incorporated concern, is looked upon as highly important to Duluth. Captain A. B. Wolvin and T. F. Cole, two of the highest local officials of the United States Steel corporation, are interested in the company, it is said, and it comes from a reliable source that the high Eastern officials of the steel trust are also interested. Many people have believed that the attitude of the steel trust indicates an intention to begin the manufacture of iron here, and this is looked upon as the move in that direction. The furnace will be running by July 1, and its capacity will be increased from 200 to 250 tons of pig iron per day. The furnace was operated a short time two years ago, but has been closed since.

FARMERS USE DYNAMITE.

Dam at Outlet of Otter Tail Lake Is Completely Destroyed.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 14.—The dam at the outlet of Otter Tail lake was blown up during the night. A party of 25 farmers congregated with axes, saws and dynamite at 1:30 a. m. and did a thorough piece of work.

The dam was put in by a company of Fergus Falls men several years ago to make the lake a storage reservoir and give additional power to the dams here during the low water stages in summer. The farmers have always objected, as they maintained it flooded their lands, and they have used dynamite on one or two previous occasions, but never succeeded in destroying it. Several of those engaged in the work were recognized and prosecutions are likely to follow.

NEW MINNESOTA RAILROAD.

Articles of Incorporation Filed by St. Paul and Minneapolis Men.

St. Paul, May 13.—Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state by the Minneapolis, Superior, St. Paul and Winnipeg Railroad company. The company will build a road from the Twin Cities northward, through Central and Eastern Minnesota, to the Canadian boundary in Beltrami county, and to Superior, Wis. The capital stock is placed at $100,000 for incorporation purposes, and the articles provide for an increase to $10,000,000, as well as bonded indebtedness for a like amount.

NORMAL SCHOOL IMPROVEMENTS

Plans for Alterations Received by Superintendent at Winona.

Winona, Minn., May 16.—Resident Director Morey has received the plans for the improvements to be made at the normal school the coming summer.

These provide for a new roof for the old portion of the building, the cutting down of the normal hall to provide a geography recitation room, and a vault to extend through two floors to provide for the safekeeping of the records of the school.

Liabilities $2,220,720; Assets $3,008.

St. Paul, May 14.—Mahlon D. Miller, formerly a real estate promoter and who was one of the founders of St. Paul Park, has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy with liabilities alleged by creditors to reach $2,220,720, and assets of $3,008, of which $738 is exempt. Miller claims his legal liabilities are only $677,249.

A Department of Commerce and Industries Needed

By Senator KNUTE NELSON of Minnesota

THE TIME HAS COME FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF ANOTHER DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT SERVICE, PRESIDED OVER BY ANOTHER CABINET OFFICER, TO HAVE ENTIRE CHARGE AND DIRECTION OF OUR INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT AND TO SECURE US BETTER AND MORE EXTENSIVE MARKETS ABROAD. With this end in view a measure is now before congress establishing a department of commerce and industries.

* * *

No provision has been made in any of the departments for the care and development of our mining and manufacturing interests, two of the greatest and most important industries of the country, ranking next to agriculture in the capital and labor employed. These industries stand in urgent need of ample markets abroad—markets which it is our duty to aid them in developing and securing. Our capital and labor in these industries are now in a condition to exploit the entire globe if proper aid and proper facilities are furnished by the government.

IN THE NEXT PLACE, SOME OF THE EXISTING DEPARTMENTS ARE BURDENED AND HANDICAPPED WITH MANY DUTIES NOT GERMAIN TO THEIR PROPER AND PRINCIPAL FUNCTIONS.

* * *

This is especially true of the treasury department. The chief, important and appropriate duties of this department embrace the collection and disbursement of the revenue, the coinage and currency, the public credit, the auditing of public accounts and all other matters relating to the fiscal operations of the government. But in addition to these duties the department has been placed in charge of the life saving service, the lighthouse service, the marine hospital service, the steamboat inspection service, the bureau of navigation and the United States shipping commissioner, the bureau of immigration and Chinese immigration, the coast and geodetic survey, the office of weights and measures, the office of supervising architect and the bureau of statistics. Naturally these branches of the public service are not appropriate for the treasury department, but they are peculiarly appropriate for and naturally belong to a department of commerce and industries.

* * *

The interior department is overburdened with a variety of functions. The amount of business pertaining to the pension office, the general land office, the Indian office and the bureau of education, with its general work and its work in Alaska, furnishes as large an administrative field as can well be efficiently managed and controlled by a single head. The department should be relieved of the management of the geodetic survey, the commissioner of railroads and the census and patent offices, not only for the purpose of lightening its burdens, but also on the ground that THESE BRANCHES OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE NATURALLY AND ESSENTIALLY PERTAIN TO THE FUNCTIONS AND DUTIES APPROPRIATE FOR A DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES.

SUCH A DEPARTMENT WILL BE THE OVERSEER AND THE GUARDIAN OF OUR GREAT INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS AND DEVELOPMENT AS A WORLD POWER.

nonsense of poisoned bouquets I don't care to have anything more from you. Get out!"

"You're making a mistake," said Barnes and then backed out of the room, grinning like a monkey, as Kendall advanced toward the door.

Brenda replaced the note among the flowers and gave her free hand to Alden, bidding him good night.

"I shall not be far away," he said as the woman preceded Kendall out of the room. "There's a lodging house next door. I shall get a place to sleep there. Sleep? Well, at least I shall be there. You will not fail to summon me if—if there should be any reason for it?"

"You may depend upon me," said Brenda from the threshold, where she had paused a moment while he spoke.

Kendall went with her to the mouth of the long corridor and then returned to the reception room.

"That man must be insane," he said to Elmendorf. "What did he mean by coming here with such absurdities?"

"He didn't believe in them any more than you do," replied the detective. "He had no idea that there was anything wrong with the violets or with the note. He was simply obeying orders."

"Orders?" echoed Kendall. "Who could have ordered him to do such a thing?"

"I guess Mr. Alden knows," responded Elmendorf. "And, between ourselves, I think Mr. Alden should have permitted the note to be read right here. I hope Miss Miller won't destroy it."

Kendall looked at Alden as if to inquire whether such a thing was likely, but gleaned no answer. Alden's face had resumed its rigidity, and the expression which it wore was intense, but difficult to read.

"However," continued Elmendorf, "if it hadn't been that it would have been something else. You're going to see a good deal of this sort of thing in the next few days, Mr. Alden."

"A good deal of what?" said Alden.

"It is technically known as 'making trouble' for a man," replied the detective. "I don't know why I should 'put you on,' but I'm doing it just the same."

"Do you mean to tell me," demanded Alden, "that Captain Neale expects to extort an important secret from me by childish tricks of annoyance such as this?"

"Certainly not," answered Elmendorf. "Joe Neale is no such donkey. Why, he's worth a quarter of a million dollars, and it's a wise man who can save as much as that in a few years out of a salary of twenty-five hundred. By simple arithmetic it would take a man just a century to do it if he lived meanwhile on what the neighbors sent in, as they used to say in Massachusetts, where I was brought up. Joe Neale knows that when a man is worried he talks; he must talk to somebody. And the cop would just as soon get your secret out of John Doe as out of you—a little rather, in fact, because then you wouldn't know that he had it. Now, I've said enough to cost me my job."

"That man put something into them."

"Nothing you say to me will ever cost you anything," said Alden. "I'm not a talking man. By the way, who are you?"

"Introduce me," said Elmendorf to Kendall, and the doctor complied.

"I am pleased to meet you," said Alden, offering his hand. "If you find out anything important in this case, I want you to tell me first. I'll make it worth your while."

"No, thank you," said Elmendorf hastily. "As a rule I'm as corrupt as the devil—but not this time."

Meanwhile Brenda had delivered the posies to Elsie—whom pain had wakened from a little sleep—with the gentlest possible words and ways. She had not at all the manner of a nurse, but rather that of an exceedingly tactful and well bred young doctor.

Elsie took the bouquet and very quietly cried over it for some minutes without discovering the note which it contained. She did not say anything; she did not ask a question about what Alden had said or done, whether he had gone away or was still waiting or whether he had seemed much distressed by her misfortune. Brenda had merely said that he had called, and that he had sent the violets because they were Elsie's favorite flower. This seemed to satisfy the girl completely.

Brenda had supposed that she would see the message at the first glance and indeed believed for some little time that she had done so, but did not wish to read it immediately. Finding this an error and fearing that the sudden discovery of it might startle her, Brenda told Elsie that there was a message and pointed out its place.

Then she turned away, as if unwilling to accept the chance of guessing from Elsie's face what the note might contain. When she judged that the proper interval had elapsed, she approached the bed once more.

Elsie's eyes were shut. The tears were drying on her cheeks, that were as delicate as rose leaves, and her right hand was against her breast, tightly closed. Thus she remained until she fell asleep.

CHAPTER IX.

A FEW WORDS WITH MR. ROBINSON.

DETECTIVE ELMENDORF was a man who considered himself to be the simple product of chance. He was born in Danbury, Conn., and at the age of nine years he was left an orphan and penniless. Immediately after this misfortune, as he did not like the people with whom he was expected to live, he walked out of town. There happened to be a high wind that day, and the boy walked with it, because the contrary course would have been disagreeable.

No one made any attempt to bring him back, and so he tramped for about a week, eating nothing one day and six good meals the next, according to the varying charity of the people along the road. Finally an eccentric old doctor in a certain small town found the boy ill on his doorstep one morning, and that was a great piece of luck for young Elmendorf. He had a good home in the doctor's house for eight years, without care or labor; enjoyed the advantages of the excellent schools of the village, and was nearly ready to enter college when his benefactor died.

The doctor left a good property, but no will. Relatives swooped down like a flock of birds. Elmendorf had not been adopted. He had no legal status, and one day he discovered that he had nothing at all except a trunkful of decent raiment and the sum of $3.60. The coincidence that this was the exact fare to New York decided Elmendorf's course. He arrived in the metropolis without a penny, hunted up a boarding house near the station, carried his trunk there on his shoulder and then went out to look for work.

He had many occupations in the next five years, but none to his liking. Finally he became a clerk in a small hotel which was a haunt of ward politicians. Yielding to the temptation thus thrown into his way, he developed into a lieutenant of the district leader, learning more tricks than he had the hardihood to play and prospering the less because of his scruples.

It became a delusion with him, however, that he was one of the most dishonest of created beings; that he would do anything for money, and that only his hard luck prevented him from selling his soul at a good figure. Once when his affairs were at a low ebb his patron suggested the police, and Elmendorf became a member of the force in the firm belief that a corrupt man like himself could make money therein. But he had a perverse way of being dissatisfied with temptation, and he gained a reputation for honesty which his best friends deplored. It was pure chance, a matter not worthy of mention, which secured his transfer to the staff of the detective bureau. He had no appetite for the work, yet he must have possessed a certain fitness for it. Perhaps the advantage of early mental training, added to an unfailing memory and a perception of little things that was due to the German blood in him, helped to make a real detective of him.

Yet there is no money in detecting alone and but small advancement, as Elmendorf well knew. What one needs is the skill to construct a good, strong "pull," coupled with the capacity to turn the incidents of the profession to one's personal advantage. In these important particulars Elmendorf was a dire failure. He secured no pull, and he was forced to live almost entirely upon his salary. Indeed his continuance on the staff was due largely to the favor in which he was held by certain men connected with the press. The feeling that if Elmendorf should be sent back to patrol duty somebody would get "roasted" for it long and hard in at least two of the big papers was the deciding factor in his case on several occasions.

He was useful, however, in affairs like that with which the present record has to do, where early rumor connected persons of prominence and wealth with criminal cases and it was desirable to have a prompt and honest report as a basis for subsequent action.

In the matter of the murderous attack upon Elsie Miller, Elmendorf received orders, on the morning of the day following that upon which the crime was committed, to "look up" John Robinson. It appeared that Robinson had left the house on Thirty-eighth street immediately after Alden's departure, which he had viewed with every indication of intense and painful excitement.

No obstacle was put in the way of his departure when he desired to go; but an unobtrusive young man of Captain Neale's retinue walked upon the other side of the street. Robinson did not see this young man—which is sometimes a great misfortune for the person thus attended—but it happened, in this instance, that after a considerable amount of pedestrian exercise of a seemingly aimless sort the young man did not see Robinson, and this was undoubtedly a serious misfortune for the "shadow." He was roundly sworn at by his superior, when, after a fruitless search, he was obliged to announce his failure to that individual. He did not do this, of course, until he had waited a long time in front of the house where Robinson lived. Had Robinson returned there the "shadow" would have given, in his subsequent report, a full statement covering every detail of Robinson's movements and every minute of the time, and would cheerfully have sworn to it in court had later events made such a proceeding necessary. But, failing to "pick up" Robinson, there was no escape from confession.

The landlady of the boarding house where Robinson lived said that he was somewhat irregular in his habits and that he did not always come home to dinner; but when at 2 o'clock in the morning it was reported that he had not appeared Captain Neale began to be uneasy. As he expressed it, "If Robinson has skipped, there'll be nothing doing."

Translated this meant that if a humble clerk of unknown antecedents had stained his soul with crime for $500 there remained only the profitless task of catching him and sending him to jail.

Elmendorf had no idea that Robinson had "skipped," principally because there was no apparent reason for it. The clerk had delivered the note to Elsie and had then left the house, as the testimony of the servant, a reliable woman long in Mrs. Simmons' employ, satisfactorily proved. That Robinson had immediately returned and committed the atrocious crime for a reward so small was, in Elmendorf's opinion, a wild hallucination, though he had heard such a hypothesis stated. But that Robinson's extreme agitation when brought to the scene was due to a more intimate knowledge of the affair than he had disclosed was a much more reasonable proposition.

As to the money in the note, Elmendorf was far from regarding it as the motive for the crime. He believed that the money had been there, for that was one of the few points upon which Elsie had made a positive declaration in her first response to questions, as Elmendorf had been informed by Kendall in their earliest interview at the hospital. She had said that she had removed the money and had laid it, with the note, upon the table. It had been stolen, but probably as a "blind," unless, indeed, some person connected with the police had comforted an itching palm with it.

Upon receiving his orders in regard to Robinson the detective went down town to the building in which Alden's offices were situated. He took up an inconspicuous position near by and after half an hour of waiting had the pleasure of wishing Mr. Robinson good morning upon the sidewalk at a point about one hundred feet from the building. This was unfortunate for Captain Neale's man, Barnes, who was waiting in the doorway.

Elmendorf made no secret of his identity or of his errand, and Robinson seemed quite undisturbed.

"I was pretty badly upset yesterday afternoon," he said. "It was all so sudden and shocking. Of course I had no special interest in Miss Miller. Probably I haven't seen her more than three or four times in my life. But to think that this should have happened so soon after I had left her! I tell you it gave me a turn. I didn't feel much like being alone, so I went to see a fellow whom I know and spent the night in his rooms. How is Miss Miller this morning?"

Elmendorf replied that his advices were altogether favorable, and little more was said until they had entered Alden's private office, in which Robinson had a desk.

"I thought you knew Miss Miller quite well," said Elmendorf, taking a chair. "You spoke of her by her first name yesterday."

"Did I?" said Robinson, opening his eyes wide. "Well, I might have said almost anything yesterday. I was nervous, and that's a fact."

"How did it happen that you took the note?"

"Why, Mr. Alden was going to ring for a messenger boy," was the reply, "and then he mentioned that there was money in the note and asked me about one of our own boys, who happened to be out at the time. So I said I'd take the note. I wanted to go up to my room, and it's only a little way from where Miss Miller lived. I hadn't anything particular to do at the time."

"What did you want to go to your room for?"

"To get a letter I had left there," replied Robinson. "Nothing of any great importance."

"Came for you in the morning, I suppose, and you forgot to bring it down," said Elmendorf, with the air of one who hastens to dismiss a subject.

"Yes; that was it."

"Did you get it?"

"Why, certainly."

"Where is it now?" demanded the detective.

Robinson's forehead began to perspire.

"I destroyed it," he said.

"Who wrote it?"

"Why, what has that to do with"—

"Who wrote it?" said Elmendorf, tapping on the floor with his cane.

"Fellow over in Philadelphia," replied Robinson. "But I don't see"—

"Give me his name and address," said the detective, taking out a notebook and a pencil.

"This is private business," rejoined Robinson, mopping his face. "It has nothing to do with this affair."

"My dear sir," said Elmendorf, "in a case of this kind, when a man begins to lie, it's always important. I happen to know that you haven't had a letter come to that house since you've been living there, so you didn't go up town to get one. In my opinion, you went up because you wanted to see Miss Miller. Isn't that a fact?"

"You put me in a mighty bad place," replied Robinson. "Suppose I say that I did, how would that strike Mr. Alden?"

"It won't strike him at all," said Elmendorf, "because I shan't tell him. I don't mean to intimate that you had anything particular to say to Miss Miller. But you'd seen her, you knew she was a very pretty and agreeable girl, and, like any other man, you didn't object to seeing her again even if it was only for four seconds. That's all there is in it. So why not tell the truth?"

"Did I?" said Robinson, opening his eyes wide.

"I don't deny that I had some such idea."

"It was your motive for offering to take the note, and you had no other. Isn't that a fact?"

"Well, yes," replied Robinson, "between ourselves, that's the truth."

"You had no errand at your room?"

"Of course not."

"Then why did you go there?" demanded Elmendorf. "Why did you go straight over there from Miss Miller's house?"

"I thought I'd change my clothes," said Robinson desperately.

"Did you change them? Haven't you got on the same suit now that you wore down town yesterday?"

"Yes," said Robinson. "I—I changed my mind."

"Instead of your clothes," rejoined Elmendorf, with a smile. "By the way, where were you born?"

Robinson's expression revealed some slight relief.

"In Honolulu," he said. "I lived there until I was 21. Then my parents moved to Amoy, China. I came to this country about two years ago."

"Where did you land?"

"San Francisco."

"Date of arrival and name of steamer?" said Elmendorf, taking up his notebook again.

Robinson was undisturbed this time.

"I've forgotten the exact date," he said, "and the steamer was a tramp. I can't recall her name."

Asked what he had done in San Francisco, Robinson replied that he had drifted across the continent immediately, arriving in New York in April, a year ago. Very soon afterward he had had the good fortune to make the acquaintance of Mr. Alden, who had taken a liking to him and given him his present position. He had few friends in this country. There was no one who knew him better than Alden did.

"You looked to me like a college bred man," said Elmendorf, whereupon Robinson replied that there were excellent schools in Honolulu.

Elmendorf traced out a pattern in the rug with the end of his cane. "The man has a record," he was saying to himself. "This story is a work of art. No cable to Honolulu, and Amoy is a long way from Mulberry street. It will take about six months to prove that this man never lived in the Sandwich Islands unless we can strike his trail around here."

"Did you carry that cane yesterday?" asked Elmendorf suddenly, and Robinson promptly went into a blue chill which he strove to conceal.

"Yes—of course—no," he stammered. "I think that was what I went to my room for."

"I think it wasn't," said Elmendorf, and at that moment, to the surprise of both, Alden entered the room.

CHAPTER X.

"CLARENCE."

ALDEN looked years younger than yesterday. His expression had lost much of its painful concentration and intensity, though a shrewd man might say he was still under the domination of a single thought.

"Such splendid news at the hospital," said he, "that I ventured down here for a few minutes. I can see her this afternoon. Jack," he added, addressing Robinson, "you'll have to look out for my mail for the next few days. I shall be at St. Winifred's all the time, or at the house next door on the west. Any news this morning, Mr. Elmendorf?"

"No," replied the detective. "I came down to have a little talk with Mr.

J. J. HILL ON FARM VALUES.

The voice of J. J. Hill has been raised to reassure those who look upon the present demand for Northwestern farm lands as a boom and in danger of a collapse, as all booms are. When Mr. Hills speaks, the world listens. His giant intellect commands attention. He says the great demand for farm lands and the phenomenal rise in prices, is a natural, healthy movement, and then characteristically, he advances his argument and backs this with figures. He not only thinks the values will not recede, but in his judgement the prices will go still higher. He points out that the population of the United States is increasing 4,000 daily and 1,500,000 yearly. At this rate the United States will have 150,000,000 people within fifty years.

These people must be fed and clothed. Agriculture, which is the foundation of civilization, must provide for their wants. If millions more go to the cities millions must also go to farms. What must be done will be done. Good land everywhere will be valuable.

MAY 17.

In this section, where those particular descendants of the Norsemen known as Norwegians have played and are playing so important a part, the significance of the observance of May 17 can not escape the thoughtful citizen. The very depth of feeling manifested by the sons and daughters of Norway on these anniversaries is a worthy testimonial to the character of Norwegians as a people—for where there is concentration and devotion to a national ideal in the hearts of a people, there must be, too, fertile soil for the growth of individual virtues. Show us a people devoid of partriotism, of civic pride, and we show you a people decadent, with the heart-fire burned out. That reverence for national institutions, that fealty to country, that spirit of obedience to law, that intellectual culture which distinguish the Norwegian race,—the very elements which have made the Norwegian a good citizen as a Norwegian, have served to place him equally high in the scale of American citizenship. Thus all true Americans second the honor that is accorded by these loyal subjects to their old flag—which significantly floats here on the flag-staff below the waving Stars and Stripes.

The history of the event that made May 17 the national holiday, may be briefly told:

On May 17, 1814, a treaty was made with Denmark whereby a constitution was granted to Norway, which practically made the latter nation independent. Norway broke away from the rule of Denmark and joined with Sweden. In order to satisfy the claims of the King of Sweden it was agreed that the King of Sweden should always rule Norway, under the rule of a limited monarchy. The nation is practically independent, the rule of the king of Sweden is limited to about the same degree as that of King Edward of England The treaty of 1814 has stood to this day and the nations of Sweden and Norway are united under peaceful relations and both nations celebrate the independence of Norway and its union with Sweden. This is the 88th anniversary of the birth of Norwegian freedom.

THE ROCHAMBEAU STATUE.

The unveiling of the statue of Jean Baptiste de Vimeur, better known as Comte de Rochambeau, will occur at Washington on Saturday, the 24th inst. The incident is one which will once more bring to mind the unparalleled sacrifices made by France to aid us in our struggle for liberty—a far off alien people sending across the seas 6,000 of her troops to fight with the struggling soldiers under Washington against the powerful British nation. Rochambeau came as the accredited and official representative of France. He had been preceded by Lafayette, who came entirely as a private citizen, offering his aid on the altar of liberty. It did not matter to Lafayette that that altar was located three thousand miles from his native land. Either one of these heroic figures alone would have placed America under an eternal debt to France; and it must have been more than accident that sent the two; the French heart has ever been in sympathy with liberty's struggles.

The statue of Comte de Rochambeau, which is the gift of France, will be unveiled on Lafayette Square, opposite the White house and on the corner opposite to that on which stands the statue of Lafayette, also presented to this country by the European republic. It is a replica of one erected in France in 1900. The original and the replica are both the work of Ferdinand Hamar, a Frenchman of exceptional talent and a pupil of the noted sculptor, Barrais. The present countess Rochambeau will unveil the statue and one cannot meditate upon the true import of the coming of Lafayette and Rochambeau, without a feeling of fresh confidence in humanity, and the statues as one gazes upon them in Lafayette square, will ever evoke these sentiments.

Tammany's treasury is empty, says a news item. Then it's no wonder Nixon resigned and refused a vote of confidence What else would any Tammanyite be expected to do under the circumstances?

MOTHER'S CORNER

BY MOTHER KATHERINE

A Staff contributor, who will write of every day affairs—the little units that go to make up the sum total of existence. Mother Katherine writes exclusively for THE GAZETTE. She is a mother who presides over an ideal home. A letter addressed to her in care of The Gazette will reach her. She is worthy of confidence.

PURITY OF SPEECH.

In writing under the above heading I do not refer to speech grammatically. It is the morally pure conversation that I want to make a plea for, and let me tell you too much cannot be said to condemn a story, a jest, yea a word that will bring an impure thought to the minds of those in hearing. If every person of influence, every editor, every teacher would take up the fight, and brand any thing that smacks of indecency, BOTH IN PUBLIC AND IN PRIVATE LIFE surely there would be a stride ahead.

I do not take places or people of low or notorious repute into consideration at all today, for those who wish to live purely can easily shun such places. It is the judgment halls, the private railroad coach, filled with our statesmen and law-makers, and lastly, I blush to chronicle, OUR PARLORS, that I wish could be cleansed even as a heavy spring shower brightens and freshens the budding verdure all about us.

Here is a little example of how one unsavory story was squelched: Two (?) ladies were visiting, when one laughingly remarked: "Oh, I heard such a FUNNY story today." Not seeing a responsive expression on her friend's face she added: "Oh, by the way, do you approve of FUNNY stories?" The listener realized that the story was not one she cared to hear from the manner of her friend as she replied: "No, I do not relish stories that, one must needs blush to tell." Depend upon it, thereafter there were no stories of doubtful shading referred to when those women met.

At another time a story was related that was considered to be very GOOD by all but one woman in a party of four. At its conclusion her face was a study. The relator, with a suspicion of pique, said: "Look at Mrs. Blank blush. She wouldn't smile for a dollar." Mrs. Blank thereupon calmly replied: I was just thinking about what President Roosevelt does when he hears such a story. A press despatch recently sent out by H. I. Cleveland, the well-known correspondent, related how, when a lot of men are together like the party with which Gov. Roosevelt traversed the country some time before he became president, very often the one who can tell the coarsest story is the greatest hero; but when Roosevelt heard an unclean story, he frowned and said, 'That reminds me'—and immediately changed the subject." You may depend upon it, Mrs. Blank's moral courage had its effect on her hearers, and she is since seldom vexed in a like way.

Why not emulate the example of our President, and set our seal of disapproval upon shady stories, and conversations that must needs be carried on in whispers? There are enough good, pure stories to more than go around.

Wives, do not listen for one moment to unclean speech from any one, nor the telling of an unclean jest by anyone in your presence. Take a stand, my friends. You do not know the demoralization that may spread from one unclean jest. The moment it leaves your tongue its poison is launched on the sea of life, to cast anchor, only in the harbor of eternity.

HOUSEHOLD.

A STRIKING WOMAN.

A match scratcher with the above appropriate name is made as follows: Cut the picture of a nicely dressed woman from any colored fashion plate. Cut sand paper so that it will exactly cover the skirt of the woman in question and paste over the skirt. Mount figure on a foundation or background, the color of which harmonizes with colors in her dress. Ingrain wall paper will answer the purpose if stiffened with a paste board foundation. The words "A Striking Woman" may be written below the figure.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

My dear children,—

What kind of stories do you like best?

I have so many that it would be too bad to tell the ones you do not like.

I should like very much to hear from you, as to the kind of stories you prefer.

There are stories about pets—all sorts of animals, you know. Then there are stories about people—great people, good people, old people, and such lots of stories about little children and babies. Also stories about all sorts of places.

When you write use only one side of the paper, write short, neat letters, and give name, age and address. The best three letters will be rewarded with prizes—1st prize, $1.00; 2nd prize, 75c; 3rd prize, 50c.

Only those under ten years may win prizes.

Address Mother Katherine,

Fourth of July comes but once a year. Last year Red Lake Falls modestly stood aside and gave the other cities in this section free right of way. The dwelling house of Adolph Zeiser on the North Side was destroyed by fire last Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Zeiser was baking bread, and the fire caught in the attic, probably from a leak in the chimney. The sharks were very properly treated in this instance and the people of Kittson county are so well pleased with the stamine displayed by their register of deeds that he will have to keep the office two years longer.

Black-leg is a disease greatly dreaded by stockmen. It has recently made its appearance in herds of several Red Lake Falls township farmers. Adolph Dufeult lost several head of young stock, and after trying everything else finally resorted to vaccination with vaccine virus furnished by the government. Miss Morehous' participation was in answer to the request of friends here, and her work was purely gratis. Her artistic and soulful songs were particularly enjoyed

The weather the past week has been about as bad as it could be. And yet reports indicate that the wheat seeding was pretty generally finished in the central, eastern and southern portions of the county before the late rains. C. W. Andrews, the veteran representative of Wright, Barrett & Stilwell of St. Paul, who was in the city yesterday, says he was at St. Thomas, N. D., the day before. Not 15 per cent. of the seeding is done thereabouts, and we have a paradise compared to them. What they will do is a conundrum. Barley they must import at a cost of 60c a bushel; while flax is scarce and hardly to be had at any price. It is thought considerable wheat will yet be seeded and that seeding will be kept up to the first of June.

ECHOES OF THE EARTHQUAKE.

Captain McLean of the United States cruiser Cincinnati reports 6,000 refugees at Fort de France and 3,000 at Kingston.

The United States government has forwarded to Martinique and St. Vincent large quantities of rations, medical supplies and clothing.

United States Consul Ayme, at Fort de France, has cabled the state department that the supplies now afloat will be sufficient for Martinique refugees.

M. Jules Cambon, the French ambassador, has transmitted to Secretary Hay a telegram from his government expressing the gratitude of France for the energetic efforts of this country to relieve the suffering at Martinique.

It is stated at the war department that the supplies and stores shipped to Martinique and St. Vincent on the cruiser Dixie from New York and on the collier Sterling from San Juan undoubtedly will be sufficient to meet the urgent needs of the suffering people for only a month to come.

The Soufriere volcano on the island of St. Vincent is still in destructive eruption. A terrible cannonade can be heard 100 miles away. The reports are followed by columns of smoke, rising miles in the air. Lightning is playing fiercely in the upper sky and the whole northern part of the island is one mass of traveling flames.

A correspondent of the Associated Press has visited St. Pierre and found the destruction there appalling. The streets are two feet deep in ashes and cinders, which cover thousands of dead bodies, scorched black and shiny as if they had been plunged into boiling pitch. Many of the dead were never touched by the volcanic fire and some of the houses show no signs of burning.

La Soufriere, on St. Vincent, was in full eruption May 10. It is estimated that the total number of deaths on St. Vincent reaches 2,000. Most of the seven estates on the island have been burned to ashes and it is authentically reported that two earthquakes have occurred there. It is believed the submarine cables at St. Vincent have been broken by the disturbance. The present volcanic eruption on St. Vincent is the first since 1812.

As the result of the measures taken by the authorities access to St. Pierre is now easier. The ruins of the town have ceased smoking. Two thousand corpses have been found in a carbonized condition. Talk with survivors of the disaster confirms previous statements as to the awful suddenness of the catastrophe. It is thought that an enormous quantity of gas was liberated, producing great atmospheric pressure which overwhelmed everything before it.

A dispatch has been received from the Island of St. Lucia saying that the United States government tug Potomac had returned there from the Island of St. Vincent bringing a report that La Soufriere was quiet. The dust fall on St. Vincent is at present very slight, but terrible anxiety prevails, and it is feared that the present lull in the eruptions is only temporary. The Potomac reports also that 2,000 persons have perished on St. Vincent up to the present time and that 5,000 of the island's inhabitants are destitute.

Investigations at St. Pierre show that the most destruction was directly across that part of town known as the Fort, where even the foundations of the buildings cannot be traced. A contrast to this is the district known as Mouillage, which is recognizable from the walls that still stand. In the Fort district the dead were utterly consumed, but in Mouillage there are bodies everywhere, denuded of clothing and charred so that it is impossible to distinguish color or sex. All bodies are cast on the funeral pyres, heaps of which are saturated with kerosene as fast as they can be gathered.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed, and delivered by Levi Brouyette, and Mary Brouyette, his wife, mortgagors, to May Buse mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 4th day of June, 1900, was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota on the 31st day of July, 1900, at 3:10 o'clock p. m., in Book 20 of mortgages on page 226 and is now recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, in Book 20 of mortgages, on page 226.

Which said mortgage, together with the debts secured thereby, including taxes paid by the mortgagee, was duly assigned by May Buse, to M. O. Sortedahl by written assignment dated July 31st, 1900, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, on December 6th, 1901, at 4:15 o'clock p. m., in Book "T" of Mortgages, on page 91, and which said mortgage, together with the debts secured thereby, including taxes paid by the mortgagee and the assignee under the mortgagee, was again assigned by the said M. O. Sortedahl, to Ernest Buse, by a written assignment dated March 3rd, 1902, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota on April 10th, 1902, 3:30 o'clock p. m., in Book "S" of Mortgages, on page 2?2 to-wit:

Lots one (1), two (2), three (3), four (4) and five (5) in blk three (3) of Railroad addition to Red Lake Falls, according to the official plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the said county of Red Lake and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one hundred and ninety-five dollars with interest thereon at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, payable annually, on the 4th day of June in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note and interest coupon notes thereto attached, by failure to pay the annual interest falling due on the 4th day of June 1901 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said real estate for the years 1897, 1898, 1899 and 1900, and whereas the said assignee of the mortgagee, by virtue of the power contained the said mortgage, paid to the County Treasurer of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, the following taxes, duly levied and assessed by the said county against the land described in the said mortgage, and were due and delinquent at the dates which said payment were made, to wit: On July 31st, 1900, paid $9.40 taxes for the years of 1897, 1898 and 1899; on April 10th, 1902, paid $3.95 taxes for the year 1900, in all the sum of $13.35 and with interest amounting to $15.41.

And whereas, said mortgage provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said real estate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable; and whereas said mortgage also provides that if such taxes are not so paid the holder of said mortgage may elect to pay the same and be entitled to interest on the same at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum and said mortgage stands as security for the amount so paid, with interest.

And whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon and to the date thereof and for said amount paid for taxes and interest thereon the sum of two hundred and forty 33-100 dollars.

And whereas, because of said defaults and of each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the front door of the Court House in Red Lake Falls, in said County, on Saturday the 31st day of May 1902 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the Attorney's fees of $35.00, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

Miss Eleanor E. Lloyd, of Minneapolis, assisted by Scott C. Hall, of Red Lake Falls, gave a literary and musical entertainment at the Wylie school house Saturday evening. Miss Lloyd is certainly a very accomplished elocutionist and impersonator and the entertainment was very much enjoyed by those present. We regret, however, to say that the audience was small, which was perhaps due to the fact that the entertainment was not advertised in time to make it generally known, and also to bad roads.

Like a Drowning Man.

"Five years ago a disease the doctors called dyspepsia took such hold of me that I could hardly go," writes Geo. S. March, well-known attorney of Nocone, Tex. "I took quantities of pepsin and other medicines but nothing helped me. As a drowning man grabs at a straw I grabbed at Kodol. I felt an improvement at once and after a few bottles am sound and well." Kodol is the only preparation which exactly reproduces the natural digestive juices and consequently is the only one which digests any good food and cures any form of stomach trouble. W. A. Dangerous if Neglected.

Burns, cuts and other wounds often fail to heal properly if neglected and become troublesome sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve prevents such consequences. Even where delay has aggravated the injury DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve effects a cure. "I had a running sore on my leg thirty years," says H. C. Hartly, Yaukeetown, Ind. "After using many remedies, I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes healed the sore." Cures all skin diseases. Piles yield to it at once. Beware of counterfeits. W. A. Schreiter, A. L. Reichert.

Sciatic Rheumatism Cured After Fourteen Years of Suffering.

"I have been afflicted with sciatic rheumatism for fourteen years," says Josh Edgar, of Germantown, Cal. "I was able to be around but constantly suffered. They're unrivaled to regulate Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter. Only 50 cents.

I read in the paper that there was a man who lost his rubber boots. M. M. should not be sorry for it. There is a hole in one of them, and needs patching. They claim we have a shoemaker here who is a professor in that line. As for the boat it is ready now. It left the dock this day: Dogtown's most honored citizens were invited, and there was used up seven hundred and ninety-one bottles of "sour brine." The boat will go between Dogtown, Honk Honk and Skunk City. Of passengers there were only one school ma'am and five hundred dogs and fifty fine calves. In freight there was two hundred pound mail of "coffee gossip." M.L. tickets for sale in my office. No. 17 Clark St., Demers Ave.

Last Thursday, T. H. Kenyon, of Granville, N. D., called on your correspondent in the interest of W. I. Young & Co., Commission merchants, New York. Mr. Kenyon's object is to induce creameries to ship their products to the above named firm.

Last Tuesday, Ralph Stoddard and another party from Woodside, Minn., who were on their way to Roseau county, came very near losing their team and load while trying to cross on the ferry at Louisville. They had made the ferry fast, but just as the team was to get on the stake that held the ferry gave way, the ferry pulled out and the load and team went in the river. After hard work they succeeded in getting the team and load out. Everything was damaged and a sack of flour lost. This should be a warning to the county to furnish proper means for crossing.

It Saved His Leg.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For ulcers, wounds, piles, it's the best in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c. Sold by W. A. Schreiter.

Corn for Fodder.

Perhaps the most marked change in farming methods during the last ten years has followed the introduction of corn grown solely for fodder. Attempts were frequently made to utilize the cornstalks after the ears were harvested, and people were slow to realize that one cannot harvest a corn crop and have left fodder of any feeding value. Cattle fed on ripe corn stalks from which the ears have been removed cannot thrive, nor is the yield of such fodder per acre large enough to pay for its handling. The custom is now to sow the corn thick and cut it while the stalks are yet succulent. The ears will be either lacking altogether or very small and immature. In this way, five to seven tons of cured fodder are obtained per acre, which may be economically handled and makes a valuable feed.

The advantages of growing fodder corn apply with even greater force to this section than to more southern regions. The season while sometimes short for corn, is always long and hot enough for a full crop of corn fodder. The yields obtained—twice that of haw—make it valuable on farms with only a small area cleared, and greatly increases the capacity of such farms for livestock. Corn fodder is equal in feeding value to timothy hay, and for milk cows it has the advantage of being succulent and maintaining the flow of milk. It may be fed to sheep as the chief portion of their diet, but they will do somewhat better if hay is also fed occasionally. Horses relish an occasional feed of it. Cornfodder may be sown at any time from the last week in May till nearly July 1st. The seed should be obtained from southern Minnesota, either direct or through dealers. Any dent corn which ripens there will be suitable for fodder. Large Southern or Ensilage corn should be avoided as it grows too course and is late, and the smaller northern kinds do not give as much fodder per acre.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

HE SIGNED HIS NAME.

Story of Frank Hatton When He Became Postmaster General.

"Frank Hatton was a great stickler for details," said a former representative of congress who had been in Washington when Mr. Hatton was postmaster general the other day, "and when he entered the cabinet in the latter part of Arthur's administration he carried this habit with him. He let it be known among the heads of bureaus and divisions that he proposed to familiarize himself with the business of the department until he had grasped all the details of the work over which he presided.

"The second day at his desk the venerable colored messenger who attended him brought the usual large bundle of letters to be signed. It was a pile of typewritten epistles, inches thick. The messenger placed them before Mr. Hatton and, with a blotting pad in hand, stood waiting for the signature, as he had done for Mr. Hatton's predecessors since Hayes' time. The first letter was a long one on a topic with which the new postmaster general was not familiar and so formal, legal and involved that one reading did not make its meaning clear. Mr. Hatton hesitated, wrinkled his forehead and mused to himself:

"'What's this all about anyway? It's all news to me. I don't know whether I approve of the things it says or not. I can't make head or tail out of it. I don't know whether it's a good thing or not.'

"The old messenger, standing with blotting pad raised, leaned over and placed his forefinger on the space at the end of the last page and answered:

"'Well, neither do I, but you sign your name there.'

"Mr. Hatton signed."—New York Times.

Queer Freaks of Flowers.

"Why is it," complained the man with a grouch to a restaurant keeper yesterday, "that you fellers hardly ever have any flowers in your old joints?"

The hash founder looked up. "Flowers won't live in restaurants," he said. "The smoke and odor of the cooking seems to smother them, and they never thrive. I've tried it dozens of times, and always with the same result. Put flowers in a saloon, though, and they grow and bloom in splendid shape. The tobacco smoke, I suppose, serves as a fumigator, and the fumes of the liquor apparently stimulate them. If you want to make a success of flowers, put them in a grogshop. To stunt or kill them, a restaurant is the best ever."—Duluth News-Tribune.

Joe was such a pathetic little man. He came from a quarter of the city where crime and misery had formed a background for the five weary years of his unnatural little life. He was late to kindergarten one morning and was asked to sit by the door until the morning exercises were over. Before being restored to grace the teacher asked him why he was so late. "Well," replied Joe, "the patrol came after my mother, and I waited to see her off."—Chicago Tribune.

Lucky For Both.

Vol. 19. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, MAY 29, 1902. No. 37

1902-1903.

HIGH SCHOOL RECEPTION AND BANQUET SATURDAY NIGHT.

CLASS OF 1902 ROYALLY ENTERTAINED BY CLASS OF 1903.

The reception and banquet given in honor of the class of 1902 by the class of 1903 last Saturday evening at the New Palace hotel was a very pleasant function.

After the reception in the parlor the guests with Prof. and Mrs. Whiteley at the head, marched down stairs to the feast prepared below. During the banquet strains of sweet music filled the feasting hall. The room was beautifully decorated with the High School colors, purple and yellow, and with the Senior colors, royal purple and white. Palms and ferns were used in profusion.

The table in the form of the letter L, was strewn with fresh violets, and in the center was a huge jardenier of large red roses, while a rose rested at the plate of each senior and alumnus. The hum of conversation followed while the menu was served. The menu cards neatly tied with bows of red ribbon, the Junior color, read as follows:

MENU.

Touch, Taste and Smell.
Pleased From Our Table Rise—Shakespeare.

Olives Fruit Pickles
Chicken Veal Loaf Ox Tongue
Cold Boiled Ham Saratoga Chips
Fruit Jellies with Cream Wafers
French Salad Salmon Salad
Ice Cream Cake
Coffee Tea Iced Tea
Water

Before the menu was finished it was noticeable that a few were losing their appetites and by consulting the program on the menu cards it was found that these were the ones who were chosen for toasts.

Prof. Whiteley was toast-master and occasioned much merriment by the manner of his introduction of each toast.

The program of toasts as given was:

TOASTS.

Toastmaster Mr. F. A. Whiteley.
Our Educational System, F. A. Whiteley
This is an age of runners, and woe to the man who stops to tie his shoe strings —Carlyle.
The Seniors........Marjorie Rodgers.
The best of happiness, honor and fortune keep with you. Welcome all—Shakespeare.
The Juniors............Rachel Taylor
Should auld acquaintance be forgot—Burns.
The Alumnae..........Josephine Kaus
Veni, Vidi, Vici—Caesar.
The Literary Societies. Leland Healy.
Our Future..............Etta Garceau.
We are such stuff as dreams are made on—Shakespeare.
The Past.........Bertha LaFreniere.
Ainsi le bon temps regretons entre nous—Villon.
Venus et Veritas....Pauline Nieland.
Beauty is Truth, truth beauty—Keats.
Athletic.................Fred Richards.
The athlete nurtured for the Olympian games gains strength at last for life.
The Ladies..............Abner Fletcher.
You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies—Shakespeare.
To All.............Gilbert Westphal.
Night's candles are burnt out—Shakespeare.

Mr. Whiteley in his toast showed that an education can be attained outside as well as in school.

From the toasts of Marjorie Rodgers and Rachel Taylor all inferred that the Seniors and Juniors would still be friends regardless of the past. Miss Kaus assured them that the Alumnae though few, were still loyal and welcomed the class of '02 as Alumnae. Leland Healy brought up pleasant reminiscences of society strife, while Pauline Nieland showed that the Senior girls had done without strife because guided by the handsome faces of the Junior boys. Etta Garceau told the future of the class of '03 by omens of her dreams, while Bertha LaFreniere, in her Senior wisdom, disagreed with a poet and gave pleasure by saying that the past need not be forgotten. Parents should have been present to be inspired by the toast of Fred Richards, to encourage their children in Athletic sports.

From Abner Fletcher the ladies present learned that they had questionable virtues. The last toast by Gilbert Westphal was very fitting in that it commended his school-mates to hard work and to the appreciation of their opportunities. A verse of "Home Sweet Home" then completed the program before the guests sought their entertainers to assure them that the occasion would be one of their most pleasant memories.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

THAT ORDER NOW REPRESENTED IN RED LAKE FALLS.

FLOURISHING LODGE INSTITUTED IN THIS CITY TUESDAY NIGHT.

Red Lake Falls lodge, Knights of Pythias, was instituted Tuesday evening. Delegations were present from St. Hilaire, Crookston, McIntosh, Fertile, Grand Forks and Moorhead. Fred E. Wheaton, grand keeper of records and seals, of Minneapolis, and George L. Hall, grand prelate, of Moorhead, were present and led the work.

The city band got out at 6:30 and rendered some fine selections at the New Palace in honor of the K. P's.

At eleven p. m. the work of installing officers and instituting the lodge having been finished, the Pythians, together with a number of invited guests, repaired to the New Palace hotel to participate in the banquet that was already prepared. Covers were laid for 105, and the tables were set in the office and dining room. Dr. Watson acted as toastmaster. He warmly welcomed the visitors to the city and eloquently expounded the strong points of the fraternity. The response to the toast "Our Hosts," was made by Mr. Brownlee, of McIntosh, who told how his party had "come very near not coming," and finally succeeded in catching a freight, and landing O. K. Harry Ives, of St. Hilaire, spoke for "the field" of Red Lake county. He has been one of us for something like 22 years—and yet he saw in the room many who had been here before him. Fred Mix, of Crookston, speaking for the Crookstonites, complimented the lodge on the personelle of its membership, and predicted for the society here a bright future. M. A. Stark, of McIntosh, responded eloquently to the toast "The Ladies." Before closing he told the story of a young minister who was filling for one service a Boston pulpit. After prayer the collection was taken up and the reverend gentleman, upon examining the returns, said "This church was organized for the benefit of the poor, and I notice they are all here today." S. A. Swanson spoke of the growth of the order, this having been the second installation he had attended within two weeks. Grand Prelate Hall of Moorhead, compared the hearts of our Pythians, with the fertile soil of the Red River Valley. The seed sown there today would be productive of upbuilding influences in a social and moral way. P. A. Kaufer was glad to see the Pythians established here, and felt that the result would be beneficial not only to the individual members, but to the community as well.

Fred E. Wheaton delivered the closing remarks, responding to the toast "Our Order." The Knights of Pythias was founded only thirty-eight years ago, yet to-day it has a membership of 540,000. It is purely an American society, and the only one ever recognized by the congress of the United States which had granted it a national charter. He felt the members would be better men for having joined the order.

"DUTY."

BACCALAUREATE SERMON PREACHED BY THE REV. FR. E. FAYOLLE.

The baccalaureate services at St. Joseph's church Sunday evening marked the beginning of the public exercises of commencement week of the Red Lake Falls High School. The graduating class accompanied by the full faculty, occupied front seats in the centre of the church and a large audience was present. After the regular Sunday evening services, the baccalaureate sermon was preached by the Rev. E. Fayolle.

As is his custom, Rev. Fayolle spoke without notes, and delivered an able and earnest address.

Realizing that the greater portion of the lives of the Seniors lies in the mysterious future, the sermon abounded in words of wisdom which might serve as a guide to these young people about to enter the arena of practical activities.

"Duty" was his subject, and "Esto vir," David's last words to his son, "Be a Man," the text.

In the opening, he said man is a moral being, because he is responsible; responsible because he is free; free because he is intelligent. And yet with all these qualities, man is dependent, and in a sense a slave—a slave to duty. Duty is the golden chain which, attached to God, binds together every human heart. Man is dependent from birth to death. Dependent first on the care of parents, then on the protection of laws, on the charity of his neighbors, on self respect. "The duty for you boys and girls is to be good and honorable. Two safeguards are good company, good reading. By honesty I mean complete honesty—honesty to God and man; no indifference; and fulfillment of religious duties."

His conclusion was a grand oratorical climax. "In North Africa on the shore of the Mediterranean sea, on a rock half-eaten by the waves, is chiseled in Hebrew: 'Man is only a man when he is a man of duty.'"

IVES RESIGNS.

HARRY IVES TENDERS RESIGNATION AS POPULIST COUNTY CHAIRMAN.

HAS BEEN IDENTIFIED WITH POPULIST PARTY SINCE ITS ORGANIZATION.

H. E. Ives, editor of the St. Hilaire Spectator, which has been Populist for twelve years, and chairman of the Populist county central committee on Tuesday wrote out his resignation in a letter addressed to Frank Jeffers, secretary of the Populist county central committee of Red Lake county. He briefly states the reason for this action to be his decision to leave the Populist party.

It is understood that the Spectator will support Halvor Steenerson for congress and that in the approaching campaign the paper will be independent.

THE PASSION PLAY.

Will Be Produced at St. Joseph's Church on Monday, June 2.

Rev. E. Fayolle announces the forthcoming production of the "Passion Play" at St. Joseph's church Monday evening, June 2. Prices of admission will be adults 25c, children 15c. Rev. Fayolle before deciding to have this presentation under the auspices of his church, received personal assurances from an eminent judge to the effect that "he would not miss seeing it for $5. It is grand."

Prof. Kilrain has just been at Grand Forks, and the Daily Herald says:

The production of the "Passion Play" at the Sacred Heart church last evening was a great success in every way. It was under the direction of Prof. Kilrain of Cleveland, Ohio, and was illustrated by cinetograph moving pictures, and the pictures being life size. One of the features of the entertainment last evening was the singing of Prof. Kilrain, who has a magnificent tenor voice. On account of the great success last evening and the fact that many more desire seeing it, the entertainment will be reproduced this evening. Every one of the large audience present last evening endorsed it very highly, and the church should be packed to the doors this evening. "Holy Night" which was rendered last evening by Mr. Kilrain, will be sung again by special request. None can afford to miss this entertainment.

Obituary.

The funeral of Mrs. O. Tessier occurred Tuesday last, and all that was mortal of the lady of high and noble parts, was laid to rest in the quaint burying ground adjacent to the Terrebonne church.

Born in Montreal in 1838, her parents, who were in affluent circumstances, perceiving the natural gifts with which she was endowed, gave her a classical education, with particular attention to music.

In 1860 she was married to O. Tessier, who was at that time prominently identified with the politics of the Dominion. In 1886 the family moved to Minneapolis, and Mrs. Tessier became a favorite in musical circles. She taught both vocal and instrumental music, and was organist in one of the Catholic churches of the city.

In 1899 Mr. and Mrs. Tessier made their home in Terrebonne, and have since resided there.

Her unmistakable loftiness of character, her refined, firm but gentle ways, her opulent charity, and her sweet disposition, made for her a warm place in the affections of the Terrebonne people, and her taking away has been a sad blow to more than her family, her husband, and one child, Dr. W. O. Tessier, who mourn the loss of one so strong in all lovable qualities.

The only daughter, a sister of charity, died in Spokane in 1895.

To the bereaved relatives, The Gazette would offer heartfelt sympathy.

Thy work is done,
Thy sowing and reaping;
Thy crown is won,
And finished thy weeping
From tears and woes
Away from earth's midnight dreary
Thine a repose

VALENTINE

HON. EZRA G. VALENTINE PAYS RED LAKE COUNTY HIS FIRST VISIT.

Hon. Ezra G. Valentine, of Breckenridge, republican candidate for congress in this district, made a tour of Red Lake county this week, in the interests of his candidacy and spent Tuesday in Red Lake Falls. Mr. Valentine expressed considerable confidence in his ability to land the nomination. He has been before the people of this section since 1886 as a member of the drainage commission.

Next week he will begin a township canvass of the district, and expects before the primary election on Sept. 16, to have visited and delivered speeches at every one of the 325 post-offices in the Ninth district. It is a strenuous program he has laid out for himself but he realizes what the undertaking means. Mr. Valentine left on Tuesday's Great Northern. He is a very able and pleasant gentlemen to meet.

On his way to Red Lake county Mr. Valentine stopped over at Bemidji, where he met Cyrus Little Smith, the Beltrami county farmer who has declared himself a candidate for the congressional nomination. Mr. Valentine was about to go out on a drive through the pine stumps of Beltrami county to do some electioneering, and to show the good feeling existing, offered to take Mr. Smith along. Inasmuch as both candidates propose making a township canvass, the suggestion was made that the arrangement be continued throughout the district. But Mr. Smith will not likely accept.

While in the city Mr. Valentine called on a number of our citizens and made himself acquainted. All pronounce him a man of very pleasing personality.

IN FINE SHAPE.

Crop Conditions as Set Forth by the Northern Pacific Crop Bulletin Issued Saturday.

The Northern Pacific crop report issued Saturday tells of highly satisfactory conditions in almost all portions of the system. Seeding is well under way and weather developments are of a favorable nature. The only uncertain note concerns the Red River valley branch of the system, which says:

"Some seeding has been done since last report, but the work has been delayed by rains and from 30 to 40 per cent. of the cultivated land has not yet been seeded. With favorable weather, this acreage could be sown to flax and other late grains, but if the rains continue much longer, there will be a decrease in the total acreage sown. Some sections of low lands probably will not be sown this year, except under the most favorable weather conditions during the next few weeks. Grain already planted (which was all sown on high lands) is in excellent condition; in fact it could not be improved upon."

Notice to Cattle Owners.

Notice is hereby given that all cattle and horses found running at large within the city limits of the city of Red Lake Falls are liable to empoundment, either in the North Side pound at F. Gerke's or at John Deforge's pound on the South Side. Pound charges, $1.00. The ordinance relating to cattle and horses running at large will be strictly inforced.

NORTHWEST SUFFERS BY HEAVY DECREASE IN THE EXPORT FLOUR TRADE.

Minnesota Democrats to Meet in State Convention June 25—State Inheritance Tax Law Held to be Unconstitutional—Surveyor General Stevens of Duluth District Dies Suddenly. News of the State in General.

Washington, May 26.—Some startling figures relative to the export flour trade of the United States are shown in a treasury statement just issued. This statement shows that the export trade of Minneapolis is not more than 50 per cent of what it was for the first four months of 1900. The bulletin says:

"The flour trade in the Northwest is best measured by Minneapolis' shipments. The total shipments for the first 18 weeks of this year were 5,413,154 barrels, 4,874,538 barrels in 1901 and 5,713,848 barrels in 1900.

"For export the average weekly shipments were lower by one-half in 1902 than those of the first 18 weeks of 1901, and less than half of the total export shipments for the corresponding period in 1900.

"Foreign trade in flour has evidently undergone a radical change."

MINNESOTA DEMOCRATS.

State Convention Will Be Held in Minneapolis, June 25.

St. Paul, May 22.—The Democratic state convention will be held June 25 in the auditorium at Minneapolis. It will be composed of 1,257 accredited delegates. The county conventions will be held Saturday, June 21. The only candidate for governor under consideration by the state central committee is former Governor John Lind of Minneapolis.

The meeting of the Democratic state central committee held at the Merchants hotel was attended by 50 members of the county representation and executive committee. The chief work of the meeting, which consisted of fixing the convention date and the apportionment of county representation, was dispatched in an hour in open session. Several subsequent executive sessions were given over to discussion of the coming campaign, a candidate for governor and the political situation throughout the state, as reported by committeemen.

DIED VERY SUDDENLY.

Surveyor General Stevens of Duluth Succumbs to Bright's Disease.

Duluth, May 23.—G. Fred Stevens, surveyor general of logs and lumber for this district, died very suddenly at his home here from an acute attack of Bright's disease. Mr. Stevens had been very low for several days past, but during the night and early morning his condition was so much improved that it was believed the danger was past. Deceased was 35 years of age and is survived by a wife. For several years he has been a prominent lumber shipper and saw mill proprietor. He took an active part in the last gubernatorial campaign and was rewarded for his efforts by appointment to the office he held at his death.

HELD TO BE ILLEGAL.

Minnesota's Inheritance Tax Law Is Knocked Out.

St. Paul, May 23.—Judge Bazille has held that the Minnesota inheritance tax law is void. The law of 1892 provides that near relatives inheriting from an estate should pay half of 1 per cent of inheritances above $10,000 and that more distant relatives shall pay a tax of 10 per cent above $10,000. The judge finds that the amendment to the Constitution of 1894 provides that the taxation shall be graded and uniform, but shall not exceed 5 per cent, and that, therefore, the law of 1892, imposing 10 per cent, is unconstitutional.

TORNADO STRIKES SCHOOL.

Teacher Is Killed and Many Pupils Injured by Storm.

Alexandria, Minn., May 23.—A storm resembling a tornado struck the school house situated about one mile south of Brandon, in this county, about 1 p. m., killing the teacher, Miss Ida Hanson, and injuring several of the pupils. The building was destroyed and more of the children would have suffered injury and perhaps have been killed but for the fact that they were outside of the building when the storm struck. The storm moved east of Brandon and it is feared that further casualties have taken place.

EASTERN MINNESOTA SYSTEM.

Now Said to Have Been Absorbed by the Great Northern.

West Superior, Wis., May 21.—It was given out during the day that the Eastern Minnesota system will be entirely absorbed by the Hill road known as the Great Northern. The Eastern Minnesota system handles a great amount of ore and is said to be one of the best paying properties in the country.

Baptists Meet at St. Paul.

St. Paul, May 22.—The First Baptist church was well filled with more than 1,000 visitors and delegates at the opening session of the American Baptist Missionary union. President H. Kirke Porter, Pennsylvania, made the opening address and Rev. H. F. Stilwell, pastor of the First Baptist church, welcomed the gathering. The balance of the day was devoted to reading of reports.

Low Scholarship Causes a Suicide.

New Ulm, Minn., May 22.—Because his scholarship in the New Ulm high school was not up to the requirements which his father had fixed, Ora J. Siegel, 17 years old, a son of J. H. Siegel of the Eagle Roller Mills company, committed suicide here. The boy went to his room and shot himself in the mouth with a 22-calibre revolver, dying instantly.

WANT A SHORTER DAY.

Stillwater Mill Hands Will Not Report for Work at Usual Hour.

Stillwater, Minn., May 25.—Employes of the South Stillwater sawmills have decided upon a novel way of striking for shorter hours at the same pay. The mills all start at 6 o'clock on an 11-hour run.

At a meeting held in South Stillwater today the men agreed that they would not present themselves for work until 7 o'clock, beginning tomorrow morning.

About 650 men are employed in the South Stillwater mills and a large percentage of them claim they must have the present wages for 10 hours' work.

Several of the mill owners said today it would be impossible for them to concede to the demands of the men, the wages this season being higher than ever before, and there has been no advance in price received for sawing lumber.

There has been some agitation elsewhere on the St. Croix for shorter hours, but the strike affects the three mills in South Stillwater only.

NEW FIND OF IRON.

Ore Discovered on West End of the Atikokan Range.

Duluth, May 23.—A new find of iron ore has been made on the western end of the Atikokan range, which lies just across the boundary line on the line of the Canada Northern railroad, the McKenzie and Mann line. In structure it is very similar to the Mesaba ore, and it lies but a few feet below the surface. It was found by men working on the railroad.

The Atikokan range is about 24 miles long. The easterly 12 miles has magnetite ore, and the westerly end red hematite, running high in iron, but containing considerable sulphur. Four diamond drills are now working on the range, one of which is by the United States Steel corporation interests.

SEVERAL PERSONS INJURED.

Duluth Visited by a Storm of Cyclonic Nature.

Duluth, May 21.—A heavy storm, which for a time neared a cyclonic nature, swept over Duluth during the day, unroofing buildings and doing considerable damage throughout the city. John Watson was blown from an 18-foot tramway and received a broken leg and arm. The windows of several of the school buildings were broken and in one building four children were cut by falling glass. The Duluth Brewing and Malting company's building was unroofed. Though the storm lasted for only five minutes, it was very severe during that short time and was followed by a heavy rain.

MINNESOTA TAKES A HAND.

Railway Commission Wants Local Packing House Rates Undisturbed.

Chicago, May 21.—The railroad commission of Minnesota has taken a hand in the rate problem which is confronting Western lines. Traffic officials of the Chicago-St. Paul lines have received letters from the chairman of the commission requesting them to not disturb local rates in Minnesota while equalizing tariffs on packing house products and live stock products. The fear of the Minnesota commission is that through rates will be made such as to draw the live stock from the state from South St. Paul, which was not affected by the decision of 1890, to Chicago.

ORIENTAL TRAFFIC.

J. J. Hill Buying and Building Many Large Freighters.

St. Paul, May 22.—J. J. Hill is extending his plans for steamships for handling of Oriental traffic. He has announced the purchase of two 14,000-ton freighters which are now on their way to Seattle to engage in the Pacific carrying trade. He is also contemplating ordering three more 20,000-ton ships, similar to the two big 20,000-ton freighters now building at New London, Conn.

Mr. Hill firmly believes that Oriental traffic will increase faster than American transportation companies can supply facilities for handling it.

AGRICULTURE IN MINNESOTA.

Census Bureau Issues Some Statistics on Farming.

Washington, May 20.—The census bureau has issued a report on agriculture in Minnesota which shows that the 154,659 farms of the state enumerated June 1, 1900, had a value of $669,522,315, of which 17 per cent was in buildings. The value of farm implements and machinery was $30,099,230 and of live stock $89,063,097. The total value of farm products for 1899 was $151,217,304, of which 28 per cent was in animal products. The gross farm income in 1899 was $127,959,824.

Small Cyclone in Minnesota.

Benson, Minn., May 21.—A small cyclone, starting three miles east, swept northwest between 5 and 6 p. m. and did considerable damage. Amund Miller, eight miles north, was killed by the collapse of his house.

SANCTIONED BY HILL.

Plans for Betterment of the Burlington System.

Chicago, May 26.—James J. Hill has given his approval to extensive betterments for the Burlington property which were partially planned before the change in ownership of the system. The main work which has received Mr. Hill's sanction is the double-tracking, grading, straightening, retracking and reballasting of the main line from Red Oak to the Missouri river. This work will cost several million dollars.

Asks Damages of $250,000.

New York, May 26.—Suit has been entered in the United States district court by the Countess of Buena Vista against General Brooke of the United States army for $250,000. The countess alleged that General Brooke abrogated rights held by her through inheritance to the privileges of conducting the slaughterhouse at Havana and to the distribution of meats and the collection of the fixed charges for said meats. The countess claimed these privileges by virtue of a royal decree from the king of Spain, dated 1704.

Robinson, but as neither of us knows anything the result was not important. By the way, can I write a note at your desk?"

Alden was just raising the lid.

"Certainly," said he, and Elmendorf sat down and wrote fast with a sputtering pen.

"I don't see any blotter here," he said, when the pen stopped scratching.

"Never use one," rejoined Alden. "I don't have time. There's a pad, but I never blot anything on it."

"You don't spill as much ink as I do," said Elmendorf, "except on your signature. You write that black enough."

"Habit of mine," replied Alden. "How do you happen to know anything about it?"

"I saw the note you wrote yesterday."

Alden flushed.

"I couldn't help it," said Elmendorf hastily. "And let me tell you that I'm greatly mistaken if the result of my seeing it isn't very important."

"In what way?"

Elmendorf begged to be excused from giving an immediate answer, and Alden did not insist.

"This 'making trouble' that you mentioned last evening," he said, "is getting its work in this morning. I am shadowed by the most conspicuous man in Greater New York. Every time he fancies that I have forgotten his presence he barks like a dog and remarks to every one who will listen that the grip is worst in hot weather."

Elmendorf glanced at Alden with an anxious eye. He seemed to have something on his mind, but he said only: "I'm surprised. There are shadows on the force who can't be picked out so easily."

Alden regarded him intently over the top of the desk upon which he was leaning.

"See if I've got any more letters outside, Jack," he said and added when Robinson had left the room, "Do you mean to say there's another one?"

"Sure," returned Elmendorf, "one for trouble and one for business. I don't know why I tell you these things, except that I hate Neale. He wants to know where you were yesterday, and he thinks you'll go there again. He expects you to throw the man with the grip and never notice the other one."

"I'll remember this, Elmendorf," said Alden.

"It's a gift," replied the detective. "As for that, you've paid me already with the information that you don't use a blotter. Good morning. I'll see you later in the day."

It may have been about half an hour afterward when he presented himself at the house where John Robinson lived and introduced himself to the landlady thereof, with the result that he was presently ushered up two flights of stairs to a large room at the rear of the house. Left alone there, he remarked to himself, "This doesn't seem to go against me so much as it usually does."

Then he proceeded to examine the personal effects of Mr. Robinson. The examination was thorough, but the product was singularly meager. He discovered an envelope containing some pawnbroker's tickets, showing loans upon a watch, a winter overcoat and a ring of small value, and in a waste paper basket a part of an envelope which had been addressed to some person in Philadelphia, but the name was missing. Remembering that Robinson had thought of Philadelphia first when groping about for a falsehood, the latter discovery assumed some little importance as a guide for subsequent investigation.

The particular object of the detective's search eluded him, however, and when he left the house he was far from satisfied with his luck.

"I thought I knew why Robinson went home," he said, "but either I didn't or he changed his mind."

He spent some hours in verifying Robinson's statement about the place where he had passed the night and in attempting to ascertain the young man's favorite haunts and the names of his companions. The verification was easy, but the search for the man's associates yielded little. Apparently Robinson had not a wide circle of acquaintances.

Returning to the lower regions of the city, Elmendorf encountered a bit of better fortune in learning that Robinson had visited his place of employment on the previous day between 5 and 6 o'clock.

"If he's the man," reflected the detective, "he took that money home, and then, not finding a satisfactory place to hide it, he brought it down here. By the everlasting, he must have had it in his pocket right there in Elsie Miller's room! No wonder he had nervous prostration!"

Alden, as was to have been expected, had left his office long before Elmendorf returned to it. Robinson also had gone away, but might come back soon. By the exercise of a little tact the detective secured permission to wait in the private office, and while there he familiarized himself thoroughly with the contents of Robinson's desk, but it was not worth the trouble.

It was difficult to suppose that Robinson was still carrying that money in his pocket. He must have put it some [illegible] would I have done in the same circumstances?" It came into his mind at last that Robinson had been present when Alden was arrested, and for this reason would not have expected to see him at the office again immediately. Thus reflecting, Elmendorf drew some keys of convenient design from his pocket and cautiously raised the lid of Alden's desk. It was fairly clear on its working surface and the pigeonholes did not look promising, so at random Elmendorf opened a little drawer in which, under some papers which seemed to have lain there a long time, he found an envelope addressed in typewritten characters to John Robinson.

The envelope looked fresh and the papers on top of it did not. The inference that the thing had been slid into a little used drawer and under those old documents for purposes of concealment was as easy as possible. Elmendorf closed the drawer and the lid of the desk and walked to the window with the envelope in his hand. It looked suspicious, and the detective gently murmured that he would "chance it."

With the thin blade of a penknife he very adroitly raised the gummed lappet without inflicting any injury which could not be repaired. The envelope contained five $100 bills wrapped in a blank sheet of the firm's paper.

Despite the coincidence of amounts, this was not necessarily the money mentioned in Alden's note to Elsie. If, for instance, Mr. Robinson should say that he had frugally laid by that sum, and had thought his employer's desk the safest place for it, the statement would be equally hard to believe or to disprove. For this reason Elmendorf scrutinized the bills with an eager eye, and when he found upon one of them a peculiar mark, as if a word of a strange language had been scrawled there he was more than pleased. Raising the lower sash of the window, he made a mirror of the glass by holding the cuff of his black coat against it. Placing the bill before this mirror, he beheld the strange word reversed, and it became legible as "Clarence."

"The signature was blotted against the money," said he. "It couldn't be anything else. The bills were folded into the note while the signature was wet, and of course it printed itself on one of them."

If Robinson had entered the room at that moment, he would have been arrested for attempted murder, but he did not come in. Whether this was his luck or Elmendorf's may be hard to determine.

He beheld the strange word reversed.

The detective sat down by Alden's desk, holding the money in his hand. His face wore a look of triumph, but it was not pleasant to see, for the resentment which this crime had inspired in him was burning in his heart. He was not the hunter who does a day's work in the woods and counts his gains with dull interest at night. He was the man who has caught the wolf that killed the pet lamb.

But there came a slow change upon him. His face was puckered around the eyes, and his lower lip got between his teeth. Presently with a hasty hand he scribbled upon a sheet of paper this sentence:

For further particulars inquire of William Elmendorf, New York detective bureau, 300 Mulberry street.

This message he inclosed instead of the money in the envelope, which he carefully resealed. He held it balanced upon two fingers for a moment, eying it critically. Then he replaced it in the drawer under the papers.

The knife with which he had opened the envelope was lying open upon the desk. He picked it up, pulled down the desk's lid and drew out one of the sliding leaves, upon which he beat out a gentle tune with the point of the knife blade. He had worn a little hole in the wood without being aware of it, when he heard Robinson's voice just outside the door.

Elmendorf suddenly gripped the knife hard and set the point upon the back of his left hand. Then with a bit of a laugh he shifted the knife to his left hand and slowly, steadily pressed the [illegible] opened the door, the knife was lying on the floor and Elmendorf was striding toward a bowl in the corner.

"Dropped my knife on the back of my hand," he said. "Sharp blade, and it went in deep."

Robinson came forward hastily and viewed the injured member, from which a steady stream of blood was flowing.

"Bleeds like the deuce!" said he. "You must have cut an artery."

Elmendorf looked keenly at Robinson, holding his hand meanwhile in a stream of cold water.

"It will stop in half a minute," said the detective. "If you'll pull my handkerchief out of my pocket and tear off a couple of strips, we'll tie it up."

Robinson assisted in this operation, by request, but he was awkward and nervous and seemed not to relish the sight of blood. When it was done, Elmendorf thanked him cordially, asked a few trivial questions and departed. Half an hour later he delivered the five $100 bills to the chief of the detective bureau, with a full report upon the manner in which they had come into his possession and the method by which he had succeeded in identifying one of them.

CHAPTER XI.

ST. WINIFRED'S—MORNING.

WHEN the sun had been up three hours, it was able to look over a low portion of St. Winifred's building and see the window of the room where Elsie lay asleep. The sudden increase of light awoke her, and she found that Brenda was holding both her hands.

"I was afraid you would move too much and hurt yourself," said she. "I knew you must wake soon. How do you feel?"

Elsie winked her eyes and twisted the left corner of her mouth with the air of one who is testing a bruise to see how sore it is.

"There was a girl who felt better once a long time ago," she said, "but it doesn't matter. Haven't you been to bed all this night?"

"I have slept on the couch," replied Brenda. "My maid brought down this loose gown, and I've been very comfortable. I have had some things brought from your house too."

"Did you get my little silver mirror?" asked Elsie, with eagerness. "Oh, how good of you! Please let me have it."

Brenda gave her the mirror, and she gazed long and intently into it; then she sighed and laid down the glass.

"All gone," she said. "Well, that doesn't matter either. Nothing matters any more. But I used to think I would be pretty when I was dead."

"So you will, my dear," answered Brenda. "You'll have a sweeter, prettier face than you have now—the dearest old grandmother's face, with beautiful white curls all around—and the children who come to kiss you will cry like a little shower on a May morning, but they will be better children afterward, for they will want to live the life that brings such happy sleep at the end of it."

"I wish I could say things like that," said Elsie. "Even if they aren't true they make people feel good. I—look—fierce! Don't I, honestly?"

"Fierce!" echoed Brenda. "Why, anything else in the world, I should say."

"That's slang," said Elsie. "It merely means terrible."

"Well, I'd hardly agree to that word either," said Brenda. "You don't inspire any terror in me. You're only a little bit pale, and perhaps you have cried too much."

"You must think I am a perfect baby. Really it isn't so. I have borne some things in this life fairly well. I would bear much more and be as happy as any girl if I only knew how. But there's no way. My life is in a tangle that cannot be unwound. I just simply can't go on, Brenda. That's what I felt when I opened my eyes in this room the first time and while I lay thinking before I would let Dr. Kendall know I was conscious. There is no way, absolutely no way"—

Her voice began to tremble, but she resolutely checked the tendency.

"How everything settles down on you in the morning!" she said. "You wake so happy. Perhaps you have dreamed of the pleasantest things. I almost always dream of people I like and of being with them in the fields or abroad somewhere in a strange city and all dressed up in the most wonderful clothes, and then the reality begins to come down, like—like a great bale of rags. I saw them loading a barge with rags once—she was alongside a steamer—and I always remembered how those dirty, heavy, stifling bales came down. They were like life."

"Your life hasn't been altogether a bale of rags, my young friend," said Brenda, "and unless I'm much mistaken it will be in the future quite like some of those dreams. There was a young man who made a promise or two about strange cities and beautiful clothes, you know," she added, reddening a little. "I saw Mr. Alden's note to you, and I was tricked into reading a part of it."

"I suppose it will be printed in the papers," said Elsie, "with your picture and mine and Mr. Alden's. Isn't this awful? It is so absolutely horrible that there's no use being polite about it. But really I never meant to do you any harm. I never encouraged Mr. Alden. I loved him from the beginning. The very first evening I saw him I went home and cried about him, but when he began to come to see me I made him think that I didn't care for him. I actually did make him think so."

"I know it," replied Brenda gently. [illegible]

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Frank Hoyt, arrested at Minneapolis for the popular pastime of "taking" an umbrella, was sent to the workhouse for 90 days.

G. Fred Stevens, surveyor general of logs and lumber for the Duluth district, died very suddenly at his home in that city from an acute attack of Bright's disease.

Luther Weir, a prominent and prosperous farmer of Washington county, was instantly killed by lightning while at work in a corn field at his home near Lake Elmo.

The Eastern Minnesota, connecting the Twin Cities with the head of the lakes and ore regions, and in which J. J. Hill is known to be interested, has been absorbed by the Great Northern.

Joseph B. Cotton has definitely refused to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress in the Duluth district. J. Adam Bede continues to be the only Republican candidate for the nomination.

A storm resembling a tornado struck the schoolhouse situated about one mile south of Brandon, Douglas county, killing the teacher, Miss Ida Hanson, and injuring several of the pupils. The building was destroyed.

The Great Northern has just sold 23,000 acres of land in Marshall county to the Henry C. Tuttle Land company for $250,000. The former now has 120,000 acres left in Minnesota out of the original grant of 2,125,000 acres.

Because his scholarship in the New Ulm high school was not up to the requirements which his father had fixed, Ora J. Siegel, 17 years old, a son of J. H. Siegel of the Eagle Roller Mills company, committed suicide by shooting.

A heavy storm, which for a time neared a cyclonic nature, swept over Duluth one day last week, unroofing buildings and doing considerable damage throughout the city. John Watson was blown from an 18-foot tramway and received a broken leg and arm.

The supreme court has denied the motion made by the Polk county commissioners to quash the writ of certiorari, sued out by John Utick and other taxpayers, and continued the case until the October term of court. The legality of the state drainage law will be determined by the action.

Bishop Trobec of St. Cloud has received confirmation from Rome of the death of Archbishop Zardetti, formerly bishop of the St. Cloud diocese. He was installed as bishop at St. Cloud in 1889, remaining there four and one-half years, when he was named as archbishop of Bucharest, Roumania.

Dr. Archie Kingsbury, a Winona dentist, was drowned in the Mississippi river at that point while out boating. In crossing the dam in the slough, the boat, with Kingsbury and a girl companion, went down. Kingsbury sank, and did not rise. The girl went down twice but was saved by two boys who were fishing near by.

The Democratic state convention will be held June 25 in the auditorium at Minneapolis. It will be composed of 1,257 accredited delegates. The county conventions will be held Saturday, June 21. The only candidate for governor under consideration by the state central committee is former Governor John Lind of Minneapolis.

Growing grains and hay throughout Minnesota have made wonderful growth during the week, according to the crop report of the Northern Pacific Railway company, and are now far more advanced than in previous years. The rains and the warm weather of the past week have had their effect, and vegetation is growing rapidly.

All the binding twine at the penitentiary has been either sold or contracted. The board of control purchased this year's stock of sisal directly from Yucatan, making a great saving. The twine is sold at 9¾c per pound, which will bring in about $500,000. Cash sales to individual farmers aggregate about $140,000—at least twice as much as any previous year.

John Anderson, while engaged in painting the high bridge in St. Paul, fell 125 feet to the river below. Both legs were broken, his right hip crushed and cut and a gaping wound inflicted on his forehead. When he struck the water Anderson started to swim towards the shore 150 feet away. He kept himself above water until rescued. He is now at the city hospital and it is said he will recover.

Engineer George A. Ralph of the state drainage commission has been looking over the work needed in the counties selected at the recent meeting of the drainage board. Norman county is likely to get about four miles of ditch this year, Marshall county about three miles of extension, Aitkin county six miles, Wadena five miles, Becker one and one-half miles and Red Lake between four and five miles.

The census bureau has issued a report on agriculture in Minnesota which shows that the 154,659 farms of the state enumerated June 1, 1900, had a value of $669,522,315, of which 17 per cent was in buildings. The value of farm implements and machinery was $30,099,230 and of live stock $89,063,097. The total value of farm products for 1899 was $161,217,304, of which 28 per cent was in animal products. The gross farm income in 1899 was $127,959,824.

The University of Minnesota will graduate 460 men and women during the week of June 1. Of these 185 will receive the degree of bachelor of arts; 20 will receive the degree of master of arts and doctor of philosophy, 8 the degree of master of law; 1 the degree of doctor of civil law; 11 the degree of mechanical engineer; 4 the degree of mining engineer, and 9 the degree of civil engineer. The college of law will graduate 110 students, the college of medicine 70, the college of pharmacy 19.

Judge Bazille of Ramsey county has held that the Minnesota inheritance tax law is void. The law of 1893 provides that near relatives inheriting from an estate should pay half of 1 per cent on inheritance above $10,000 and that more distant relatives shall pay a tax of 10 per cent above $10,000. The judge finds that the amendment to the Constitution of 1894 provides that the taxation shall be graded and uniform [illegible]

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS.

The human heart the world over is susceptible to the same emotions. The black mother in the jungles of Africa coos over her babe, probably with the same intensity of love as is felt by her civilized sister as she presses her more beautiful Caucasian offspring to her breast. Going up a grade higher, as between civilized people of different degrees of refinement, culture and wealth, there is little difference perceptible in the common causes that touch the heart. The world is a great play house and the drama of life as it unfolds its mysteries, day after day, is participated in by every individual. The struggle for existence is no fiercer with the poor day laborer than is the fight for power for the mighty financier. The lady in the gilded palace might be glad to change her position for the heart-peace of the scrub-woman doing her floors.

There is pathos, light and shadow everywhere. The inequalities of life are evened and planed down by the mercurial nature of the human heart, since hope springs eternal, and custom makes easy for one what would seem intolerable to another. The wooden shoes worn by the Philippino maiden only as a protection under extraordinary conditions, are as much to her as is the patent leather boot to the belle of the modern ball room. Cause and effect play the game of hide and seek with the human heart, even as the scintillating sunbeams chase the shadows of the leaves as they dance in the breezes. The reunion of a child with its parents in a hut is as sweet to these lowly people after a trying separation as would be the restoration of a kidnapped child to the millionaire parent. A story from true life was recently published in St. Paul. The Lights and Shadows are brought out strongly:

"With only an ill-scrawled address. written on a torn and dirty sheet of paper half the size of an ordinary envelope, little Josefa Zielendski, eleven years old, arrived in St. Paul from Poland. The address bore the name of Joseph Zielenski, 239 Minnehaha avenue, St. Paul, but was written so badly and was so old as to be almost undecipherable. Unable to speak a word of English, the little one waited in the union depot yesterday until her presence became noticable, and she was turned over to an officer.

All through the day she sat patiently waiting for some one to come and take her to her home, but her parents did not expect that she was to arrive so soon. Where an ordinary little girl would have been frantic with fear, this little Polish miss settled down with the calm stoicism of her race to wait for what was in store for her. Busy travelers passing in and out of the depot noticed her anxious looks as she scanned the faces of the passing throng for some one she knew, but none had time or was able to talk to her.

Shortly before midnight her father was located and he came down to the station to get his daughter. The meeting between the parent and child was touching. The little one was so overcome with joy after all the trials she had passed through that she broke down and sobbed, although she had not made a complaint before. She was taken out to her home where there was a general celebration, even at the late hour.

The parents of the child came to this country two years ago, and the father has been working as a laborer since. He managed to save up enough money to send home for the daughter he had left behind, but had no idea she would arrive in St. Paul for several weeks yet.

MORE COWS, MORE MONEY.

"The oleomargerine law will be a great thing for the dairy industry in the United States," said W. W. P. McConnell, state dairy and food commissioner, "and Minnesota will get its share of the benefit."

The best experts in the country have estimated that the passage of the law will increase the consumption of butter at least 100,000,000 pounds per year. Almost no milk is used in making oleomargerine, and so it in no wise benefits the dairy farmer, but comes into competition with him.

It requires about 2,200,000,000 pounds of milk, however, to make the vast amount of butter which will be used as a direct result of the oleomargerine bill, which forbids the coloring of oleomargerine to resemble butter, and making it go on the market on its merits.

This means, in the opinion of Mr. McConnell, that it will require at least 500,000 cows, allowing that they are the best dairy cows that can be found, to supply this increased demand. This seems like a wonderfully large number of cows but the country will meet the demand. Every farmer can add a cow or two, perhaps, to his herd, and that is the way it will be met. It will not be any great task for one farmer, and it will not bring him any great fortune, but it will increase his income just that much. The money that will be paid for the product of these 500,000 additional cows will probably be distributed among 75,000 or 100,000 farmers in all parts of the country. Minnesota alone could easily have 100,000 more cows, and undoubtedly will have, and it means just that much more money for the farmers. Results will show that the oleomargerine bill was one of the best pieces of legislation for the country that has been passed by congress for many years.

SPOON BUTLER.

An old soldier was telling us war stories one day and when he referred to Ben Butler one of our party remarked that it was too bad a man should go down into history with an unsavory reputation. Now our friend straightened up and said: "Let me tell you how General Butler got that name and you will not think it too bad." Ben Butler arrived in New Orleans and immediately sent word to the best hotel that he wanted quarters. Of course his request was refused so Gen. Butler simply took possession of the hotel in Uncle Sam's name. The streets were in a terrible condition and there was much distress among the people. So Gen. Butler suggested that the city hire the poor people to construct sewers and otherwise improve the condition of things. Of course they were again opposed to a Yankee's notion, so finally the General took matters into his own hands. He gave every man work who wanted to work. Then he sent out his soldiers with orders to confiscate (that is to take in the name of Uncle Sam) silverware enough from the rich to pay for the work done by the needy. So we were glad to hear the story from one of Butler's own men, as we love to think of every soldier as honorable as well as brave.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

WHEN SCHLEY CAME TO TOWN.

One frosty morning last winter if you had been in our town you would have seen an enormous crowd of people all happily and eagerly waiting for a train. Soon the track was cleared, the engine came hoarsely puffing along and the engineer had a very proud air, indeed. But I do not wonder, for in a very short time out of his coach stepped the great hero, Admiral Schley. Now I've heard cheers on many occasions but never one to compare in intensity and volume with the one which greeted the brave man who came out to shake hands with everybody within reach. Mrs. Schley stood there, proud and happy, and enjoyed the homage of a loyal people. Children were held high by their elders to catch sight of the popular idol, and the feeling of enthusiasm ran high. Our boys should not forget that his spirit of unselfishness is the quality that has sealed the love of the American people for Schley. His words after the naval battle off Santiago "There is glory enough for all" are immortalized.

The average man is happy if he can gain the affections of one girl. What, then, must be the elysian bliss of J. H. Brown, the manager of a cigar factory, recently discharged, on account of affection for whom 1200 girls strike, demanding as a condition, precedent to their return to work, his reinstatement!

The Ladies' Home Journal has abolished its entire exchange list, and in so doing says "to the office of no newspaper or periodical will a 'free' copy of the Ladies' Home Journal be sent hereafter." The Journal is adding insult to injury. Free copy? The writer is sure the Journal has been well paid in advertising for the copies that have come this way.

The wiley Japanese are not to be outdone by American commercial ingenuity. Eleven Japanese steamship companies have pooled their interests, forming a shipping trust. Oriental advices say that the decision of the vessel owners to combine was hastened by the formation of the J. P. Morgan Atlantic shipping trust. Japanese ship owners are desirious of maintaining Japan's merchant fleet as the greatest fleet in Oriental waters. Fearing that the Atlantic combine would gradually seek to control shipping to Asiatic ports, they thought best to prepare for competition by organizing a trust on similar lines.

The Republicans of Red Lake county are very well pleased with the political situation.

Harry Sanders, of the Roseau Region, tells in his last issue of the visits to his city of both Grindeland and Steenerson, the latter while there making the first announcement of his candidacy, the former assuring the editor that he felt confident of being the nominee. Roseau county, with the memory of the visits of these two of the "Big Four" in the congressional race, feels that she is distinctly in it, and now calls on the other candidates to show up.

Cyrus Little Smith on Monday filed with the secretary of state his declaration as a candidate for the Republican congressional nomination in the ninth district. Mr. Smith was formerly editor of the Farmers' Tribune, and head of the State Horticultural association, and active as an organizer of republican clubs. Two years ago he contested with Hon. C. G. Rapp for the nomination for representative, and put up a hard fight. He is a very able man but has dropped into the political arena like a thunderbolt from a clear sky. Although it is not likely he will be nominated, we are of the opinion that he will get more votes at the primaries than is generally expected.

ECHOES OF THE EARTHQUAKE.

Earthquake shocks were felt at St. Augustine, Fla., May 21. The disturbance was almost continuous for three hours.

Thousands of refugees from Fort de France, Martinique, have arrived at Point-a-Pitre, island of Guadeloupe. The majority of them are in a pitiable condition.

Another great eruption of Soufriere volcano on the island of St. Vincent occurred on May 19. Great fiery clouds were visible at Kingstown, the capital, and the people were panic stricken.

It is reported that a new crater is forming on Ajoupa Bouillon, which lies on the mountain opposite to St. Pierre, with its northern face toward the Atlantic. A huge fissure is said to have opened there, which is vomiting gases and volcanic matter similar to those thrown out from the crater at the summit.

A severe inundation at Basse Pointe, on the northeast coast of the island of Martinique, on May 20, swept away 20 houses, and 50 other buildings were damaged by the flowing mud, which has swept over the Vallee de la Riviere. There was no further loss of life, Basse Pointe having been abandoned several days ago.

The recent rains of ashes and volcanic rocks which have fallen at Fort de France, caused so much consternation among the inhabitants of Fort de France that those who have not left that city are anxious to do so, and large numbers are emigrating to the island of Guadeloupe, where, it is now estimated, 1,200 people from Martinique have already sought shelter.

At 5:30 a. m., May 20, a thick, heavy cloud, lit up by flashes of lightning and the rising sun, rose from Mont Pelee. The people of Fort de France at once became panic stricken and in scant attire rushed excitedly through the streets of the town. Stones from the volcano as big as hazel nuts fell in the streets. Many of the inhabitants hurriedly embarked on the vessels in the harbor, and it was with difficulty that they were eventually reassured. The phenomenon was similar to the eruption of Thursday, May 8, but not so severe.

The second eruption of Mont Pelee on May 19 was very severe. Colossal columns of volcanic matter were ejected from the volcano, which rained huge red hot boulders, many feet in diameter, on the ruins of St. Pierre and the country near it from an enormous elevation and with fearful velocity. The volcanic clouds advanced until they reached Fort de France. The spectacle was appalling and beyond description. The whole population of Fort de France was thrown into a frenzy of panic. The United States special steamer Potomac went to investigate matters and found that St. Pierre had been bombarded with enormous stones from the volcano and that the ruins left standing after the first great disaster had been nearly razed. Millions of tons of ashes then covered the ruined city.

There is every reason to believe that peace in South Africa is practically assured. Which said mortgage, together with the debts secured thereby, including taxes paid by the mortgagee, was duly assigned by May Buse, to M. O. Sortedahl, by written assignment dated July 31st, 1900, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, on December 9th, 1901, at 4:15 o'clock p. m., in Book "T" of Mortgages, on page 91, and which said mortgage, together with the debts secured thereby, including taxes paid by the mortgagee and the assignee under the mortgagee, was again assigned by the said M. O. Sortedahl, to Ernest Buse, by a written assignment dated March 3rd, 1902, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota on April 10th, 1902, 3:30 o'clock p. m., in Book "S" of Mortgages, on page 2 2 to-wit:

Lots one (1), two (2), three (3), four (4) and five (5) in blk three (3) of Railroad addition to Red Lake Falls, according to the official plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the said county of Red Lake and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one hundred and ninety-five dollars with interest thereon at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, payable annually, on the 4th day of June in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note and interest coupon notes thereto attached, by failure to pay the annual interest falling due on the 4th day of June 1901 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said realestate for the years 1897, 1898, 1899 and 1900, and whereas the said assignee of the mortgagee, by virtue of the power contained the said mortgage, paid to the County Treasurer of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, the following taxes, duly levied and assessed by the said county against the land described in the said mortgage, and were due and delinquent at the dates when said payment were made, to wit: On July 31st, 1900, paid $9.49 taxes for the years of 1897, 1898 and 1899; on April 10th, 1902, paid $3.86 taxes for the year 1900, in all the sum of $13.35 and with interest amounting to $15.41.

And whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay any part of said interest, when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said realestate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable; and whereas said mortgage also provides that if such taxes are not so paid the holder of said mortgage may elect to pay the same and be entitled to interest on the same at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum and said mortgage stands as security for the amount so paid, with interest.

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon and to the date thereof and for said amount paid for taxes and interest thereon the sum of two hundred and forty 33-100 dollars.

And whereas, because of said defaults and of each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the front door of the Court House in Red Lake Falls, in said County, on Saturday the 31st day of May 1902 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the Attorney's fees of $35.00, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

We hope that Mr. Boraas will find a new field to work in where troubles are less, and where there may be a few more happy days in store for him.

The time is now at hand when we should be at that much needed road work. Let all hands join and let something be done. There has been evidences enough this spring to prove that poor roads don't pay. It is a disgrace to this part of the country to have roads in such shape. With a little work we could have passable roads. Let our worthy townsmen do there duty in this matter now and don't forget to give it an early start.

In words we can scarcely attempt to express our gratitude to the welcome summer that now stands before us. It seems as if we scarcely knew that we were in the strife as we stand bewildered, gazing at the wonderful work of nature. What a thrill of joy, what a pleasure, we are enjoying. But let us not forget to appreciate the beautiful days of summer, while beauty greets us everywhere.

Corn Fodder Growing.

Two things must be considered in growing corn fodder—the supply of moisture for the crop and the harvesting. The enormous growth which the corn makes demands a large amount of water. When corn is sown broadcast, unless it is very scantily sown, there is more corn on the land than there will be moisture to supply it, as each pound of corn-stalks requires between 300 and 500 pounds of water to grow it. The result is that the crop is stunted and does not reach a proper size. For this reason the crop should usually be sown in rows 3½ft. apart, and cultivated one way. The cultivation keeps out weeds and further increases the supply of moisture by checking evaporation from the surface, which goes on most rapidly from a hard crust. The labor is well repaid by the improved crop. If sown in rows a bushel of seed should sow an acre, if the seed is about an inch apart in the row.

Almost any soil will grow good corn fodder. It may be sown on new land, and can be plowed under in breaking, if not covered more than 3 or 4 inches. Or it can be sown in furrows, as for potatoes, and covered with a harrow, or put in with a garden drill. At the Experiment Farm the crop is sown with a grain drill by stopping all but three tubes. It is sown about June 1 and is ready to cut about September 1, or when the lower leaves begin to wither. The advantage of sowing in drills is found in the greater ease with which the corn is cut and shocked. No attempt should be made to stack the fodder or store it in a loft. The bundles will cure if kept on end, and a single tier can be stood up in a barn loft, but they usually spoil if piled one on another. They may usually be left in the field in shocks and hauled up as needed.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Like a Drowning Man.

"Five years ago a disease the doctors called dyspepsia took such hold of me that I could hardly go," writes Geo. S. March, well-known attorney of Nocona, Tex. "I took quantities of pepsin and other medicines but nothing helped me. As a drowning man grabs at a straw I grabbed at Kodol. I felt an improvement at once and after a few bottles am sound and well." Kodol is the only preparation which exactly reproduces the natural digestive juices and consequently is the only one which digests any good food and cures any form of stomach trouble. W. A. HUNTING THE GORILLA.

An Animal West Africans Say Has the Soul of a Man.

Gorilla hunting is a distinct sensation even for the veteran hunter. This animal, which has become confused somewhat with fable and fiction, is a reality and a decidedly unpleasant one to engage. The west Africans are mortally afraid of it, believing that the brute contains the spirit of a man. They attribute to it all sorts of ferocities, like the carrying off of a human being, who is permitted to return after being deprived of toe and finger nails.

"Skilled hunters have never observed any of these doings, but they testify to the brute's strength and ferocity," says Allen Sangree in Ainslee's. "According to a French sportsman, a full grown gorilla can bite through a tree six inches thick in order to secure the sap and twist a gun barrel with the swollen bunches of muscle that serve for arms. His roar is terrifying and can be heard for a distance of three miles.

"'I shall never forget how the first one impressed me,' says the Frenchman, 'for I had a bad attack of shakes. The woods had been filled some time with a barking roar, but I saw nothing until my guide clucked softly and pointed to a tree alongside which stood an immense male gorilla. There he remained but twelve yards away, boldly facing us with his huge chest, muscular arms, fiercely glaring deep gray eyes and a hellish expression, until I moved.

"'At that he dropped to all fours and came six yards nearer, sitting up to beat his breasts with his huge fists—a defiance—so that it sounded like an immense drum. His roar was most singular, beginning with a kind of bark and deepening into a bass roll that literally resembled thunder. The short hair on his forehead was twitching, his powerful fangs showed unpleasantly, and, feeling he was about to attack and incidentally being scared green, I shot him through the heart. With a groan something human and yet brutish, he fell on his face and died quickly, like a man. He measured 5 feet 9 inches in length, his chest was 62 inches, and his arms spread 9 feet. I was glad to have the specimen, but somehow after that never cared to kill a gorilla unless he actually menaced me.'"

Wants Others to Know.

"I have used DeWitt's Little Early Risers for constipation and torpid liver and they are all right. I am glad to indorse them for I think when we find a good thing we ought to let others know it," writes Alfred Heinge, Quincy, Ill. They never gripe or distress. Sure, safe pills. W. A. Schreiter, A. A BRILLIANT PROGRAM RENDERED AT THE OPERA HOUSE SATURDAY EVENING

The commencement exercises of the High School graduating class at the Opera house Saturday evening drew an immense audience. All the seats were filled early, and there was standing room only for many late arrivals. The opera house was decorated with the class colors, purple and yellow, while American flags, ferns and palms were arranged artistically on the stage. Above the stage, the class motto "Possum Quia Volo" stood out prominently.

The program was opened with a selection from the city band, at the conclusion of which the graduates filed out to take their places in a semicircle on the stage. The girls wore white, carrying roses and carnations, while the one boy graduate was attired in a black suit. Supt. Whiteley, the High School teachers, Misses Lusby and Wyman, and A. P. Toupin and Thos. Crumpe, members of the board of education, also occupied seats on the stage.

The full program as rendered is given below:

The musical numbers by the city band were among the best in the large repertory of this efficient organization. After the principals had taken seats on the stage, the Rev Walker delivered a brief prayer. Leland Healy, salutatorian, stepped forward, and delivered the salutatory and oration. He was in good voice, and while the audience had pinnacled its expectations, no one was disappointed. The subject of his oration was "Constitutional Government in England." It was delivered with his accustomed force and effect and was as instructive as it was interesting.

"The Philosophy of Competition" by Anna Sutter was one of the best essays delivered, abounding in thought and inspiration. To have heard it is to have the sense of worthy ambition whetted.

Catherine Elizabeth Pirath chose as her subject "Opening Plain Paths." She showed how the little every days offer unlimited opportunities for doing good by the cheery smile and helpful hand.

Olive Eugenie Philion's thesis "The New American Aristocracy" was a choice bit of sarcasm that would foster the spirit of Americanism in any of her hearers.

A great subject—Cecil Rhodes—was ably and entertainingly handled by Henrietta Marguret Hennemuth. This was one of the best and most interesting of the essays.

A history of "The Passion Play at Oberammergau" was given by Bertha Leonie LaFreniere, and the subject which was splendidly handled, had added interest on account of the entertainment in prospect at St. Joseph's church Monday evening.

"The Decline of the Old Guard" by Rachel Jane Taylor, was a Grand Army of the Republic idyl. Miss Taylor is a distinguished writer and a speaker of marked ability. It would be hard to overpraise her eloquence and the beauty of her composition. Her effort would have done credit to the most schooled public speaker.

Next in order was a masterpiece by Eleanor Lilian Findelsen. Miss Findelsen is nothing less than phenomenal, when her age is considered. She has the ability to scale almost any heights in the field of female oratory, and her effort Saturday night was one of the star features of a brilliant galaxy of eloquence, wit and wisdom.

Pauline Nielund, whose talents as a reader are marked, chose the subject prompted by her poetic soul, "The Glories of the Golden-Rod." It was full of sweetness, and the audience manifested its appreciation in an unmistakeable way. Miss Nieland has rare gifts, too, as a dramatic speaker, although her subject did not permit of a display of that fire that is so fascinating a part of her manner of speaking when she "lets herself out."

Catherine Martha Berthiaume then delivered first, a sweetly appropriate essay on "A Fantasy of Melody" wherein she pictured the power for good of music; then stepping forward, she gave the valedictory, touchingly referring to the class association, and to the work of the teachers in "whose hands we were as plastic clay." The words were as a frame for the beautiful picture as the class and the teachers sat together for perhaps the last time. All felt the sentiment of the occasion, so aptly expressed by the gifted valedictorian.

Supt. F. A. Whiteley then presented the diplomas, preceding this ceremonial with a few well chosen remarks. On the whole the event was an inspiring one, and while the commencement exercises may be said to be particularly for the good of the graduates, still the benefits are by no means confined to them, but are shared by the audience.

CLASS NIGHT.

The "class night" exercises were held in the High School assembly room Friday night. The room was not large enough to accommodate all who would like to have attended, to get the benefit of the fine entertainment afforded. The program was full of snap, salt and vinegar, and there was plenty of fun. The arrows of witticism often hit the bulls eye, but there is always an allowance for the class night license, so that everything is taken in the spirit of friendliness, as it should be. There were many good papers, in fact the whole entertainment, warp and woof, was one of superlative excellence, and the large audience went away delighted to the point of enthusiasm.

The Class Prophecy as read by Rachel Jane Taylor, a member of the class, is given below:

Woe! Woe! That is my portion, for to me is given the power to read the future of every face I meet. To the world I seem only a school-girl, but within my breast lies hidden a fountain from which bubbles the knowledge of what is to come. Odd indeed are the webs of life and unequally distributed are the goods of this earth; one day I am happy, for I live in the future of those whose byways are strewn with roses. The next day I am broken hearted for I survey faces in which I see only sorrow, trouble and bitter regrets.

Today I am not only happy but proud to be called upon to read the fate of the class of 1902. Upon good authority, this class has been declared the most brilliant class that has ever graduated or ever will graduate from the Red Lake Falls High School.

They have had their heads examined by Dr. Watson (unimpeachable authority) and he said "Never has so talented a class come under my inspection. Still, let me think. Back in 1901 when the first class graduated from this school, I tested their knowledge humps and found them excellent: but pshaw, they couldn't hold a candle to this class."

One could not blame the doctor for his enthusiasm, for the teachers themselves have been surprised and almost stunned by their mastery of subjects. Most any day after a recitation in Cicero one might hear their Latin teacher murmur "Mirabile dictu! Mirabile dicto!"

Katie Berthiaume. I see the city of Red Lake Falls a large city; this school house replaced by another, twice its size: a large, brick building, abounding in recitation rooms, laboratories and halls. Above the entrance was the sign "High School" and there was not a small l in the word High School, either. Katie, an old maid of forty, has been principal for 15 years. She bears the same saintly expression in her large brown eyes as formerly, and her coal black hair streaked with silver lends but an added gentleness to her sweet face toward which her pupils gaze with their souls in their eyes. Thus will she always be employed, teaching, doing good always, an example of Faith, Love and Charity, but so modest and reserved that her left hand will not know what her left hand doeth.

Bertha LaFreniere. Hers is a brilliant future. I see her the wife of a French nobleman, entertaining in a sumptuous home. She is a favorite at Paris and a model of grace and fashion. Her carriage and manners are copied by all women both in Europe and America. Many will be her social conquests, and her wit will be the envy of the cream of the French court.

Eleanor Findeisen. Behold a magnificant street in the city of Chicago. A house, the grandest on that street comes distinctly to my view. I seem to be going up the large stone steps. I have passed through elegantly furnished rooms and I am looking into a sanctum. A light haired lady sits at a desk writing. She seemed intensely interested. A side door has opened, and a tall, stern looking man enters quietly His sterness gives place to a pleasant smile of greeting; but listen! she said: "Oh, don't bother me now, I must finish this article on Women's Rights," and he went out as meekly as a lamb, saying, "All right Dear."

Catherine Pirath. An expansive lawn shaded by trees and dotted with children proves to me that here is a kindergarden. A large two story building with rambling Ls stands in the background. Above the door is a sign and it reads, "Catherine Pirath, Home for Homeless Children." As a lover of children and also an instructress she will remain until gray hair and old age will force her to cease her cherished work, and sit in her rocker by the hearth and live in the past.

Henrietta Hennemuth. The scene that crosses my vision is German. I see a German castle situated on the River Rhine. Behind high walls a ponderous door is opened by a servant in festal array. A typical German wedding party comes down the broad stairs and are entering a room decorated with flowers. The bride, even though dressed in the height of German fashion, I recognize as Henrietta. By her side walks her husband. He is a prince of her native land, a tall young man with a blonde mustache. Giddy in their new happiness they begin to dance a waltz to the tune of "Ach du Lieber Augustine."

Olive Philion. Her future will be just a continuation of her modest past. Dressed in black with a white cap and apron she will make nursing her life work. Many an aching head will be eased by her gentle touch, and many a lonely day made pleasant by her cheerful words and cheerier smile as she passes from one white cot to another.

Anna Sutter. One of the grandest sights at the exposition at St. Louis is the exhibit of art. The coridors and halls are filled with the most beautiful statues, the handiwork of modern artists. I pass one after another and wonder that human hands can portray such loveliness. I come to the end of the coridor where there is an ante room, which is enclosed by curtains of rich hue that add to the artistic effect of the whole On the arch of the entrance is engraved "The Temple of Venus." I part the curtains and quietly enter the abode of the goddess. Before me is a statue of Venus herself, beautiful in symmetry of form and outline. The pose is perfect, and as I step forward to examine more closely, the reverence inspired by this sacred dwelling is overcome by surprise at the familiar lines of the face, for in it I recognize the features of my old friend and class-mate, Anna Sutter. She will gain a world-wide reputation in posing for artists.

Leland Healy. I see an excited audience applauding a noted musician, who stands on a stage, bowing his thanks and dodging bouquets which are thrown by bevies of beautiful women. Above him is the ghost of Paderewski, green with jealousy. "I was great, but nothing in comparison to him." Flushed with his success in America, he, accompanied by his wife, goes abroad, but in London the name of Leland Healy is strange. Our American artist fails of appreciation. Undaunted, he will travel through France; but there, too, their sense of high art is dulled, and he fails to draw. Discouraged, financially embarrassed, he will give way under the strain of disappointment and worry. For eight months he will toss on a bed of pain; but faithful Agnes will be ever at his side to help and cheer and nurse him back to life. Having within him the soul of music he can think of no other career, and the last glimpse I have of him he is standing on a street corner in Rome, turning a hand organ and amusing the crowd with a monkey, who passed the hat.

Pauline Nieland. The scene is changed. Pauline, forgetful of self, will decide to be a missionary. She will become the wife of a minister to labor in the mission fields of Africa. The hot sun will not discourage, nor the thick heads of the natives disgust her. For fifteen years the minister and his wife will toil in the torrid heat. Reports are brought that they are eaten by cannibals, but these are false, for I see them passing a tranquil, happy life in Canada, whence they go after their return from Africa.

Rachel Taylor. After I expound my own future you will not wonder at my despondent nature. Imagine a large building in the suburbs of a great city. The barred windows are sufficient evidence that here is the home of the insane. On the steps stands a figure with disheveled hair, pale cheeks and blank, staring eyes, wringing her hands and wailing, "I'm to blame, I'm to blame, I lost the Moorhead debate."

STRIKE OF STILLWATER LUMBER MILL EMPLOYES ENDS IN VICTORY FOR MEN.

Sensational Evidence in a Minneapolis Police Official's Trial—President Hill to Retire From Head of the Great Northern—Little Falls Electric Light Plant Sold—News of the State in General.

Stillwater, Minn., May 31.—The strike among the mill men and others employed in the St. Croix logging and lumber industries was settled tonight and the 1,800 men who have been idle during the past week will return to work at once.

The men made a demand for a 10-hour day at the same wages as they were receiving for an 11-hour day and the employers have agreed to grant the desired concession.

Committees representing the business interests of Stillwater appeared before the strikers and their employers this morning in an attempt to secure a settlement of the strike. The committeemen urged upon the employers that thousands of dollars worth of business was being diverted from Stillwater each day on account of the strike.

The lumbermen agreed to meet with committees from their various crews and after a conference tonight voted to accede to the request made by the men.

FOR THE "OLD MAN."

Sensational Testimony in the Minneapolis Bribery Case.

Minneapolis, June 2.—In the trial of Special Officer Gardner, charged with accepting a bribe, "Billy" Edwards, head of the local "big mitt" industry, testified that he and "Link" Crossman paid Gardner $200 on one occasion and $500 on another and that Gardner had told them the money was for Mayor A. A. Ames. He swore that Gardner had said the mayor would have to have $100 a week in consideration of permitting the big mitt joint to remain open.

At the time the conversation was held Mayor Ames was absent from the city on a hunting trip. Gardner is said to have explained this to Edwards and to have added:

"It would be a good thing for you fellows to pay a thousand down and have it ready by the time the old men comes back."

In addition Edwards testified that the proposition included a further payment of $50 a week to Christopher Norbeck, now under indictment, and to Gardner himself. In return for the payments Edwards and the men interested with him were to be guaranteed police protection, although Gardner told them that he would not give them a receipt for their money.

HILL ABOUT TO RETIRE.

Magnate's Son Will Become President of Great Northern.

St. Paul, May 31.—It is learned from an authoritative source that the long-looked-for retirement of James J. Hill from the presidency of the Great Northern will take place not later than July 1, the close of the present fiscal year. He will then devote his time and attention to affairs of the merger company as long as it may last.

From the same authority comes the news that he will be succeeded as president of the Great Northern by his son, Louis W. Hill, who was president of the Eastern Minnesota up to May 1, when that property was absorbed by the Great Northern.

Last fall the latter was also appointed assistant to his father in the presidency of the Great Northern. This, it is said now, was done in order that he might receive proper instruction for the presidency which is to come this summer and that he may step into that position with a broad conception of its duties.

BUYS LIGHT AND WATER PLANT.

Little Falls Property in Control of Pittsburg Men.

Little Falls, Minn., May 31.—Benjamin H. Warren of Pittsburg was in the city and the transaction was completed by which he becomes owner of a majority of the stock of the Little Falls Electric and Water company, and takes possession of the plant. Mr. Warren was granted a city franchise for an electric railroad last fall, and the plans for the construction of the city lines and the extensions of freight and passenger lines into farming districts. The work of erecting a power station was delayed, as negotiations were in progress for the purchase of the electric and water plant. The plant will be enlarged and more water wheels and dynamos added. This power plant is not on the canal, but takes the water direct from the pond.

Well Digger Blown to Atoms.

Graceville, Minn., May 29.—While Henry W. Mayers, a tubular well driller, and his man were engaged in putting in a well on M. C. Keating's farm, east of town, they had occasion to use dynamite. While preparing the charge it exploded in some unknown way, blowing Mr. Mayers to pieces and almost killing his assistant, who lies at the point of death.

Cut in Lumber Rates.

St. Paul, May 30.—The Burlington, Northwestern, Milwaukee and Great Western roads have announced for immediate application an 8-cent rate on Pacific coast lumber from Minnesota Transfer to Chicago. This is a reduction from the 10-cent rate so long in effect and which some of the Minneapolis-Chicago lines repeatedly refused to cut down.

Woman Surveyor General of Logs.

St. Paul, May 28.—Governor Van Sant has appointed Mrs. G. Fred Stevens to the position of surveyor general of logs to fill the unexpired term of her late husband. This is the first time such an office has been held by a woman, but state officials are agreed that it was a gracious thing for the governor to do in making the appointment.

WILL BE OUT $10,000.

Good Fellowship of the Minneapolis Clerk of Courts Proves Costly.

St. Paul, May 30.—Under a decision of the state supreme court Courtland N. Dickey, the clerk of courts for Hennepin county, will have to pay to the county, out of his own pocket, an amount in the neighborhood of $10,000, which is in the nature of a penalty for being of a too obliging disposition.

The decision makes Mr. Dickey liable for all the fees he has collected or should have collected during the past six years. The county commissioners appealed from the decision of the district court in Dickey's favor, and a new trial was ordered, together with an opinion holding Dickey liable for the amount.

It seems that Mr. Dickey was in the habit of accommodating his friends by making no charge for the work which was slight. The court holds that this was allowable when the office was on a fee basis, but that since it has been placed on a salary basis it becomes the clerk's duty to charge for all services performed.

MINNESOTA PIONEERS.

Old Settlers of Morrison and Adjoining Counties Meet.

Royalton, Minn., May 31.—The Old Settlers' association of Morrison and adjoining counties met here today. Those who have lived in Minnesota for 40 years or more are eligible to membership. There was a goodly attendance and the sessions have been very interesting. Nathan Richardson, the founder of the association and its president, is here. He is now over 73 years of age and has been a resident of the state since 1855.

One feature of today's meeting was the golden wedding anniversary of R. D. Kinney and wife, who came to Minnesota in 1851. He was the first school teacher in Morrison county, teaching at Fort Ripley in 1851-52.

ROOSEVELT IS WARNED.

War With European Countries Is Now Threatened.

Duluth, May 31.—Dr. A. Ecker of Duluth, who claimed to have foretold the assassination of President McKinley, has given out another prophecy.

He has addressed a letter to President Roosevelt, warning him to prepare for war with the European powers. Dr. Ecker always has regretted that he did not warn McKinley, and says that the only reason he did not was because the assassination was a foregone conclusion and that it was useless to attempt to prevent it. In this case, however, he feels that it is his duty to at least submit the warning to the president.

HIS DEATH DREAM TRUE.

Jerome Harrington, Eighty Years Old, Dies From Injuries.

Rochester, Minn., May 31.—Jerome Harrington of Byron died today from the effects of a fall as he was alighting from a train last evening. He was over 80 years of age and was one of the earliest settlers of this region, coming here in 1852. He had a presentiment of his death and said yesterday he would never live to see another Memorial day.

A Duluth Pioneer Passes Away.

Duluth, June 2.—Judge John Dunphy, with one exception the earliest settler at the Head of the Lakes and for many years a prominent citizen of Duluth, died here, aged 88 years. He settled here in the year 1855. A family of six grown children survive Judge Dunphy. There are three sons—James, John P. and Carl—and three daughters—Katie, who is teaching school in the City of Mexico; Julia, living at home, and Angele, a teacher in the West Superior public schools.

State Loses Second Whisky Case.

St. Paul, May 29.—The Minnesota dairy and food department has received a severe setback in its crusade against tanglefoot whisky. It began this crusade in Duluth, where the Bowery whisky is said to be of record-breaking quality, and it was successful in its first case. It lost its second case however. Charles Carlson, a Bowery saloonkeeper was prosecuted for selling adulterated whisky, but the case was dismissed owing to a flaw in the complaint.

Duluth Physician Disappears.

Duluth, May 30.—Dr. Thomas H. Storey, a prominent physician, disappeared from this city May 15, leaving word to his wife that he had been "called away suddenly." The day he left he borrowed a grip from a friend and drew over $1,100 from a bank where he had it on deposit. It is believed he went to Seattle, Wash., as word was received that he was there. Every effort to locate him there has failed. No cause for his leaving is known.

Secures Terminal Property.

Duluth, May 28.—The Northern Pacific Railway company has purchased the trackage and terminal property of the Duluth Transfer company for a consideration of $550,000. The purchase includes 22 miles of trackage. The property was recently sold under mortgage and was bought in by the bondholders for $500,000 at auction sale.

Minnesota District Attorney.

Washington, May 28.—The president has sent to the senate the nomination of Charles C. Haupt to be United States attorney for the district of Minnesota.

A RUNAWAY TRAIN.

One Man Killed and Ten Cars Wrecked Near Deadwood, S. D.

Deadwood, S. D., June 2.—A runaway train made a terrific run from Englewood down the 8-mile slope toward this city and the 10 cars piled up on top of one another in a ditch near Pluma. One man was killed and two others seriously injured. The dead man is Charles Freeman, an employe of the Burlington and Missouri River railroad at Englewood. When the train reached Kirk Station the engineer lost control and it came on toward Deadwood at a 70-mile clip, gaining speed at every moment. At Pluma it struck a safety switch and the 10 cars filled with coke were hurled into a ditch. The main line and that of the Deadwood Central were blocked for several hours.

Elsie, "and now I did that, heaven may know. Suddenly he seemed to see it and then, honestly, I had no opportunity to deny it. I didn't speak a word in two hours. Mr. Alden talked for both of us, making my arguments for me and then answering them without the faintest perception that they weren't really mine at all. In fact, he was like a big boy, so carried away with his own idea that all the world seemed to be rushing along in the way he wished. It was only when he talked about sending me a lot of money to buy wedding clothes that I managed to make myself heard, and even then he thought that my objection was altogether to the money and not to the wedding. Remember that I was not much calmer than he, and you will have some idea of the confusion. Oh, Brenda, how can I talk to you like this? And you don't seem to care in the least. Are we all crazy together?"

"Some of us have been so perhaps," said Brenda, "but this morning I think we are all particularly sane."

"It was wrong, of course, to let him come to see me," Elsie continued. "But it must end soon, and it was so little, and you would have so much. You know in those days I hated you, envied you, lay awake at night to think bitter thoughts about you, with your beauty and position and luxury! Oh, I saw you! I walked up and down in front of your house for an hour one day until you came out and got into your carriage. And I wished the horses would run away with you, and just as the thought flashed into my mind one of them began to prance, and I actually prayed out loud, because I was so afraid he really would run, after I had wished it."

The rhetorical value of this speech was somewhat marred by the circumstance that Elsie's face was being washed while it was delivered. Having rendered this service, Brenda began to arrange her patient's hair.

"I felt so small and shabby outside your house," said Elsie. "You can't have any idea of it. Fancy that mansion full of servants, all yours, and there was I who was in need of shoes. I don't mean to say they were full of holes or anything like that, but they didn't look very nice, and I couldn't afford to buy a new pair, for I was saving every penny. My mother and I have a little income, and I was down to that, for I hadn't had an engagement since February. I suppose you never wasted your time thinking about me—after you knew there was such a girl."

"I never knew there was such a girl," replied Brenda, "until I saw you in this room. The girl I thought about never existed. And now let me say this: There is no rivalry between us. There are matches so manifestly made in heaven that even a woman's jealousy must admit the divine sanction. So don't think of 'sparing my feelings,' as my New England aunt expresses it, or 'being polite,' to use your own phrase for the same idea. You and Mr. Alden were made for each other. If I had been writing a book or a play I might have tried to create two people so perfectly reciprocal. The way is made smooth for me to be a friend to both of you."

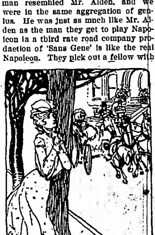
Elsie turned her head suddenly and kissed Brenda's hand. Then she relapsed into thought which culminated in her saying:

"You couldn't have loved him. I ought not to say that, of course, but it's true. Divine sanction hasn't anything to do with jealousy. They don't come from the same locality. I have always been jealous whenever I have been in love."

She looked up out of the corner of her eye to catch the effect of the shock.

"Whenever you have been in love!" cried Brenda. "I hope it hasn't happened often."

"Well, not so very often," replied Elsie. "I remember being in love with an actor once for as much as two weeks. You spoke about putting Mr. Alden and me into a play. Well, this man resembled Mr. Alden, and we were in the same aggregation of genius. He was just as much like Mr. Alden as the man they get to play Napoleon in a third rate road company production of 'Sans Gene' is like the real Napoleon. They pick out a fellow with the right kind of nose. However, I loved him with a consuming ardor. I remember leaning out of a window of a fierce little hotel in a jay town in the west to watch him sitting on a fence in the moonlight, smoking a cigar after the show. I imagined that he might be thinking of me. By and by another fellow in the company came along and asked him if he was enjoying the moon. And my idol said: 'To—somewhere—with the moon. I was waiting for you to buy me a drink.' It wasn't very bad, but it was coarse, and I didn't love him any more after that, and as he had never taken the slightest notice of me the romance was not serious except that I caught an awful cold leaning out of that window. Now, why did I tell you that story, Brenda?"



"I was so afraid"

"Because it is amusing, I suppose," said Brenda, surprised by the question.

"Because at that time I was not quite 17 years old," said Elsie, "and I was traveling around the country alone. My mother was not strong enough to go with me, and we both needed money very badly."

While Brenda was striving to grasp the full meaning of this, being well assured that Elsie spoke with a definite purpose, there came a rap at the door, announcing the morning visit of Dr. Kendall. Brenda was sufficiently and very becomingly attired, and not so much as a single shining thread of her hair showed the smallest disarray, yet she could not help feeling a sense of disadvantage. Having leaned upon the conventionalities quite steadily all her life she had come to need them, and Dr. Kendall was to her a young man whom she had met in society rather than a physician. She was surprised and a little ashamed to find that this was true.

As for Kendall, he was all doctor that morning. He had been detained from Elsie longer than he would have wished, and that strange thing which is a doctor's conscience was driving him hard. He wasted no time in words until he had satisfied himself about his patient. In the course of his investigation he discovered that Elsie still calmly believed that she would die of her wound, and this was the sole unfavorable symptom. It was the more remarkable because she had not at that time any sensations which a rational mind could attribute to the approach of dissolution. There was pain, of course, but it was not of the kind that depresses and frightens the sufferer.

The doctor spoke to her in the most encouraging words that he could command, but they seemed not to produce an adequate effect. Elsie said little upon the subject of death, but it was clear that her mind was fixed upon it.

"I must hurry away," said the doctor. "Mr. Alden is waiting in my room in a state of anxiety that I need not describe. I shall not only relieve that completely, but I shall tell him that he may see you this afternoon, five minutes precisely, and Miss Maclane will hold the watch."

"Tell him, please," said Elsie, "that I thank him very much for the violets; also that I received his message and that he must not think of it any more. You will remember? He must put it out of his mind."

Kendall glanced somewhat uneasily at Brenda as he repeated this singular message.

"I received from Mrs. Simmons," said he, "a telegram sent to her from your mother—that is, from one of the family. I haven't it here; must have left it in my room"—and he pretended to search his pockets. "It said that your mother was not quite well enough to start at once, and, in view of the encouraging telegrams sent last night, your relatives wouldn't let her come unless she was quite able to make the journey. Mrs. Simmons' message, sent immediately after you were hurt, was quite alarming, I'm afraid; but we have corrected all that."

"My mother is prostrated," said Elsie, her eyes filling with tears, "and I shall never see her again."

"I assure you that you will," replied Kendall earnestly, "and, by the way, here's a letter from her. It came this morning, I was told. There was no other mail for you."

"It's strange what has become of Mr. Alden's letter," said Elsie, "the one he mentioned in that note."

"Do you mean that you didn't receive it?" exclaimed Brenda.

Elsie shook her head.

"It didn't come," she said.

Kendall did not understand the significance of this, as he had no accurate knowledge of the contents of the note. He arose and moved toward the door, Brenda accompanying him.

"If you should chance to meet Mr. Elmendorf this morning," said she, "perhaps it would be better not to mention what you have just heard."

"About the letter?"

"Yes."

"I will not speak of it," said Kendall, "and as to the message which I shall take to Mr. Alden from Miss Miller, while of course I attach no sinister meaning to it, I shall take pains to forget it immediately."

"We cannot know what it is that she wishes him to put out of his mind," said Brenda. "Perhaps his love for her."

"We will take that view of it," replied Kendall.

At this moment a nurse came to take instructions about breakfast for Brenda and the patient, and she brought word that Mr. Maclane was in the reception room, very anxious to see his daughter.

CHAPTER XII.

NERVES AND HEARTS.

Duncan Maclane was a man whose aspect should have been dignified and impressive. It had been so—indeed still was—when his nerves were under control, but that was a rare condition in his latter days.

On the occasion of his morning call at St. Winifred's, while he waited for Brenda's appearance, it was to him as if his nervous system walked the floor unclothed in flesh or garments. This is the state which New England old ladies describe as "jumping out of your skin," and the phrase fits it nicely. Before Dr. Kendall took him out of the reception room to a more private place he was an object of sympathetic interest to several poor persons waiting there, for they supposed that he must have come near relative at the point of death in the institution.

His pockets and his hands were full of newspapers, and they were to a considerable extent accountable for his condition. The marvelous delineative power of the modern press had been exerted upon the mystery of Elsie Miller with a result which the young woman herself had but dimly foreseen when she had spoken of it as so absolutely horrible as to extinguish the virtue of politeness altogether. The story was told from fifty points of view, and ever the stately and beautiful figure of Brenda Maclane moved through it like a stage ghost, having a carefully wrought effect of intangibleness and transparency, yet steadfastly attended by the calcium light.

No one accused Brenda of the smallest wrong, no one ventured to identify her with the "mysterious woman" seen by Dr. Blair, yet with great cleverness the plot was so arranged that Brenda's figure in the ghostly light stood best displayed upon the very spot where the mysterious one seemed to have sunk out of sight as if into a grave.

"Brenda, my child, what shall we do?" exclaimed Mr. Maclane, and he extended toward his daughter two trembling hands that were full of newspapers.

"Do?" said Brenda. "About what?"

"The papers are crowded with it!" he groaned. "Look at this! Look at these pictures!"

"Well, I think this one is rather good of me," replied Brenda. "I wonder where they got the photograph. Oh, but see Mr. Alden! They've made him look like the pirate Kidd."

"You seem to take no serious view of this!" he cried.

"Father, why should we?" she replied earnestly. "Here is a dear little girl that has escaped a dreadful peril and I am so glad of it, so religiously, prayerfully glad of it, that this publicity affects me not the least."

"I think you have lost your wits, Brenda," said he. "Why, you're all mixed up in it. They practically accuse you of going to that house"—

"I did go there," replied Brenda.

"I mean before the deed—at the very moment of it"—

"Let me see," said Brenda, who was already scanning the reports. "I don't see anything here that isn't true. They are much fairer to Mr. Alden than I would have supposed. Let us read the reports calmly. Ah, so! This mention of my poor little romance might be somewhat trying to a sensitive nature, like my father's, which I fortunately did not inherit."

"The papers are crowded with it!" he groaned.

"This linking of your name with this woman's," he groaned, "is most unfortunate. She is continually referred to as an actress."

"She is one," said Brenda, "and, between ourselves, I think she must be exceptionally clever. I hope Clarence will not make her leave the stage yet until she has had a career of her own—a year or two before she effaces herself by marriage."

"It seems to me," said he, "that in trying to be fair to this woman, in trying to set aside all prejudice and natural resentment, you have gone to an absurd extreme upon the other side. You can never have anything in common with her. There can be no question of friendly relations"—

"But there can," replied Brenda. "Forgive me for contradicting my dear old father, who is always so worried about me and always so good to me. I shall make her my friend, if I can, and you will be glad when you know her."

Maclane raised his hands toward heaven, sprinkling the floor with fragments of newspapers as he did so. It was his usual gesture of defeat.

"And now," said Brenda, "to use your favorite expression, let's get down to business. I am here to take care of Miss Miller, and you will not ask me to desert her when you learn that Dr. Kendall says I am a wonderful nurse. By the way, you see I am in the very best society, for there can't be anything above the old Philadelphia Kendalls. However, to return to business, I see clearly enough where all this is tending. The papers speak only good of me this morning. Private gossip will scarcely know what to say for a day or two, but in the end, unless something is done to prevent it, I shall become identical with this mysterious woman and the actual object of suspicion. That, I admit, would be a misfortune, for if the case remains a mystery, as I think it may, I shall never be clear of the taint of it."

"But doesn't the girl know who did it?" demanded Maclane. "They hint that she is shielding some one, and you will find some very unpleasant things about Alden."

"He is entirely innocent," said Brenda. "Of course you know that as well as I do. The best thing for all of us is to establish the fact immediately that the crime was the work of a thief."

"But suppose it wasn't?"

"Then," said Brenda, "it must be made to appear so."

"I see what you mean," replied he, "and I will consult my lawyer about it. I have already discovered that he understands the police thoroughly. Perhaps something may be done by the use of plenty of money. Meanwhile I would like to be satisfied about Mr. Alden. It is not fair to you that he should conceal his defense, if he has one. The sooner the case is thoroughly cleared of that mystery the better for us."

"Reduced to a theft," said Brenda, "the papers will cease to print much about it."

"You are quite right," replied Mr. Maclane. "But my first move will be in Alden's direction. I must know where he stands, or there will be no safety for you in any line of action. If he is guilty, we must not appear as his accomplices after the fact."

"That is monstrous," insisted Brenda. "Do not consider it."

They spoke for some minutes of minor matters, turning over the papers together, while Brenda selected such portions as she thought that Dr. Kendall might permit Elsie to see. The sight of these stories with their abundant illustrations set Mr. Maclane's nerves on edge again, and he was in a most wretched frame of mind when he left the hospital.

It chanced that as he emerged from the structure he encountered Alden, who had just come from Kendall's room and was full of good will to all mankind as the result of the conversation with the doctor. He felt that Maclane had a just grievance against him, and he began at once a most earnest attempt to repair the injury. Maclane was relieved to find Alden in a pliant mood—the rarest of all his moods, by the way—and the two walked toward the avenue together in an atmosphere of cordiality such as surrounds sometimes the unfriendly victims of a common misfortune.

Upon arriving at his office Alden met Detective Elmendorf, with the result already disclosed. Profiting by the advice received in the course of this interview and by his memories of many stories of crimes, criminals and sleuthhounds of the law, Alden succeeded in eluding both the shadow of "trouble" and the shadow of "business," and his doings for an hour or two were wholly unknown to the police. At 3 o'clock he appeared at St. Winifred's hospital, where he was informed by Dr. Kendall that Elsie would receive him presently.

At that moment Elsie was confiding to Brenda her opinion that Mr. Alden would suffer a grievous disappointment.

"He won't expect to see me like this," she said. "I look like death's head on a handspike, as my cousin Billy says. Billy was in the naval reserves during the war and prevented the Spaniards from capturing New York, but that's another story. Brenda, if I should put on just a little bit of rouge— I don't want to frighten him."

"You don't want to think of rouge for ten years," replied Brenda. "And besides, my dear, you haven't any. Moreover, he won't know how you look; he will be too glad to see you alive."

"Of course you think I am very trivial and absurd," said Elsie, "but do you realize that he may not see me again? No one can know precisely how I am hurt. This wound may be nearer to a vital spot than Dr. Kendall suspects or will tell. A break of a wall as thin as paper, a little blood spilled here beneath my hand, and I am gone in a moment. Perhaps tonight; perhaps even while he sits here beside me. And this last sight of me will be the memory he will carry as long as he lives. I want it to blot out the face of every other girl that he will ever see."

"Then don't blot out your own with the contents of a rouge pot," said Brenda. "Hark! They are coming along the corridor."

She stepped to the door and ushered in Alden and Kendall.

Alden had the pale, set face of Nathan Hale going to execution. As often happens with a man too strenuously prepared, his eyes failed to focus, and he stared for a moment at Elsie without really seeing her. Had she been the wasted and pitiable object that his inexperience led him to expect he would probably have borne the sight of her with great fortitude, but when her face emerged from the mists of imperfect vision precisely Elsie's, with every well remembered attribute of beauty, it was an attack upon an unprotected spot in his de-

PEACE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The end of the unequal struggle has come. Was such struggle ever seen before by God or man? The outcome was a foregone conclusion, as easy to figure as two and two is four—and yet who will not heave a sigh akin to regret, notwithstanding the proclamation of the re-establishment of peace—that gift for the greatness of which the eloquence of Christ himself has spoken? While the powerful nation, Great Britain, was sending men and arms, spilling her blood and treasure in an apparently endless stream, the world looked on in wonder at the almost superhuman resistance offered by the Boers. 300,000 British pitted against the soldiers of a country whose total population scarce equaled in numbers the invading hosts. The war lasted from Oct. 11, 1899, until May 31, 1902.

The only hope for the Boers lay in the intervention of some great power, and this prospect was one the fulfillment of which perhaps might not have come had the Boers held out for a century or more. The tendency among the great nations is for peace—and the theory that the best gaurantee of peace is in the preparedness for war, no doubt is sound.

The Boer heart and not the head is what brought on this great war, in spite of the vast difference in power and equipment. But the head is a more important factor in the successes of to-day than the heart. Had the Boers realized this, and gotten rid of some of their pastoral and feudal ideas, placed themselves in touch with the commercial spirit of the world, instead of setting their faces in opposition to it, this war might not have come. Their supreme love of country, going to the extent of shutting out all ideas of allowing the Uitlanders a voice in the popular government, caused their remedial measures to be considered too restrictive by the Uitlanders, whose ambitions lay not so much in the path of patriotism as in the way of the quick acquisition of wealth. The Boers need not have lost their nationality by the assimilation of the incoming population—they might have lost their language, but that would have been the extent of their deprivation.

A sign of the political times is the announcement that ex-President Cleveland has decided to again enter active politics. He has accepted an invitation to speak at the opening of the new Tilden club, N. Y. on June 19. About 1,500 men prominent in the Democratic party have been invited. Among these expected are David B. Hill, William J. Ryan, Senator Bacon, of Georgia, Mayor Patrick A. Collins of Boston; John D. Milburn of Buffalo; Richard Olney, Dr. Felix Adler, Bonrke Cockran, William C. Whitney, Former Mayors Grace, Grant, Gilroy, Van Wyck, Hewitt, Cooper, Edson and Ely and Lewis Nixon. This is the first time that Mr. Cleveland has consented to address a political audience since his retirement from office. This, coupled with the fact that so many distinguished Democrats whose views on silver and other questions have been radically opposed to each other, are to be present, is pointed to as evidence that the occasion of the opening of the club means a direct effort to harmonize various discordant elements of the party.

Will some of our Scandinavian brethern tell us why Odin Halden is running around the woods these days with but an O. for a handle to his name?

The termination of war between Great Britain and the Boers marks another stride in the advancement of the English tongue as the world's speech.

Miss News and Comment of the Duluth News Tribune, woman like, has her preferences. One of 'em is the blonde statesman of Beltrami. As matters stand now, he is decidedly favored of the gods. For what cares he, win or lose, with this sweet consolation?

Adam Bede, candidate for the congressional nomination in the 8th district, has written his own biography as follows: "Myself and twin brother were born the same year on a farm in Ohio, and the civil war broke out and I was never born again. There were ten children in the family. My father was a Welchman, my mother a Yankee, and I am a candidate for congress. My education was acquired chiefly in cornfields, barn yards and print shops. I love cows and children. I have lived sixteen years in Minnesota, mostly at Duluth. Am married and have six good children who take after their mother. My father served in the Fifteenth Ohio battery during the war, and is sleeping in Arlington. My mother is living in Nebraska at a ripe old age. She is a good woman."

We commend to the careful consideration of readers interested in practical farming, the weekly articles published in The Gazette over the signature of Herman H Chapman. Prof. Chapman is an authority on these subjects treated, and his advice is sound, the result of experience. Our farmer readers will do well to carefully read and consider his articles. Prof Chapman is in charge of the North east State experimental farm at Grand Rapids, and the treatment of his topics is with a view to making them practical for agriculturalists in the northern part of the state. While Red Lake Falls is not situated in his territory, yet he has put The Gazette on his mailing list, and our readers are in a position to get the benefits of his enterprise, his technical knowledge and his valuable experience.

A good one is told on Bro. McKenzie, of the Crookston Times, who returned home last Sunday from a trip through the East, the little tale following him: It is related how upon entering Pittsburg, the smoky city perched up in the dense smoke like a falcon 'mong the clouds. the train down below was making its circuitous ascent around the hills. Night had fallen. The near approach to the station, and the consequent lull in the conversation, gave Bro. McKenzie the opportunity to ask for a solution of the phenomena which he beheld, as his puzzled gaze looked afar out and toward the city, where the moon could be seen dimly through the clouds of smoke. "Can anyone explain why the hands of the city clock" he said (pointing to the moon,) "persist in remaining invisible?" His associates looked at the moon, then at Bro. McKenzie, and the answer was read in their faces even before the roar of laughter rose on the evening air.

MOTHER'S CORNER

BY MOTHER KATHERINE

A Staff contributor, who will write of every day affairs—the little units that go to make up the sum total of existence. Mother Katherine writes exclusively for THE GAZETTE. She is a mother who presides over an ideal home. A letter addressed to her in care of The Gazette will reach her. She is worthy of confidence.

VACATION OCCUPATION

No doubt many of my readers are making plans for the summer months when there is no school, thus giving teacher and pupil alike time of rest. Many a young girl who is teaching sees those months approach with a sinking heart, not having a home to go to. If you are fortunate enough to have a home, go there and rest. There are always little things you can do for the home people that will help, not hinder the resting process. But for the girls who need to earn it is not so easy to plan.

The city in which I live contains girls and women who earn a nice snug sum of money. Perhaps a few words as to how they manage will help someone. One woman has sold extracts, vanilla, etc., for many years. She has regular customers and they wait for her, paying a good price for her ware BECAUSE IT IS OF SUCH A FINE QUALITY. She supplies many of the ladies in adjacent towns and is respected by all her customers. She also handles spices, soaps and polishes. She tells me there is a tonic in the work for her as it takes her into the open air. There are perhaps one half dozen women who make money at catering. They bake anything from bread to angles' food, and get a good round price for their wares, because, again, THEY ARE FIRST CLASS.

Then there are girls who stay with children evenings. Oh, too servile you say? Why I don't think so, for it is HONEST, and there is no way easier to earn a quarter than to spend a couple of hours in a pleasant home, while the babies sleep. When the mother wishes to spend the day away she gladly pays a dollar to the trustworthy young lady who will look after her flock until she returns.

Then there is mending at ten cents per hour. If you make it known that your services are to be had, that you will do your best, you can earn many a dollar and vacation will not mean simply a drain upon the precious dollars earned by trudging through many a winter storm.

Do not be afraid to advertise your calling thus: Miss Blank, mending done at 10 cents per hour. Miss Blank wishes to announce that she is prepared to stay with children any evening at 10 cents per hour.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

A VACATION STORY ABOUT TWO COLLEGE BOYS.

Last summer I chanced to be in a home where there was a college boy. He was just as brown, had just such wonderful muscles and had as many class honors as any college boy could wish. He was reading a letter and every few minutes he burst into a hearty ha! ha! Finally he said: "This is too good; you and mother must read this letter. Bill is such a clown"

Here is a part of the letter as well as I can remember: "It is hot in—is it? But in New York. Whew!" (Then a good picture of a fan followed.) "So you are washing dishes and doing the kitchen maid act? Shake." (A picture of two hands clasped followed.) "Imagine me, six feet two, bending over the kitchen sink, (a picture of a very tall man bending over a sink) and think of me running the wash machine, (illustrated most commically) and you know how I spend part of my time." Such a good laugh as we had. But those two mothers, how they must love their boys, knowing that the fine muscles are good for other things besides athletics. Those boys are the champion debaters in the literary society, yet they are not ashamed to tell that they are a help at home. You needn't be a girl boy even if you do help mother. God has given you such a fine, strong body, and you are proud of it. Use it to do good as well as to enjoy yourself, and see if you do not feel the better.

Within Ten Years
THE OCEAN WILL BE Crossed by Airships

By M. SANTOS-DUMONT

IT is a mistaken idea that there is any unusual danger in the flying machine. It is not as dangerous as the ordinary balloon. The airships that I use are as much under my control as any steam engine, except, of course, in case of storm.

I AM NOW PLANNING AN AIRSHIP THAT WILL CARRY FROM TEN TO TWENTY PASSENGERS. IT WILL BE THE FIRST PASSENGER AIRSHIP THAT HAS EVER BEEN BUILT ALONG THE DIRIGIBLE LINES.

I hope that as a result of the exhibition I am to give in St. Louis the enterprising and wealthy men of America will become so much interested as to push forward this great work. All that I have done heretofore has been at my own expense and without any assistance. WITH THE PROPER SORT OF ENCOURAGEMENT, SUCH AS THIS COUNTRY COULD GIVE, THE DESIRED GOAL WOULD BE BROUGHT MUCH NEARER. IN A WORD, WITHIN TEN YEARS WE WOULD HAVE TRANSATLANTIC AERIAL NAVIGATION.

Willing as I am to spend all my own fortune, you must understand that these races, which are no longer in the experimental stage, are most expensive.

It is here, it seems to me, in this land where things advance so rapidly, the greatest country in the world, that the matter might be taken up with all its magnificent possibilities.

WITHIN MY LIFETIME I EXPECT TO SEE AERIAL NAVIGATION BETWEEN AMERICA AND EUROPE A COMMON THING. AN AERIAL TRANSATLANTIC LINE FOR COMMERCIAL PURPOSES IS NOT A FAROFF POSSIBILITY.

The No. 7 machine, with which I will race here in America, is a heavier machine than the No. 6, and I expect that my experiments here will establish the commercial possibilities of aerial navigation, as the No. 7 will carry four passengers, whereas the No. 6 never used to carry more than one.

I have no patents on my inventions. Any one who wants to construct machines after the fashion of the Santos-Dumont machines is welcome to do so. I only wish that I could help others to build aerial ships so that the great day when it will be the principal means of traffic will not be delayed.

It is a fact that many good items are lost to newspapers every day by modesty of people who hesitate to tell the matter concerning themselves. The right thing to do is to stop the newspaper man on the street or any other place you happen to meet him and tell him you were away on a visit; that you have a friend visiting you; you entertained friends; that you are doing good. If you have done anything mean, of course, keep that to yourself, for there are others who will tell it.

Geo. Barth has patented a plow and grading machine that he expects will revolutionize the methods of farm plowing. The machine has a combination speeding and plowing action that is said to require less power than the regular plow. Mr. Barth is a farmer residing in Gervais township. His model has been on display in the city and those who have examined it believe it is feasible. The machine is calculated to be a sort of automobile plow, to be operated by a small gasoline engine carried on its platform, although he expects to have the machines built for both horse and gasoline power.

RED LAKE CO. SUMMER SCHOOL.

Will Open at Red Lake Falls, Minn., on Monday July 14.

To Teachers of Red Lake and adjoining counties.

The Red Lake County Summer School will begin its session on Monday, July 14, at 9 a. m. at the High School building in Red Lake Falls, and continue four weeks, with the following corps of instructors: Supt. P. L. Kuntz, of Owatonna, Minn., conductor and instructor in the higher branches and mathematics; Pres. J. C. Satre, of the Crookston Business College, instructor in the common branches and mathematics; Miss Lydia E. B. Fletcher, of Red Lake Falls, model school and instructor in English Literature; Frank Jeffers, County Superintendent Red Lake county, who will look after special lines of work. This being the third year for Conductor Kuntz, he will be able to do more for the teachers who attend and better adapt the work to their needs than at any prior session. We especially invite teachers from adjoining counties to spend these four weeks in Red Lake Falls and thus secure the benefits from attendance upon a first class school. Each of the faculty is especially adapted to the work in his particular line and will be in a position to do the most possible for those who attend.

It will be the aim of the school to so arrange the work and manage the session, that a general line of culture will result, and not only a specific kind of technical answers to special questions formulated by an expert. The session is expected to furnish ample provision for graded school teachers, as well as for those in the rural schools, and it is to be hoped that such teachers as are seeking for a more general culture and a higher appreciation of the profession will lend us their presence and participate in its benefits.

We shall endeavor to give a line of work in music if the teachers desire it, and classes in Algebra, Geometry, Science, etc., will be formed. The primary object of the course will be to get the most good from the session, and give as general an opportunity to take particular work as will seem to be justified. It will be the purpose to do well what is undertaken—look to quality rather than quantity.

Be present the first day and assist in organization of the school. There will be an afternoon session the first day in order to give all an opportunity to register and thus enable them to secure a certificate of perfect attendance. An evening lecture and such other additional lines of work as the school will justify will be made a part of the program. The last two days of the session will be given to the writing of the State Teachers' Examination and the review work of the school will be found especially beneficial to those who are intending to write this examination.

It is the desire of the County Superintendent that all third grade teachers attend and prepare to raise their standing, as the year of limitation has expired in a number of instances. We also wish that all teachers take an active interest in making this the largest and best summer school ever held in this section of the state.

Respectfully,
Frank Jeffers,
County Superintendent.

THE SOULS OF FLOWERS

Mingle in happy union in the exquisite perfumes we carry. Scents are as difficult to blend into harmony as sounds. It takes almost as high an order of ability to make true perfumes as is required to write good music.

No wonder so much of the perfume offered is rank, flat and unsatisfactory. If not wholly pleased with the odors you are now using, we would like to have you try some of the delightful ones we handle. Cost no more than poorer kinds.

Traveling Library.

It may not be known to many people in Minnesota that a free public library may be had for the asking by applying to the Minnesota State Library Commission. This commission was established by the legislature in 1899, and a system of free traveling libraries was begun in January, 1900, as soon as funds were available. Libraries have been added from year to year, until there are now two hundred in circulation. A traveling library contains 25 or 50 carefully selected books packed in a neat case, with blanks, catalogs and necessary directions for the circulation of the books.

A library will be loaned to any village, town or community upon application of at lest 10 resident tax-payers, who will form a local library association and agree to be responsible for the proper care of the library. A fee of $1.00 for 50 books and $.50 for 25 books is charged for each library to cover cost of transportation both ways. The books may be retained six months, but will be exchanged oftener if desired. The traveling libraries are especially designed for the use of farming communities and small villages which cannot support a local public library. They are also of great service to small public libraries which cannot have frequent accessions of new books. They should also serve as an incentive to the establishment of libraries in small villages and towns.

The appropriation for the year 1902-3 will be available August 1st, and new libraries will be ready for circulation in the fall. Those wishing to take advantage of this splendid opportunity to get the best books free of cost should make application as soon as possible to Miss Gratia Countryman, Secretary of the Minnesota State Library Commission, Public Library, Minneapolis, who will furnish application blanks and full information.

Which said mortgage, together with the debts secured thereby, including taxes paid by the mortgagee, was duly assigned by May Buse, to M. O. Sortedahl by written assignment dated July 31st, 1900, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, on December 9th, 1901, at 4:15 o'clock p. m., in Book "T" of Mortgages, on page 91, and which said mortgage, together with the debts secured thereby, including taxes paid by the mortgagee and the assignee under the mortgagee, was again assigned by the said M. O. Sortedahl, to Ernest Buse, by a written assignment dated March 3rd, 1902, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota on April 10th, 1902, 3:30 o'clock p. m., in Book "S" of Mortgages, on page 222 to-wit:

Lots one (1), two (2), three (3), four (4) and five (5) in block three (3) of Railroad addition to Red Lake Falls, according to the official plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the said county of Red Lake and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one hundred and ninety-five dollars with interest thereon at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, payable annually, on the 4th day of June in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note and interest coupon notes thereto attached, by failure to pay the annual interest falling due on the 4th day of June 1901 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said realestate for the years 1897, 1898, 1899 and 1900, and whereas the said assignee of the mortgagee, by virtue of the power contained the said mortgage, paid to the County Treasurer of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, the following taxes, duly levied and assessed by the said county against the land described in the said mortgage, and were due and delinquent at the dates when said payment were made, to wit: On July 31st, 1900, paid $9.49 taxes for the years of 1897, 1898 and 1899; on April 10th, 1902, paid $3.86 taxes for the year 1900, in all the sum of $13.35 and with interest amounting to $15.41.

And whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said realestate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable; and whereas said mortgage also provides that if such taxes are not so paid the holder of said mortgage may elect to pay the same and be entitled to interest on the same at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum and said mortgage stand as security for the amount so paid, with interest.

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon and to the date thereof and for said amount paid for taxes and interest thereon the sum of two hundred and forty 33-100 dollars.

And whereas, because of said defaults and of each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness,

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the front door of the Court House in Red Lake Falls, in said County, on Saturday the 19th day of July 1902 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the Attorney's fees of $35.00, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

Read It In His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, "I feel as though born anew", and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will hear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

"After I had tried many doctors and medicines to no avail one of my friends persuaded me to tried Kodol. It gave immediate relief. I can eat almost anything I want now and my digestion is good. I cheerfully recommend Kodol." Don't try to cure stomach trouble by dieting. That only farther weakens the system. You need wholesome, strengthening food. Spring Fever.

Spring fever is another name for biliousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels makes a poisoned system. If neglected, serious illness may follow such systems. DeWitt's Little Early Risers remove all danger by stimulating the liver, opening the bowels and cleansing the system of impurities. Safe pills. Never gripe. "I have taken DeWitt's Little Early Risers for torpid liver every spring for years," writes R. M. Everly, Moundsville, W. Va. "They do me more good than anything I have ever tried." W. $100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Ben Kviste is helping Tallack Dale to break for flax.

It is time now road overseeres made themselves known.

Tallack S. Dale has had his hands full of business lately.

Iver Gjeldaker, of Winger, was over on business last week.

Geo. Holmer and Halvor Holte left for the Clearwater river drive this week.

Cash Waldron made another trip to McIntosh this week for a load of store goods for the Equality store.

Mrs. Ed. O. Erickson left here last Thursday for a visit with her parents near Moorhead. Ed. turns his own cakes now.

Swen Oland was down to the Lost River ditch last Friday expecting to find work there but returned satisfied that he did not want that kind of work.

Our worthy town board are now trying to secure a ditcher for the town. We hope they will make the deal, and get to work now during the dry season.

Henry F Compton had the pleasure to ride the Garnes Woodmen goat last Saturday night. Haven't seen him since and we are afraid he had a hard time of it.

Cash Waldron, the notorious fisherman, was out to try his luck in Lost River the other day and succeeded in landing enough fish for a "taster," but the bull-heads simply wouldn't bite.

Thor. G. Skreeland, Grit's jolly bachelor, has been suffering from a swelling on his face for some time past. He had to seek medical aid last week and is now rapidly recovering.

Millet.

For those who by reason of wet land, or pressure of other work, have been unable to sow oats until too late to insure a good crop; or have not succeeded in getting a stand of grass, millet is a valuable crop. It should not be sown much earlier than the first of June as the seed requires much heat for germination, and if sown in cold soil or season, will lie in the ground until after the harder weed seeds have started, which may smother it out entirely. Millet may be sown until the last week in June and still produce a good crop of hay but if sown this late it is important to get the common or northern millet. The German or southern millet while it produces larger crops, may not ripen if sown after the middle of June. If millet is to be cut for hay it should never be left until the seeds become hard as these are very indigestible and often cause trouble when fed to cows or horses. This is the cause of a certain prejudice against millet hay. If the hay is cut early there will be no difficulty. For ordinary seeding, three pecks per acre is sufficient.

CUSTER MASSACRE

RED LAKE FALLS VISITED BY ONE WHO PARTICIPATED IN THE STRUGGLE.

F.F.GUERARD, A FAMOUS SCOUT, RECOUTS SOME OF HIS EXPERIENCES.

F. F. Guerard, of Minneapolis, representing the Pillsbury-Washburn mills, was in the city Monday introducing the breakfast foods manufactured by those mills. He is a man who has seen much service as a scout and interpreter among the Indians of the Northwest, and his life has been full of adventure and romance of the most strenuous kind. He speaks seven Indian languages besides English and French. Mr. Gerard accorded The Gazette an interview Tuesday morning at the Grand View hotel.

He was born in St. Louis, Mo., on November 25, 1829, which makes him a little over seventy-two years old now. He carries his age very well and says he feels that he could yet go on the plains and enjoy the life of a scout for several years to come. He attributes his good health and vigorous constitution to his life in the mountains, and his avoidance of dissipation His boyhood days were spent in the old St. Louis Republic office where he learned the printer's trade. In 1848 he went into the upper Missouri country. At that time there was no land under cultivation north of Council Bluffs, Ia., where the Indians had some acres in crop and the Murmons had several fields. The winter of 1849 was spent by Mr. Gerard at Fort Lookout and Fort Pierre. A year later he was stationed at Fort Clark, thirty-five miles north of Bismarck, and he remained there the greater part of fifteen years trading with the Indians. For the next few years he was in the Yellowstone region and British Columbia. From 1872 to 1888 he was at Fort Lincoln as interpreter and guide.

Mr. Gerard was with General Custer when he was massacred at Little Big Horn He says that at the time of the terrible Indian battle Major Reno was drunk and that if Custer had had the proper support he would not have been killed.

The scout claims to have been the best posted man on the expedition. He says the Indians knew Custer and admired him for his bravery and for that reason did not scalp him after taking his life. During the fight he with several other men, became separated from Custer's command and was forced to remain in the woods for three days.

The scout tells about one encounter he had with Sitting Bull, during which he could have gotten his government into trouble by simply nodding his head. It was at the time he was stationed at Fort Berthold. On the opposite side of the river from the fort was an Indian village of about 1,700 lodges, which made a good fighting army for the redskins. The force at the fort was small and would not have had any chance in a fight with the Indians. Sitting Bull had been looking for Mr. Gerard for some time, and on the day in question he came into the scout's office and put a gun up to his breast. Just when he was about to pull the trigger the gun was wrenched out of the chief's hands and Mr. Gerard's life saved. While this was taking place a friendly Indian who happened to be in the office walked up to Sitting Bull and, putting a revolver up against his breast, asked Mr. Gerard what he should do. The scout shook his head for, says he, he knew that if had the chief been killed the Indians from across the river would have wiped out the small force at the fort and possibly caused much trouble for the government.

Gerard was in charge of Fort Berthold from 1861 to 1865. It was during this time that the Indians went to the Upper Missouri country highly elated over the success of their uprising in Minnesota and tried to induce the Indians of that country to make trouble and capture Fort Berthold. The scout had only fifteen men with him and the hostile Indians made a hard attack upon the fort. The friendly Indians came to the rescue of the men at the fort and finally after a long fight the attacking party was driven off. The friendlies followed the Minnesota party about thirty miles and the white men who were with Gerard deserted the fort, leaving the scout alone in the building for ten days. He says he had a hard time keeping the Indians off during that time.

Mr. Gerard's memory box is stored full of stories of Indian life, and in closing his talk he said: "Come around at my next visit and I will tell you some good Indian stories."

CAMPBELL BROS'. CIRCUS.

A Kansas Newspaper Gives It a Big Send Off.

Regarding Campbell Bros'. circus, which will show in Red Lake Falls on Wednesday. June 25, the Phillipsburg Dispatch says:

Campbell Bros. great circus and menagerie will be in the city on Wednesday April 30, and the small boys are correspondingly happy. Nine years ago this summer a few scattering bills about town announced the coming of Campbell Bros. circus and at the appointed time two or three wagons, with a black bear and a common coyote as their collection of animals came into town. They had a small tent which they succeeded in getting up before night and gave the very best performance possible. There were not many of them, but several of the acrobats they had with them were fairly good performers. They treated everybody right, and left with the best wishes of all. The next year they returned and their show was more than double the size it was the year before. This time they had added a ring and had an old horse or two that gave it more the appearance of a circus than the year before, when they had not even a ring. On this occasion as before, they gave a good clean show and everybody was satisfied that they had done their very best.

Two years later the Campbell Bros. had two or three railway cars and traveled by rail. Their show had more than doubled again and the performance was as usual, clean and good and everybody liked it. They made a little money each time and always carried the best wishes of the people. Steadily year by year they have added horses, animals and men to their company, until last year they were rated among the big shows of the country. They went to the Pacific coast and closed a successful year in New Orleans, Louisana, the latter part of November. This year their show has more than doubled again, and those who are in a position to know, say that it is coming to be quite a rival of Ringling Bros. great show.

They now have two advance or advertising cars and are followed by a large show which continues to please and satisfy the people. This car No. 1 in charge of Mr. Foss Burns, who has been with them since their first little three wagon show, was here last Friday and the twenty men who accompanied it did a very thorough job of advertising the town. Car No. 2 is liable to come any day and the big show will be here on the 30th as advertised.

We have not seen the Campbell Bros. show for a long time, but all who know anything about them say they have a splendid show and please everybody who goes to see them.

The editor of this paper has been a show-goer for forty years and we don't expect ever to get so old that we will not enjoy a circus, so that the boy who wants a day off and an extra quarter for red lemonade, besides his regular admission, has our sympathy. We think the boy whether grown or not will enjoy this visit of the Campbell shows. They are just starting out and their wagons and paraphernalia of all kinds are new and sparkling, the men and horses are fresh and they will certainly appear at their best.

Lay aside the plow for a day, come to town and let us all have a good time together.

Mr. Comstock is a man of wide experience in public life. He was county attorney of Clay county for six years. Later he was elected to represent the county in the house of representatives, where he served six years. While a member of the house he served almost continuously as a member of the judiciary committee, one of the most important committees of that body, and he was also for one term chairman of the finance committee of the house. From the house Mr. Comstock was promoted to the senate, of which body he was a member six years, and in whose deliberations he took a prominent part. During his last term as senator he was chairman of the judiciary committee. For twelve years in one of the most important periods in the history of the state, Mr. Comstock was a member of the state legislature. His position in both houses was one of influence and he played a most important part in shaping legislation during that period.

In 1888 Mr. Comstock resigned from the state senate and was elected to the Fifty first congress, where he served two years and where he might still be serving had not the northwest been overwhelmed in 1890 by the great wave of populism which swept everything before it. Although but a new member of the national house, he was given important committee assignments, being placed upon such committees as priviliges and elections, and coinage, weights and measures. Since his retirement from congress Mr. Comstock has been much in the public eye, although he has not held public office during that time, except a five year term as a member of the normal school board of the state.

So distinguished have been Mr. Comstock's public services to the people of the state that he has upon different occasions been mentioned as a candidate for governor of the state and he has also several times been urged to become a candidate for the national senate. No man in the Red River valley has had a wider experience in public affairs; his reputation as a lawyer and high minded public spirited citizen has penetrated to every hamlet in the state. His record is clean and honorable, and it may be said of him that no shadow of suspicion of crookedness or dishonesty has ever been cast upon him, either in business or in politics.

RED LAKE COUNTY'S STATE DRAINAGE DITCH GETS A BOOST.

Hon. Marcus Johnson is never so happy as when he can aid in the material advancement of Red Lake county, and Monday was a good day for him, because he brought the news that through the representations of Engineer Ralph (and Mr. Johnson pushed a little, too no doubt, though he is too modest to boast of it) the commission has decided to add $1,000 to the appropriation for the state ditch in Emardville. The extra work will be put on the west end of the ditch, which will drain a considerable additional area. A good road will be constructed along the ditch, this being on the country road. Our appropriation from the state is now in the neighborhood of $6,000.

Screen doors and screen windows will soon be needed. We have them in all kinds and all sizes at rock bottom prices.

GREAT NORTHERN

SURVEYORS RUNNING LINES AND EVERYBODY MAKES A GUESS.

MAY MAKE EXTENSION TO ROSEAU AND CONNECTION WITH N. P. HERE.

The advent of a party of Great Northern surveyors who have been busy running lines the past few days has given the wiseacres a chance to figure. Locally the best information that can be obtained, points to a desire to find a feasible route so as to avoid the heavy cuts north of the city which have been a source of great expense to the company during wet weather on account of slide-outs. One route suggested, is a veering of the line at section 12. running in a westerly direction to the vicinity of the Healy & Buurdon mill. there making connections with the Great Northern, and utilizing that line to enter the city as at the N.P. depot. This would do away with the Great Northern depot, and it is hardly probable that anything in that way will be attempted. In this connection, however, it is said that the Great Northern is preparing to put in a Y at Tilden, where the Red Lake Falls branch of the N. P. intersects the Great Northern, and that a depot will be built, the idea of extending the Great Northern from this point to Dugdale having been abandoned, the N. P. track to be brought into requisition instead. The owners of the buildings at Dugdale are said to be preparing to move to Tilden. As to the Roseau extension, the Crookston Daily Journal says:

There promises to be something doing in Great Northern circles in the northern end of the valley in the near future. It has long been understood that an extension was planned to be built north from the city of Thief River Falls with Roseau county as an objective point and from present indications this plan will work out, and may possibly be pushed to a conclusion this summer.

There arrived in Crookston this morning a party of Great Northern engineers who were provided with the necessary instruments and equipment for a long campaign. The party was in charge of James Thill, an assistant in the engineering department of the Great Northern. It consists of seven members: Messrs. Taplin, Muir and Gerahty of St. Paul; H. Grow and R. C. Smith of Minneapolis. They boarded the St. Vincent line train this morning and proceeded to the latter city, where they will spend two or three days doing work, after which they will return and establish headquarters at Thief River Falls.

Neither Engineer Thill nor the members of the party would give out much in the way of information regarding their intended movements. Chief engineers are usually reticent upon such matters and the working force of the corps usually know little as to what lines they are expected to run. However, the Journal has it upon good authority that it is the extension corps of surveyors to locate a line north of Thief River.

The Great Northern has contemplated the building of such a line during the past three years. The development of eastern Marshall and Roseau counties has been rapid, but the district is entirely dependent upon the St. Vincent line for a market for its products. This necessitates a long haul, and the construction of a line of road will not only be an accommodation to those who are settling in that district and those who have been there many years but will be a paying proposition for the company. There are many engineering difficulties that will be encountered in running a line north from Thief River Falls, owing to a large section of the country that is low and boggy. At one time the company projected an extension of its line from Wylie north, passing west of these low lying lands with another extending northwest from Thief River into the Red Lake country. Whether this is the plan at present, or whether it will be an extension direct from the Upper Falls to Roseau is not yet known. It will be one or the other however, that is a certainty.

People of the upper valley will be interested in the development of the company's plan through the medium of the surveying corps, and will watch with interest the progress of its work.

WAS IT A MIRACLE?

A South American Missionary is Saved In A Miraculous Way. Reaches the United States Just in Time to Save His Life.

You have all heard of Prof E. R. Weycoff, the only missionary that ever went among the Aztec Indians of South America, who has returned alive. It was Prof. Weycoff who planted Christianity amid these fierce people, and made a minister out of Zorell, the man eater and chief of the savages. "Eight years ago," said the professor, to a gathering of friends at the Allyn house, "I resigned my lucrative professorship and set sail for South America. My journey was a two-fold mission—first to carry the gospel to a people who had never heard it, and second, to regain my health, if possible, amid the arid hills of Southern atmosphere. My disease was consumption. I had been pronounced incurable by leading physicians of the East. Analysis by Dr. Agney of Philadelphia, showed that I was in the early stage of Bright's disease. I also had a growth in my left side, which some physicians diagnosed as an enlargement of the spleen, some an ague case, and others a tumor. I was told that any one of the troubles would prove fatal within a year, and that there was no cure for me in the known world. After a long sea voyage, then a railroad journey, and then nine days' wagon journey over the plains and up into the mountains, my wife and I reached Deswisaca. You have all heard me relate my experience among these people. In this connection I would say, by the treatment of the medicine man of the tribe, by the help of God and the climate, I largely recovered my lung and kidney troubles. The tumor, however, continued to grow. Two years ago I took cold and relapsed back to my original condition. The medicine man gravely informed me that I was a "dead white man" and I felt that for once in his life he was telling the truth.

"Twelve months ago, at a ranch man's hut, a few miles from Deswisaca, I chanced to come across a copy of the Atlanta, Ga., Constitution. It was like home to see an American paper, and I devoured its contents with great interest. What attracted my interest mostly was an article describing the miraculous cures of a Louisville physician. In fact, they read as much like miracles as old-time bible miracles. This article spoke of the cure of Mrs. J. A. Clark, Jonesboro, Ga., of double curvature of the spine; Miss Alice Lewis, of Galveston, Tex, of consumption; of Mrs. C. E. Omber, Shreveport, La., of a malignant fungus growth and tumor; and of Miss Lidia Head, Ensor, Ky., of kidney and bronchial troubles. It mentioned the remarkable cure of fifty people.

"Now my wife, who is a southern woman, happened to know Miss Head, and knew they were among the most respectable people of the state. Such was the impression made upon my wife and myself that we determined to start immediately to Louisville and see by the help of God if that great healer could help me. It was on the ninth day of December, 1895, that I reached the office of Dr. Rea, who is president of the Southern Medical and Surgical Institute, Louisville, Ky., I was nearer a dead man than a live one. I found the doctor busy, with about fifty people to see him. He was also preparing to make a professional trip to Texas. As soon as I entered the presence of Dr. Rea he told me my exact condition and how I had been for years, better than I could have told him. I knew I was in the presence of a great man, and one who was master of his profession. I felt before he had given his opinion that I would get well. I felt that his work was God's work and God was with him. My blood had almost turned to water, my limbs were swelled to almost the size of my body, my cough was very severe, and my left lung badly affected. Dr. Rea gave his opinion that the chances were greater that I should get well than that I should not, and that by the help of God he would save me if he could. You can't imagine what life these words gave me, for I had been told the day before by two prominent physicians in Cincinnati that I could not get well. I was under Dr. Rea's treatment about six months and have just been dismissed by him as cured, tumors all gone, cured of Bright's disease, lungs cured, and feel like a new man.

"My wife has recently visited Iowa and there learned some of the most remarkable cures. Mrs. Jane Smith, Bonaparte, Ia., cured by Dr. Rea of cancer of the stomach and of fungus cancer tumor of womb after the best physician in the state had pronounced her case incurable. Eugene Athey, a prominent business man of Hamilton, Ill., cured of kidney troubles after being pronounced by the leading physician of the state as beyond all hope. Mrs. Rachel Erickson, Marshalltown, Ia., cured of abdominal dropsy, after all others had failed. H. C. Emerson, Keokuk, Ia., catarrh of throat and bronchial trouble, and a slow, wasting form of consumption, after being an invalid for years. Miss Jennie Steele, Columbus Junction, Ia., cured of long-standing rheumatism. Miss Christie, of Kahoka, Mo., cured by electricity of tumor on the face; no scar left. Mrs. Mary Schruder, Ft. Madison, Ia., cured of blood and heart troubles of the most advanced stage. J. E. Barns, Milford, Ia., cured of deafness in twenty minutes; had been afflicted for five years. Chas. Wold, Fairmont, Minn., cured in three months of nervous debility and lost vitality. V. A. Arnold, proprietor of West End hotel, Spirit Lake, Ia., cured of kidney troubles in ten days. John Huff, Cedar Rapids, Ia., cured of chronic rheumatism. Miss Higgins, Iowa City, Ia., cured of stomach troubles."

J. F. Brown, Litchfield, Minn., cured of chronic disease and stomach trouble.

Andrew Nelson, Crow River, Minn., cured of nervous debility and chronic constipation.

Mrs. Gust. Hammerback, Wheaton, Minn., cured of tumor on the thigh. Cured by Dr. Rea's famous injection plan, with on operation and without loss of blood.

F. M. Cummings, East Grand Forks, cured of chronic epilepsy. His case had been pronounced incurable by other doctors.

Mike Curran, Minto, N. D., cured of chronic piles. Cured by Dr. Rea's famous Red Cross treatment.

Miss Martha Murphy, St. Cloud, Minn., says Dr. Rea saved her life by curing her of chronic ulcerated stomach.

E. Honeyman, Castleton, N. D., cured of chronic rheumatism.

A. Fullwieler, Round Lake, Minn., cured of chronic neuritis and Bright's disease. Cured in one month's treatment.

Alice M. Cady, Emerado, N. D., cured of consumption. Other doctors said that she would die and it would be useless for her to doctor.

Oscar Holstieo, Fargo, N. D., cured of Consumption.

Mrs. Mary Stanley, Oskaloosa, Ia., cured of catarrh of the head and eye troubles.

Dr. Rea's practice is distributed alike over the Southern and Western country.

The sick come everywhere to see him. They come nearly dead, and go away well. Miss Clara Nagle, now the wife of a prominent railroad official, Owensboro, Ky., cured of catarrhal consumption. Mrs. M. F. Rice, of Memphis, Mo., cured of ulcerative sore legs and blood poison. E. H. Etherly, Little Rock, Ark., cured of total blindness. Miss Philip Trout, Mt. Vernon, Ind., cured of cancer of the face. H. Hess, Brinkley, Ark., operated on for cross eyes, and cured in three minutes. Mrs. E. B. Blockson, Terre Haute, Ind., cured of chronic female troubles, cured in six weeks. John McNamara, Marshalltown, In., cured of eczema of forty years standing; had tried fifteen doctors. J. M. Bolie, Chetopa, Kas., cured of nervous debility, bladder troubles and wasting vitality.

"How does Dr. Rea perform these cures?" asked half a dozen voices. "God only knows," replied Prof. Weycoff, "but he does it. He is a man of great skill and experience, besides he possesses almost a spiritual gift in diagnosing a disease. I have talked to numbers of his patients, and they all told me that he tells them their troubles better than they could have told him. I believe there are other Dr. Reas, but only one Dr. Rea who has cured thousands of incurable cases all over the country. He seems to cure incurable cases as though they were slight defects. His cures are the work of God and the brain of a great man. We can't tell how he performs them, but the world knows that he does. I consider Dr. Rea the greatest physician that ever lived. Though only a young man, he stands as a physician greater than that of any score of physicians. I have seen him in a hundred cases examine men and women with all kinds of diseases (all strangers to him) and tell each one of his disease without asking a question. In the more malignant diseases, such as cancers, tumors, consumption and heart troubles, he is at his best."—Prof. L. O. Pemberton in Lexington, Ky., Gazette.

Louisville, Ky.—Special—Dr. Rea, the noted specialist, has decided to make his next professional visit to the northwest and will visit the following towns:

Princeton, Commercial hotel, Wednesday June 18 from noon to 6 p. m.

Mora, Great Northern house, Thursday June 19, from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Cambridge, Commercial hotel, Friday June 20, from 12:30 p.m. to 6 p. m.

Duluth, Spaulding hotel, Saturday June 21, from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Grand Rapids, Pukegama hotel, from Sunday noon June 22 until Monday noon, June 23.

Thief River Falls, Ogahmah hotel, Friday June 27, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

St. Vincent, Thedors hotel, Saturday June 28, from 11 a. m. to 3:30 p.m.

This will give the many patients of this noted specialist an opportunity to visit him close to their homes. Dr. Rea has been making regular visits to the Northwest for the past three years and we know hundreds of the worst chronic cases that he has cured. His charge for consultation, examination and advice to those interested is $1.00.

THREE SHOT IN A ROW

GANG OF ST. PAUL ITALIANS USE SHOTGUNS WITH SERIOUS EFFECT.

Rock Island Road Secures Direct Entrance Into the Twin Cities—Vaccination Law Upheld by the State Supreme Court—President May Visit Minnesota in the Fall—News of the State in General.

St. Paul, June 9.—Tony Sentora and Louis Ventrale, Italians employed by the Great Western, shot and severely injured Dell Roberg, 556 Concord street; Fred Waymen, 556 Concord street, and Mitchell Marcott, living at 706 Ramsey street, Minneapolis. Wayman and Roberg are in the city hospital with fair chances of recovery. Marcott was able to go to Minneapolis in a street car. Sentora and Ventrale have acknowledged the shooting, and they, with fifteen other Italians, are under arrest in the Central station, charged with assault with intent to kill. Joseph D. Dore, another Italian who was present, was badly beaten. He is in the city hospital and will lose an eye as a result. The shooting was done from the abandoned depot at Concord and Page streets on the West Side.

There are several stories told by those who claim to be eye-witnesses of the affair, but placing all together, it appears that the Italians were under the impression that the men they shot had been throwing stones at them, and the shooting was the result.

SECURES TWO NEW ROADS.

Rock Island Gets a Direct Outlet to St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Chicago, June 6.—Two roads were added to the Rock Island system during the day. One is the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern, which gives the Rock Island a direct outlet to St. Paul and Minneapolis, and the other is the Rock Island and Peoria, which has been operated by the Rock Island company for a number of years.

The Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern has been under the control of the Rock Island for some time, and it had been understood that ultimately it would be made a part of the Rock Island system. Henceforth it will be known as the Cedar Rapids division of the Rock Island system.

The Rock Island now has taken a lease of the road for 999 years from June 1, 1902, and also of the Rock Island and Peoria. In each case it pays a rental equal to the sum of all the taxes levied upon either property, all the interest of the outstanding bonds of either company and 6 per cent upon the outstanding capital stock of each company.

VACCINATION RULES VALID.

Cities May Compel Pupils in Public Schools to Be Inoculated.

St. Paul, June 7.—The rules laid down by the health department of the city of St. Paul requiring the vaccination of children who attend the public schools are legal and may be enforced.

This decision was rendered by the supreme court in the case brought by Frank P. Freeman against the board of school inspectors to test the rights of parents and pupils.

The case was brought under the auspices of the Anti-Vaccination society, and after a defeat in the lower court, was appealed to the supreme court.

The lower court is sustained in its contention that in case of an epidemic or when there is danger of an epidemic the board of health has the power to demand that children attending the public schools be vaccinated.

HIS MIND A PERFECT BLANK.

Prominent Duluth Physician Finds Himself in San Francisco.

Duluth, June 7.—Dr. T. H. Storey, a prominent Duluth physician, who mysteriously disappeared several weeks ago, has been heard from in San Francisco. In a letter to his wife he says that since leaving Duluth his mind has been a perfect blank and he does not know how he reached the California city. The only thing he can remember is that a man by the name of Watson befriended him at Seattle, and he says if Watson can be found much of the mystery would be explained.

STATE RESTS ITS CASE.

Defense Alleges Conspiracy in Minneapolis Bribery Trial.

Minneapolis, June 7.—The climax in the sensational trial of Irwin A. Gardner, accused of accepting a bribe, was reached when the state closed its case. Begun with the startling testimony of "Billy" Edwards, the prince of "big mitt" men, it closed with the equally surprising story of Lincoln Crossman, the financial member of the firm, who told the jury of his dickering with Gardner for the privilege of being allowed to fleece victims without fear of prosecution. Crossman went further. He swore that he himself had placed in the hands of Superintendent Fred Ames an envelope containing money in consideration of the protection which the police department was furnishing the "big mitt" operators.

Attorney Meed, for the defense, then unfolded to the jury the line they would follow. He declared the defense would show that the prosecution was a conspiracy, not aimed at the defendant, Gardner, but at public officers, whom, doubtless, some of the jurors had voted to put in power.

DEAD AND DOWN TIMBER.

Supreme Court Decides Against a Minnesota Logging Company.

Washington, June 3.—Justice Brown of the United States supreme court delivered the opinion of that court in the case of the Pine River Logging and Improvement company, et al. vs. the United States, coming to the court from the United States circuit court of appeals for the Eighth circuit. Worthy Indians on the Chippewa Indian reservation in Minnesota, under the act of congress of 1889, were authorized to cut dead and down timber on their reservation under the supervision of the interior department.

The logging company made a contract with five Indians for the delivery of 2,750,000 feet of logs, "more or less." They received 17,000,000 feet. The supreme court held that this was "a too liberal construction of the words 'more or less,'" and sustained the finding of the court of appeals holding the company responsible to the government for $78,000 on the ground that the trespass was wilful and not accidental.

NEW MINNESOTA RAILWAYS.

To Be Built From Minneapolis to Baudette and Anoka to Superior.

Anoka, Minn., June 6.—The Minneapolis, Superior, St. Paul and Winnipeg Railway company has filed with the register of deeds here a trust deed to the Standard Trust company of New York to secure $10,000,000 in 5 per cent thirty-year bonds, covering the bed, superstructures, right of way, franchises, etc., of 320 miles of railway between Minneapolis and Baudetts, Minn., and 120 miles from Anoka to Superior, Wis.

It is expected that 100 miles of the road will be completed this year. This line will traverse Ramsey, Hennepin, Anoka, Mille Lac, Kanabec, Aitkin, Beltrami, Itasca, Isanti, Chisago and Pine Counties in Minnesota and Douglas county in Wisconsin.

BIG QUARRY SOLD.

Minnesota Granite May Be Used for Chicago Pavement.

St. Cloud, Minn., June 9.—A deed has been filed here by T. N. Hennessy of St. Paul, transferring to Peter J. Hennessy the Hennessy & Cox stone quarries from which the granite for St. Paul's new postoffice was taken. The consideration named is $20,000.

Just what will result from this move is not known, but it is believed that Peter J. Hennessy acquired the quarries for the purpose of entering into active competition for the granite paving contracts in Chicago. It is known that Mr. Hennessy has been interested in paving there, and it is thought that he will bid on some of the contracts that are to be let, with the consideration that Minnesota granite be used.

NEW TRIAL IS DENIED.

Girl's Beauty Cannot Deprive Her of Favorable Verdict.

St. Paul, June 7.—The supreme court of Minnesota has decided that a girl's beauty is not to be counted against her and that if a jury is influenced by the comeliness of a fair plaintiff it is not for the courts to deprive her of her natural advantages. This ruling was made indirectly in the case of Emma Koplitz against the city of St. Paul.

The girl was injured by an accident while on a coaching party and sued the city, alleging a defective road.

She was awarded a verdict of $300 and the city appealed, alleging that her beauty was what influenced the jury. The supreme court denies a new trial and the verdict stands.

WILL SELL FINE STOCK.

Southern Minnesota Breeders Effect Organization.

Albert Lea, Minn., June 9.—Breeders of fine stock from Mower, Le Sueur and Freeborn counties met here during the day and decided to organize the Southern Minnesota Live Stock association. W. W. P. McConnell, state dairy and food commissioner, presided and was made temporary chairman, with R. C. Blackmer of this city secretary. A committee composed of Messrs. A. C. Wadga, Albert Lea; J. J. Furlong, Concord, Mower county, and John A. Timpane of Le Sueur, will draft a constitution and by-laws, the chairman and secretary to be ex-officio members. One object of the organization is to hold sales of fine stock.

General Manager of Great Northern.

St. Paul, June 5.—The Great Northern has revived the office of general manager, and a circular just issued announces the appointment of John Stevens, chief engineer, to the position. The office was abolished in 1895, when Charles H. Warren was given an indefinite vacation. Since that time the duties have been attended to by the general superintendent.

Truelsen Appeals His Case.

Duluth, June 4.—Henry Truelsen, Dem., who was defeated by T. W. Hugo, Rep., for mayor of Duluth at the spring election, has filed papers in an appeal to the supreme court from the decision of the district tribunal, wherein Hugo was declared successful.

fenses, and every drop of blood in his body cried out with the voice of one great sob.

"This is what I was afraid of," muttered Kendall. "Confound him! I knew he'd break down."

He glanced uneasily at Elsie, but she seemed quite calm. She extended her hand toward Alden, and he kissed it, falling on his knees beside the bed.

"You must not feel sorry for me," said she. "I am very comfortable, and I waste no time in pitying myself. It was very kind of you to send the violets."

"Dear little girl," he said, still kneeling, "every minute of my life shall be yours to make this right."

"You are not to speak that way," replied Elsie, with that manner which accompanies long considered words. "You have your own life to lead. You must not spoil it for me."

Alden's face was gray with anxiety as he looked into Elsie's.

"Don't say we have gone back; that it's all like long ago," he began. But the warning eye of the vigilant Kendall, who had softly stepped to the head of the bed, upon the other side, checked this plea. Alden writhed with the effect, but his will held him.

"I mustn't worry you," he said; then, with half an eye on Kendall: "Elsie, who did this? Tell me, little girl."

"I don't know; really I don't," she answered. "Why do you think that I do?"

Again the doctor silently protested, and Alden took heed.

"I had not heard it from you," he said. "But let us put it out of our minds. What can I do for you? Is there anything you need? We will hold a conference on the subject."

"Brenda would get me anything in the world," replied Elsie. "She has been as good as two mothers to me. Brenda, what do I want?"

"Rest and an easy mind and your real mother as soon as she can come," replied Brenda. "As to Mr. Alden's contribution, I would suggest a pretty picture or two to put on the walls. They would relieve the eye. Elsie has asked for Tantalus, but the art committee, consisting of Dr. Kendall and myself, refuses to hang him."

"The art committee is all right," said Alden. "I shall submit some pictures to it with confidence."

Thus the talk drifted from topics too exciting, and some minutes were spent pleasantly and conventionally enough. Then, as Alden was about to take his leave, Elsie suddenly began to weep very bitterly and without apparent cause, for it was a parting for a few hours. To Brenda afterward she said in explanation, "To think that I might have died and never have seen him again!"

As the matter seemed to involve the health of the patient and certainly the regulation of Mr. Alden's visits, Brenda considered herself bound to report the remark to Dr. Kendall.

"It is all very mysterious to me," said he. "She loves him with her soul and body, but she believes that it is all over."

"She will not always think so," replied Brenda.

"That may be true," he said, "but I think I know her, and, so thinking, I hope my own wedding won't have to wait for theirs."

"Your wedding!" exclaimed Brenda in surprise. "I did not know it was arranged."

"Of the three persons most intimately concerned in it," he replied, "two are already to be counted upon—myself and the clergyman. As to the other, there is much doubt."

"Let us hope it will vanish."

"Hope is a thin diet for the affections," said he, "but they live long on it sometimes."

CHAPTER XIII.

ELSIE CHOOSES A CONFIDANT.

ON the following morning Captain Neale appeared at St. Winifred's, demanding an interview with Elsie, Kendall had succeeded in refusing a similar demand upon the previous evening and would have been glad to do it again, for he dreaded Neale in a sickroom as if he had been the angel of septicæmia, but the doctor could not honestly say that Elsie's condition was such as to justify him in shielding her from all questioning.

As for the captain, he was "up against a new game," to use his own expression. Never before had he been held back from the bedsides of the afflicted in institutions wholly or partially under municipal control, and doubtless upon this account there were fortunate souls in paradise who might otherwise still have been struggling in this probationary state. When Kendall demurred, Neale strongly intimated that he would "make trouble" for the doctor, but it was his own conscience and not his fears which decided Kendall's action.

"You can see her," he said, "if you will behave yourself."

And Neale was speechless in the presence of this audacity. It was not that Neale was a captain of police—for such an officer may or may not amount to a row of pins; it was that he was Joe Neale, the man with a [illegible] [illegible]

For as well as Elsie could be prepared for this interview she shuddered and turned pale when her eyes first rested upon the peculiar, grimacing countenance of the captain, more distressing than usual at that moment because he was trying to look beneficent. Neale had a singular delusion that he could be and seem to be all things to all people, although, in fact, his voice, his face and his manner were more rigidly incapable of disguise than those of any other man between the two oceans. He had a monkey's pride in imitation without a trace of the monkey's capacity for it, and upon this occasion he was engaged in counterfeiting the demeanor of a family physician because he knew that Kendall did not believe he could do it. And it was his expressed conviction afterward that he had made the doctor "feel foolish."

"Good morning," said he. "Glad to see you looking so fine. You'll be out in a week, and by the first of the month you'll be throwing kisses over the footlights again."

Elsie's forehead reddened with wrath, and she opened her mouth to say something that would have shown more spirit than discretion; but, catching Brenda's eye, she suddenly closed her lips tightly.

Neale turned to Brenda.

"It does my heart good," he said, "to see you here taking care of the sick—a society lady like you. I call it great. There's few that would do it. Now, I'll bet the limit that you've been up half the night taking care of this poor little girl. You need rest. I can see that. And what I say is that it wouldn't do you a bit of hurt to go lay down while me and the doctor looks out for things here."

"Do you mean that you wish me to leave the room?" inquired Brenda, with a glance at Kendall.

The doctor's face was wearing that indescribable expression incident to the first stage of seasickness. He nodded, and Brenda walked toward the door, which Kendall opened for her, while Neale bowed several times as she departed. Then the captain drew up a chair to the side of the bed, upon the edge of which he laid his enormous and hairy hand, clinched, with the knuckles uppermost. Elsie looked at it, fascinated, wondering if it could really be a hand.

"We got to have a little light on this woman," said the captain.

"What woman?" inquired Elsie faintly.

"The one who called on you that afternoon," he replied.

"Miss Miller has already said"— Kendall began, but the captain lifted his hand from the bed, thereby causing one side of it to rise suddenly, and made a gesture of protest.

"She'll do the answering," he said.

"Who says that any woman called on me?" demanded Elsie.

"Now, don't get excited," responded the captain. "It's well known that somebody was there. Dr. Blair saw her leaving the house."

Elsie remained silent for a moment. Then she said:

"There might have been fifty women leave the house and I know nothing about it. What did this woman look like?"

"Haven't you seen the newspapers?" asked Neale.

"Only some little pieces—just to look at the pictures," she replied. "Dr. Kendall didn't wish me to read the stories."

"Did you see the pictures of the 'mysterious woman,' drawn from description?"

"No."

"Miss Maclane didn't show them to you? Well, well! How singular!"

"I selected the things to be shown to Miss Miller," said Kendall; "most of them."

"And you cut out all about the mysterious woman?" queried Neale. "Why?"

"It was not intentional," replied the doctor, reddening. "I merely happened to do it."

"I guess Miss Maclane helped you," said Neale.

"What has Miss Maclane to do with it?" asked Elsie.

"A good many people think she was the woman," replied the captain. "It's beginning to be said all over, but there's one person who thinks so and won't say so—yet."

"Who's that?" said Elsie.

"Dr. Blair," responded Neale. "You know who he is?"

"I've met him," she replied. "Mrs. Simmons got him to come to see me once when I was sick. I think he was staying at the house then. What has he to do with this affair?"

The captain explained.

"It seems to me," said Elsie, "that anybody who ever saw Miss Maclane would know her next time. If Dr. Blair says that he doesn't recognize her, then she isn't the woman he saw."

"Do you deny that she called upon you?" persisted the captain.

"I certainly do deny it," replied Elsie, with decision.

"Perhaps it was some other woman who looked like her," suggested Neale.

"I don't know any woman who looks like her," said Elsie. "I never saw one who did."

The captain glanced at Kendall and said slowly:

"Elsie doesn't know anybody who looks [illegible]

"Well," said Kendall, "what of it?"

"Why, neither does anybody else in the house," replied the captain. "So Miss Maclane is the only woman of that kind, so far as we know, who could have any motive for going there. And somebody went."

Elsie was beginning to be excited to the danger point, and Kendall cut off the interview, Neale yielding without a word of protest.

"Don't you worry; not a bit," said he to Elsie. "There ain't going to be no trouble for anybody, except the guilty party."

When the captain had gone, Elsie pleaded with Kendall to let her see Dr. Blair.

"All these stories about Brenda must rest upon what he says," she insisted, "and if I tell him positively, face to face, that it was not Brenda he will make a statement that will put an end to all the trouble. And it is worrying Brenda. I'm sure of it. She tries to hide it from me, but there is something preying on her mind. Of course I have not understood what it was, but now I can see. We must remember how hard it is for a girl brought up as she has been, all surrounded by dignity and refinement, to have her name in everybody's mouth in connection with such an affair as this."

Kendall was inclined to take a favorable view of this suggestion. His own opinion, formed from the newspaper reports, was that Dr. Blair was a conscientious man who was trying to tell the exact truth in a very serious matter; that he believed it was Miss Maclane whom he had seen, but was wise and just enough not to say so upon any other ground than positive certainty. Upon the other hand, he would not declare openly that the woman was not Brenda until his mind was clear of doubt. It might easily happen that a talk with Elsie would result in thoroughly convincing him, and for Elsie there was nothing to be feared, since Blair as a physician would know how to avoid exciting her.

Accordingly Kendall said that he would send word to Blair during the afternoon. As it happened, he had leisure to go himself upon this errand, and as outdoor air would have the charm of novelty for him he took advantage of the opportunity.

Elsie looked at it, fascinated.

He was surprised at the meager furnishing of his professional brother's small and dark waiting room. It was neat and not altogether destitute of comfort; but it was destitute of patients and had not the look of a place that had ever been overrun with them. A servant's rap upon the door communicating with the office brought forth Blair, to whom Kendall made himself known.

The office was a large and dreary room, with a view of back yards. There was a broad couch in a corner with a pile of cheap sofa pillows, against which the doctor had probably been reclining. At the foot of the couch and oddly propped against the back of a chair was a single silken pillow beautifully embroidered. From a professional standpoint the room lacked many things that money can buy, and to Kendall, who was so far removed from the need of fees that he had almost forgotten the possibility of any doctor having to subsist upon them, the place spoke loudly of poverty. As for Blair himself, he matched his surroundings, for his mood was far from cheerful.

"What can I do for you, doctor?" he asked in the tone of one who has ceased to expect good from any interview.

"Miss Miller, who is my patient at the hospital, wishes to see you," said Kendall, "and I called to ask you to come over."

"I hope a consultation isn't necessary," said Blair, with a faint smile. "I understood that her recovery was assured."

"It is in regard to Miss Maclane," responded Kendall, with considerable embarrassment.

Blair faintly groaned.

"I wish I had kept my mouth shut," he said. "Of course if I can do anything to please Miss Miller," he added hastily, "I shall be delighted. I know her slightly, and she is a very charming girl. But really this matter of Miss Maclane is wearing my life out. Policemen, reporters, unidentified vagabonds"—

"And, last of all, a doctor," added Kendall.

—"have worried the flesh off my bones," continued Blair without noticing the interruption. "They insist that I shall identify Miss Maclane as the woman I saw. They present threats and bribes. They offer all sorts of ridiculous plans for bringing Miss Maclane and me together so that I may be sure of her. But I have seen Miss Maclane already and I have said all that I have to say upon the sub-

THE PEOPLE'S PRESIDENT.

President Roosevelt makes a very satisfactory president. He has the confidence of the masses to such an extent that the party to which he claims allegiance could nominate no one else as his successor, and his strength is not of the ephemeral kind. He has long been under the glare of public scrutiny, but has only grown in the affections and confidence of the people. He is surely the people's president, and his support will come as enthusiastically from rock-ribbed Democrats as from traditional Republicans. Woe to the political machine that will attempt his undoing. While essentially an Eastern man, President Roosevelt has adopted the McKinley program of tarriff modification and reciprocity which has grown so popular since the power of the trusts has largely cut off home competition. Tariff reduction on trust monopolized commodities was McKinley's program, and it is Roosevelt's as well. Purity in public service, absolute impartiality in the administration of laws, protection for the weak, and justice to the strong, has been Roosevelt's motto, and he is living up to it in the face of predictions of disaster to his personal political interests as a consequence. Bryan himself has predicted that "Roosevelt will not be nominated if he continues his attacks upon the trusts." But the people rule in this republic. It was the popular demand within the Democratic party which worked those great changes in '96—tearing asunder the old organization, pitching out the old idols, setting up a new tenet of faith and a new organization, making practically a new party with an old name, and in the space of four brief months from the date of the national convention in July 1896, to the election in November, mustering such strength that Bryan received 6,502,925 votes. To disorganize a party, rebuild on the wreck of the old institution, and yet poll nearly seven million votes after a brief campaign, would seem an almost incredible feat had not that very thing been done. But in the case of Roosevelt, the conditions are quite different. He has the organization, with the people back of him. Only two things can prevent his renomination and reelection—his death, or a radical change in his policy, and there is, happily, no reason to look for either.

Attorney General Douglas recently made the following ruling on a few of the points involved on primary elections: To be entitled to a vote at the primary election a man must have lived in the precinct thirty days. No man can be a judge at the primary election, who has not been a resident of the precinct thirty days. A man who is under twenty-one years of age cannot register. This applies, regardless of the fact that he will be twenty-one betore the election in September. Names cannot be inserted on the ballots neither can candidates on the ticket be substituted for those on another. A voter can only vote for candidates who are all republicans or democrats as the case may be, and cannot vote a mixed ticket.

The Populist county central committee met on Monday and the secretary was instructed to issue a call for a mass convention to elect delegates to the Populist state convention which convenes at St. Paul on Wednesday, July 2. The mass convention will be held in this city on June 25.

The Democratic county convention to elect delegates to the state convention will be beld at Red Lake Falls June 21.

Governor Van Sant has issued proclamations providing for a vote on the question of the formation of Clearwater and Boosevelt counties out of the south-western portion of Beltrami county. The vote will be taken at the next general election. The territory is the same with the exception of six townships, Roosevelt having that many more than Clearwater. Bagley is named as the county seat of Clearwater county and Shevlin of Roosevelt county.

We note in a number of our exchanges a strong tendency on the part of the Populists to keep up the organization, and calls for county conventions to elect delegates to the state convention at St. Paul on July 2 are out in all the northern Minnesota counties. Victor Lawson, as leader of the Populist furces of the state, is throwing hot shot into the Democrats now, and the prospects of the two parties dwelling together in brotherly love gruw continually less. The situation is peculiarly puzzling to the office seekers.

The Gazette this week presents its readers with a picture and biography of Hon. S. G. Comstock, of Moorhead, who is one of the weighty candidates for the Republican congressional nomination. We place this information at the disposal of our readers, thus giving them an opportunity of judging for themselves the merits of the respective Republican candidates. Mr. Comstock's biography will be followed by a presentation of data concerning Hon. Ezra G. Valentine, of Breckenridge; Hon. Andrew Grindeland, of Warren, Hon. Halvor Steenerson, of Crookston, and other candidates. The Republican party is fortunate in having such timber to present to the voters of the ninth district. They are a distinguished body of men, and we doubt if four citizens of equal standing and ability could be found in any other one district in Minnesota.

THE COUNTRY EDITOR.

Along with the village doctor and the minister of God, the country editor has untold opportonity for doing good. My heart warms to such editors as are alive to their opportunities. One feels like giving them a friendly grasp of the hand and wishing them God speed in their good work. Here is a true story that will illustrate how many people feel toward their own editor. Let none of my editor readers miss the opportunity to do the good that this particular editor did.

Thirty years ago, in the little town of Roseville, there lived a man who subscribed for the county paper. He had a family, amung whom was a little girl who was very fond of reading. She managed to be near the door every Tuesday evening and she fairly devoured the contents of that paper which was regularly delivered on Tuesday each week. Fortunately the paper was a clean, sensible sheet, not given to questionable contents, nor even to squabbles with brother editors.

When the weekly paper is about the only reading matter at hand one realizes there are many topics which are more interesting as well as more elevating than petty editorial quarrels. Shakespeare and Dickens have been enjoyed in later years by the little girl of my story—but never a whit more than was the reading in the Roseville paper.

The pity of it is that so many editors do no realize their positions. I tell you, there was a United States senator within a stone's throw of the home in which that child lived, but the editor of that weekly paper was by far the greater personage to her thinking, in fact she looked upon him almost as a person enchanted. You who have the power, use it for right. You who have the weapon, see that it is not appropriated to further personal interests, right or wrong, always bearing in mind how many little and how many big people are waiting for your paper as we wait for what is best and noblest.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE LOST BOY

One day last week as I was walking along a side street I heard a child loudly crying. Looking around it did not take long to find that the voice came from a little bare-fout boy of four years who came up a nearby alley. Certainly I went toward the little chap, thinking to comfort him, but he fairly shrieked when I spoke to him and was deathly afraid of me. He would tell that his name was Yosep (Joseph) though, but that didn't help matters for it was plain to be seen that he was lost. The other children, who were playing about, crowded around and said: "He's lost!" Little Yosep was not so much afraid of those boys so I told one of them to run in and ask if he might take the boy to G street where, from his general appearance, I thought he'd be likely to be at home. Soon we saw a larger boy and girl running about as if looking for someone and when little Yosep saw them he gave a scream which they ought to have heard but didn't. By dint of whistling and shouting we attracted their attention for sure enough they were Yosep's sister and brother. I thought they would embrace the little fellow upon finding him but they all walked off together as though nothing had happened. They had been catching on wagons and that is how they lost poor little Yosep. Catching on wagons is a very dangerons sport. I hope none of my dear ones do such things.

Mingle in happy union in the exquisite perfumes we carry. Scents are as difficult to blend into harmony as sounds. It takes almost as high an order of ability to make true perfumes as is required to write good music.

No wonder so much of the perfume offered is rank, flat and unsatisfactory. If not wholly pleased with the odors you are now using, we would like to have you try some of the delightful ones we handle. Cost no more than poorer kinds.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

The house committee on commerce has decided to favorably report the Nelson bill creating a department of commerce.

The house, by a party vote, tabled the resolution requesting information as to salary or other compensation paid to General Leonard Wood during the occupation of Cuba.

Representative Richardson of Tennessee, the Democratic floor leader, has introduced the bill reviving the trust bill which passed the house in the Fifty-sixth congress and failed in the senate.

Senator Nelson's bill providing that the postmaster general may extend the free delivery to cities of 5,000 inhabitants or $5,000 gross income, instead of 10,000 inhabitants, as at present, has been passed by the senate.

The house committee on military affairs has voted to table the resolutions of inquiry addressed to the war department relative to expenditures in Cuba. The action was on party lines and the Democrats gave notice of filing minority reports.

An administration bill for the establishment of a postal currency has been drafted by the committee appointed to consider the question. It authorizes the postmaster general to cause to be issued postal checks of fixed denominations, not above $1, in even multiples of 5 and 10 cents.

The senate has passed the Lodge Philippine government bill by a vote of 48 to 30. Three Republicans, Messrs. Hoar of Massachusetts, Mason of Illinois and Wellington of Maryland, voted against the measure, and one Democrat, Mr. McLaurin of South Carolina, voted for it. All amendments offered by the minority were rejected. The debate on the measure had been in progress seven weeks and two days.

A dispatch from La Paz, Bolivia, says that two villages have been destroyed and 75 persons killed by the eruption of a volcano in the territory of Choico. The serious eruption of the volcano continues.

In accordance with King Edward's message to the house of commons the government leader, A. J. Balfour, asked for a vote of £50,000 to Lord Kitchener and it was granted. As a remarkable coincidence parliament, on June 5, three years ago, voted its thanks and £30,000 to the same general for his services in Egypt.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Secretary Moody is planning an elaborate series of naval maneuvers to be held next winter.

Two important changes in the diplomatic representation in Washington have been announced. Michael Herbert succeeds the late Lord Pauncefote as British ambassador, and Senor de Ojeda succeeds the Duke do Arcos as Spanish minister.

The court of inquiry which investigated the case of the naval officers arrested for disorderly conduct at Venice recommended that several of the men be courtmartialed. The navy department has disapproved the findings on the ground that the evidence is not sufficient.

At a recent conference between the president and a number of Republican leaders of the house and senate it was decided that it would be inexpedient at this late day in the session to enter upon such an important field as a revision of the tariff schedules. At the same time it is stated there was no determination that the Dingley schedules would stand indefinitely, but rather to await the first session of the next congress before considering how far new conditions warranted a revision.

As a reward for his services in South Africa Lord Kitchener has been created a viscount. King Edward also sent a message to the house of commons recommending that Kitchener be granted £50,000.

General Louis Botha, the Boer commandant general, has written an open letter to the burghers, thanking them for their obedience in the past and exhorting them to be equally loyal in their obedience to the new government.

The departure of the Boer commanders from Vereeniging, for their various districts, was marked by remarkable scenes of fraternization. The late opponents joined in such songs as "Hard Times Come Again No More," and "Old Folks at Home," the British soldiers and the burghers outvieing one another in their demonstrations of joy.

The Birmingham Post, the organ of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, says that owing to his advanced age and infirmities the British government has waived its claim for the acknowledgment by Mr. Kruger of British sovereignty over the Transvaal and has guaranteed to all the Boer delegates in Europe a safe conduct to their homes in South Africa.

An official statement issued by the war office shows that the total reduction of the British forces in South Africa, up to May 30 of the present year, was 97,477. Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed, and delivered by Levi Brouyette, and Mary Brouyette, his wife mortgagors, to May Buse mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 4th day of June, 1900, was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota on the 31st day of July, 1900, at 8:10 o'clock p. m., in Book 20 of mortgages on page 226 and is now recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, in Book 20 of mortgages, on page 226.

Which said mortgage, together with the debts secured thereby, including taxes paid by the mortgagee, was duly assigned by May Bese, to M. O. O. Sortedahl, to Ernest Buse, by a written assignment dated March 3rd, 1902, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota on April 10th, 1902, 3:30 o'clock p. m., in Book "S" of Mortgages, on page 2 2 to-wit:

Lots one (1), two (2), three (3), four (4) and five (5) in blk three (3) of Railroad addition to Red Lake Falls; according to the official plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the said county of Red Lake and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one hundred and ninety-five dollars with interest thereon at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, payable annually, on the 4th day of June in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note and interest coupon notes thereto attached, by failure to pay the annual interest falling due on the 4th day of June 1901 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said realestate for the years 1897, 1898, 1899 and 1900, and whereas the said assignee of the mortgagee, by virtue of the power contained the said mortgage, paid to the County Treasurer of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, the following taxes, duly levied and assessed by the said county against the land described in the said mortgage, and were due and delinquent at the dates when said payments were made, to wit: On July 31st, 1900, paid $9.40 taxes for the years of 1897, 1898 and 1899; on April 10th, 1902, paid $3.86 taxes for the year 1900, in all the sum of $13.35 and with interest amounting to $15.41.

And whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions, that in case of failure to pay any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said realestate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable; and whereas said mortgage also provides that if such taxes are not so paid the holder of said mortgage may elect to pay the same and be entitled to interest on the sum at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum and said mortgage stand as security for the amount so paid, with interest.

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness, and interest thereon and to the date thereof and for said amount paid for taxes and interest thereon the sum of two hundred and forty 33-100 dollars.

And whereas, because of said defaults, and of each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute, in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the front door of the Court House in Red Lake Falls, in said County, on Saturday the 19th day of July 1902 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the Attorney's fees of $35.00, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

Read It In His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, "I feel as though born anew", and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will hear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Seven Years in Bed.

"Will wonders ever cease?" inquired the friends of Mrs. L. Pease, of Lawrence, Kan. They knew she had been unable to leave her bed in seven years on account of kidney and liver trouble, nervous prostration and general debility; but, "Three bottles of Electric Bitters enabled me to walk," she writes, "and in three months I felt like a new person." Women suffering from Headache, Backache, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Fainting and Dizzy Spells will find it a priceless blessing. Try it. Satisfaction is guaranteed. W. A. Schreiter. Spring Fever.

Spring fever is another name for biliousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels makes a poisoned system. If neglected, serious illness may follow such systems. DeWitt's Little Early Risers remove all danger by stimulating the liver, opening the bowels and cleansing the system of impurities. Safe pills. Never grips. "I have taken DeWitt's Little Early Risers for torpid liver every spring for years," writes R. M. Everly, Moundsville, W. Va. "They do me more good than anything I have ever tried." W. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

HANDSOME NEW TRAIN GOES ON

Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Railroad's Magnificently Equipped Boston Limited Arrives Sunday For First Time.

From Duluth Evening Herald.

Sunday morning the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road will run into Duluth for the first time on its Boston limited schedule one of the most handsomely equipped trains in the country. It will be brand new and of the latest and most luxuriant style and accommodation from the engine to the observation platform of the rear sleeper. The sleepers have been built especially for this train and for the railroad, which will bid good-bye forever to the Pullman service it has been having for years.

The same equipment will be run on each night train, so that passengers over the 'Straight-Away-Line" will always be assured of the best that is to be had.

The train is electric lighted and steam heated throughout. The incandescent current for the lights will be furnished from a direct-connected generator in the baggage car, and the locomotive will supply the steam for all purposes. In architecture the cars are all of the most modern type, with oblong stained and leaded glass windows for ornamental purposes, and very large square windows in the body of the cars. The equipment consists of two first-class sleepers of the most modern and richly appointed type, a first-class coach finished in almost as costly a style as the sleepers, a second class coach and a baggage coach, all painted in the standard South Shore vermillion, lettered in gold, and of uniform style from front to back.

All the cars making up the train are equipped with the Gould wide vestibules and couplers, and Allen paper steel tired wheels, which are the acme of modern car-building art.

One great beauty of the new sleepers is that they are four inches higher than the standard sleeper, which allows two inches more head room for both upper and lower berths. People who have often cracked their heads in getting into their berths will appreciate this. The sleepers which were made by the Barney & Smith Co., Dayton, Ohio, are equipped with standard steel platforms and the Barney & Smith anti telescoping device, which make the frame work practically indestructible in case of accident.

The interior architecture is of the Empire period, but instead of brass, which was originally employed with it, the builders have used marquetry or inlaid wood for ornamenting the woodwork. The main room, corridors and toilet rooms are done in St. Jago mahogany, and the state room in prime vera or white mahogany. The seats are made with curved ends, an innovation in sleeping car building. The windows are half elliptical in form, with tapering arches beautifully inlaid with marquetry and supported by corbels. The glass is rich cathedral, heavily leaded. In order not to detract from the window ornamentation, ceiling decorations have been omitted and a soft green has been substituted. Wilton carpets, frieze plush window shades, and draperies of a delicate green harmonize with and complement the shade of the rich St. Jago mahogany. Each berth and seat are fitted with a reading electric light, and the builders claim the cars are the acme of the modern car-building art.

The day coach is of course lighted with electricity, something almost unknown on trains that do not charge excess fare. It is finished in Mexican mahogany. The seats are of the high back type, upholstered in the richest plush obtainable. It has toilet rooms in each end fitted up as finely as if it were a Pullman car.

The second-class coach carries out the same general style of interior finish as the first-class car, except that it is finished in quarter-sawed oak instead of mahogany. The seats are upholstered in rattan. It is lighted with electricity, and toilet rooms are provided at each end. The day coaches were made by the American Car and Foundry company, of Jeffersonville, Ind.

RED LAKE CO. SUMMER SCHOOL.

Will Open at Red Lake Falls, Minn., on Monday July 14.

To Teachers of Red Lake and adjoining counties.

The Red Lake County Summer School will begin its session on Monday, July 14, at 9 a. m. at the High School building in Red Lake Falls, and continue four weeks, with the following corps of instructors: Supt. P. L. Kuntz, of Owatonna, Minn., conductor and instructor in the higher branches and mathematics; Pres. J. C. Satre, of the Crookston Business College, instructor in the common branches and mathematics; Miss Lydia E. B. Fletcher, of Red Lake Falls, model school and instructor in English Literature; Frank Jeffers, County Superintendent Red Lake county, who will look after special lines of work. This being the third year for Conductor Kuntz, he will be able to do more for the teachers who attend and better adapt the work to their needs than at any prior session. We especially invite teachers from adjoining counties to spend these four weeks in Red Lake Falls and thus secure the benefits from attendance upon a first class school. Each of the faculty is especially adapted to the work in his particular line and will be in a position to do the most possible for those who attend.

It will be the aim of the school to so arrange the work and manage the session, that a general line of culture will result, and not only a specific kind of technical answers to special questions formulated by an expert. The session is expected to furnish ample provision for graded school teachers, as well as for those in the rural schools, and it is to be hoped that such teachers as are seeking for a more general culture and a higher appreciation of the profession will lend us their presence and participate in its benefits.

We shall endeavor to give a line of work in music if the teachers desire it, and classes in Algebra, Geometry, Science, etc., will be formed. The primary object of the course will be to get the most good from the session, and give as general an opportunity to take particular work as will seem to be justified. It will be the purpose to do well what is undertaken—look to quality rather than quantity.

Be present the first day and assist in organization of the school. There will be an afternoon session the first day in order to give all an opportunity to register and thus enable them to secure a certificate of perfect attendance. An evening lecture and such other additional lines of work as the school will justify will be made a part of the program. The last two days of the session will be given to the writing of the State Teachers' Examination and the review work of the school will be found especially beneficial to those who are intending to write this examination.

It is the desire of the County Superintendent that all third grade teachers attend and prepare to raise their standing, as the year of limitation has expired in a number of instances. We also wish that all teachers take an active interest in making this the largest and best summer school ever held in this section of the state.

Respectfully,
Frank Jeffers,
County Superintendent.

GLORIOUS FOURTH

RED LAKE FALLS IS PREPARING FOR A GRAND CELEBRATION.

SUFFICIENT MONEY AND ENTHUSIASM ON TAP TO INSURE A GALA DAY.

The meeting to further the Fourth of July celebration Friday night, was largely attended. Dr. N. N. Watson was chosen chairman and W. A. McIntyre, secretary.

Committees were appointed as follows:

Committee on parade—W. A. Schreiter, Ed. Garceau, A. L. Reichert, Jos. Hayton, Jos. Pouliot, and Theo. LaBissoniere.

Committee on sports—Ed Townsend, S. E. Hunt, Thos. Germo, Ed. L. Healy.

Committee on arrangements—W. A. McIntyre, Dr Watson, J. M. Bray, R. E. Wyer, J. B. Armstrong.

Committee on advertising—J. E. King, P. A. Kaufer, H. N. Johnson.

Committee on dance—Harry Hesly, A. W. Kruger, Geo. Hennings.

Committee on decorations—V. M. Higinbotham, Drs. J. E. Argue and F. F. Fletcher.

President of the day—Dr. N. M. Watson.

Marshal of the day—Ernest Buse.

The finance committee, appointed at a former meeting, is composed of Dr. N. M. Watson, W. A. McIntyre, R. E. Wyer. Their report showed something like $350 already subscribed towards defraying the expenses, and as much more in sight on demand. This insures the best celebration ever attempted here. Our citizens generally are taking a lively interest in the matter and arrangements have progressed so far that we can promise the people of Red Lake county that if they want to hear the eagle scream in right patriotic, soul stirring, invigorating style, they should come to Red Lake Falls on Independence day, which in this year of grace falls on Friday, two weeks from tomorrow.

The list of amusements will include all the popular sports, and liberal purses are being prepared so that there will be an inducement to participate. There will be music by the Senior and Junior bands, a game of baseball in the afternoon between Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls. The game will be finished in time to allow the two nines to take the afternoon train for Thief River Falls where a game will be played after five o'clock.

Later—The ball game will be with East Grand Forks.

Kind Words for Campbell Bros'. Shows.

Campbell Bros. had their "opening day" last Saturday and entertained the biggest crowd that ever congregated under canvas at Fairbury and gave them the best show that ever exhibited here in every respect. Their course through the country will be followed with interest by their many friends here, and next November when the band plays "The Campbells are Coming" and give the whole outfit, baby elephant and all a hearty welcome home. Their train of twenty cars presents a fine appearance going through the country and is a big advertisement for Fairbury. The Campbell Brothers desire through the Times, to extend their sincere thanks to their friends at Fairbury for the generous "send-off" they gave the circus in opening the season of 1902 and hope to greet them all again when the season closes.—Times, Fairbury, Neb., Saturday May 10, 1902.

At Red Lake Falls on June 25. Only big show coming this year.

Advertised Letters.

The following letters remain unclaimed in the postoffice at Red Lake Falls for the week ending June 14th, 1902:

If not called for in two weeks these letters will be sent to dead letter office as prescribed by law. In calling for the above please say "advertised."
